Agathos Daimon (Ancient Greek: ἀγαθός δαίμων, agathós daímōn, lit. 'noble spirit')[a] originally was a lesser deity (daemon) of classical ancient Greek religion and Graeco-Egyptian religion. In his original Greek form, he served as a household god, to whom, along with Zeus Soter, libations were made after a meal. In later Ptolemaic antiquity he took on two partially distinct roles; one as the Agathos Daimon a prominent serpentine civic god, who served as the special protector of Alexandria. The other as a genus of serpentine household gods, the Agathoi Daimones, individual protectors of the homes in which they were worshipped.[1]

Early history

Agathos Daimon was attested in domestic context in Greece as early as the fifth century BC, and yet he was typically not represented there in the form of a snake, as opposed to in Alexandria, where he was abundantly so represented.[2]

"His origin in Alexandria is a matter of dispute, with two conflicting views either painting Agathos Daimon as a Greek cultural importation later identified with Serapis and with Egyptian gods Šai (Shai), Knephis (Kneph), Khnum, Soknopis,[3] or as a Hellenized native Egyptian household god.[4] Quaegebeur points out the near absence of Greek sources of the Ptolemaic age for the cult of Agathos Daimon, contrasted with the abundance of Egyptian attestations of the god Šai in this age and the poignant evidence of the Oracle of the Potter ..."[5]

The Oracle of the Potter, an Egyptian nationalistic text, predicted the coming doom of Alexandria, with the local gods Knephis (also often represented as a serpent) and Agathos Daimon leaving the city for Memphis, and the defeat of the Macedonian invaders, and their 'age of chaos'.

Greek classical period

Though he is noted in Greek mythology (Pausanias conjectured that the name was merely an epithet of Zeus),[6] it was customary to drink or pour out a few drops of unmixed wine to honor the Agathos Daimon after a meal.[7][8] In Aristophanes' Peace, when War has trapped Peace (Εἰρήνη Eirene) in a deep pit, Hermes comes to give aid: "Now, oh Greeks! is the moment when, freed of quarrels and fighting, we should rescue sweet Eirene and draw her out of this pit... This is the moment to drain a cup in honor of the Agathos Daimon." A temple dedicated to them was situated on the road from Megalopolis to Maenalus in Arcadia.[9]

Agathos Daimon was the spouse or companion of Tyche Agathe (Τύχη Ἀγαθή, "Good Fortune"). "Tyche we know at Lebadeia as the wife of the Agathos Daimon, the Good or Rich Spirit".[10][11] Their numinous presence could be represented in art as a serpent or more concretely as a young man bearing a cornucopia and a bowl in one hand, and a poppy and an ear of grain in the other.[10]

Agathos Daimon was also identified with Zeus Meilichios, as well as with Serapis.[12]

In Egypt, a similar deity was Shai, who was known as the god of fate. His worship went back as far as the time of Akhenaten in the New Kingdom.

Egyptian late antiquity

Coin of Antoninus Pius, 160 AD from Alexandria, Egypt. On the reverse to the left, a serpent portrayal of Agathodaemon; to the right, a portrayals of an Uraeus serpent. In the syncretic atmosphere of late Antiquity, agathodaemons could be bound up with Egyptian bringers of security and good fortune: a gem carved with magic emblems bears the images of Serapis with crocodile, sun-lion and Osiris mummy surrounded by the lion-headed snake Chnum–Agathodaemon–Aion, with Harpocrates on the reverse.[13]

Eudaemon (mythology)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For the ancient Arabian city, see Eudaemon. For other uses, see Eudaemon (disambiguation).

Winged daemon depicted in ancient Corinthian plate.

The eudaemon, eudaimon, or eudemon (Ancient Greek: εὐδαίμων) in Greek mythology was a type of daemon or genius (deity), which in turn was a kind of spirit.[1] A eudaemon was regarded as a good spirit or angel, and the evil cacodaemon was its opposing spirit.[2]

Etymology

The word eudaimon in Greek means having a good attendant spirit, and consequently being happy. It is composed of the words εὖ eu, which means "well" or "good" and δαίμων daimon, which means "divinity, spirit, divine power, fate, or god." [2][3][4] Sometimes eudaimon is taken to mean literally "good spirit". [2] Also daimon is the Greek derivative for the term demon, in which case "demon" means "replete with knowledge". [4][5]

Moreover, Eudaimon is as well an ancient proper noun, in particular it was the Greek name of a priest of Zeus and father of P. Aelius Aristides, a notorious rhetorician of the second century AD. [6]

Characteristics

Eudaemons in Greek mythology included deified heroes. They were regarded intermediary spirits between gods and the men. Eudaemons, the good daemons, were understood as guardian spirits, bestowing protection and guidance to ones they watched over.[4][5]

As a counselor, the eudaemon whispered advice and opinions in one's ear. Such person escorted by the eudaemon was considered fortunate. It was said that Socrates during his lifetime had a daemon that always warned him of threats and bad judgment, but never directed his actions. According to Socrates, his daemon was more accurate than the respected forms of divination at that time, such as either reading the entrails or watching the flights of birds.[4][5]

Fresco from shrine at a house in Pompeii showing an offering to Agathos, a benevolent daemon, which appears in form of serpent about the altar in a garden, 1st century A.D. A worshiped good daemon was Agathodaemon in whose honor the first libation to the god Dionysus was dedicated.[7]

Other definitions

The philosopher Aristotle believed that a happy person is one who is eudaemon, but still in a literal manner one possessing a good or fortunate daemon. Heraclitus believed that a person's character is his guardian daemon.[7]

Once in a while the good daemon may also stand for the souls of the deceased. For example, the heroine Alcestis in 438 BCE Athenian tragedy by the Greek Euripides, is reported as a "blessed daemon" subsequent to her death.[7]

According to psychologist Carl Jung there is not eudaemon or else cacodaemon but only the daemon, which is a unique independent spirit neither good nor bad, living in everyone.[5]

In mystical approaches eudaemon is sometimes defined as a symbol of "higher self", or the individual in the "causal body." As well it is a symbol of intelligence on the "buddhic plane" and higher esoteric planes, which assists evolution and is related to the higher thoughts and emotions.[5] person's face is not visible, and the focus is on the crucifix and the person's body. The lighting in the image is soft, with a warm tone, and the person's posture suggests a moment of prayer or contemplation. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the subject and the religious iconography.

[32 / 11]The image is a photograph featuring a person in a kneeling position in front of a large, ornate crucifix. The person appears to be nude, with long, dark hair. The crucifix is a prominent feature, with a central figure that resembles Jesus Christ, surrounded by smaller figures that could be angels or saints. The crucifix is mounted on a wall with a white background, and there is a chain hanging from the top of the crucifix. The

The sky is blue with clouds, and the overall color palette is warm, with the use of earth tones. The painting style is realistic with attention to detail, and it is executed in the Renaissance style, which is characterized by its attention to the human form and the depiction of religious themes.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, specifically a letter or email, with a header that reads "From:" followed by a series of text that includes a subject line, a date, and a sender's name. The text is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-English script, with the date "August 23, 2019" and the sender's name "Michael Moore" clearly visible.

The main body of the text is in English, and it appears to be a response to a request for information from a person named "Subject R.E. Interview Of Perpetrated Epsion Victim" who has requested to be contacted by a "FBI Agent." The text is written in a formal tone, with the sender indicating that they have more to tell the recipient, and they have provided a phone number for the recipient to reach them.

The document is formatted with a header and footer, and the footer includes a web address and a phone number. The text is in a standard font, and the document is in a portrait orientation. The overall style of the document suggests it is a formal communication, possibly related to a legal or investigative matter.

The image is a meme featuring a series of text captions superimposed on a photograph of a traffic scene. The scene shows a busy highway with multiple police cars and a white van in the foreground. The text captions are arranged in a grid-like pattern, with each caption placed above the corresponding vehicle. The captions are as follows:

- "Society Pressure"
- "Hegelian Dialectic"
- "Stockholm Syndrome"
- "Braintwashing"
- "Logical Fallacies"
- "Cognitive Dissonance"
- "Indoctrination"
- "Propaganda"
- "Me"

The vehicles in the image are police cars and a white van, and the background shows the road and sky. The style of the image is humorous and satirical, as it humorously juxtaposes the seriousness of the police cars with the casual demeanor of the white van. The meme seems to be a commentary on the role of police in society and the potential for cognitive dissonance in individuals.

When people start doing crime their psychology changes to that of psychopathy dark triad Machiavellian and narcissism. The most human parts of their brain such as amygdalas which have to do with emotion and memory start to go dark. We see this on mri. Their prefrontal cortex also decreases activity. Presumably because no long term thinking implies suicidal and homicidal behavior. Crime of opportunity types.

Their brains become rewired to specialize in carnality. Its like they revert to lizard brain as david icke seems to say. Medula oblongata. As time goes on they get worse and engage in increasingly heinous and bizarre behavior.

smaller figures that could be angels or saints. The crucifix is mounted on a wall with a white background, and there is a chain hanging from the top of the crucifix. The person's face is not visible, and the focus is on the crucifix and the person's body. The lighting in the image is soft, with a warm tone, and the person's posture suggests a moment of prayer or contemplation. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the subject and the religious iconography.

Right now, whenever Trump hesitates to do something for Israel, more of the Epstein files get leaked, then Trump makes a move.

The image is a digital graphic with a white background. It features three books arranged in a horizontal row, each with a distinct title and cover design. The books are titled "Secrets of Western Tantra," "Modern Sex Magick," and "Ecstasy Through Tantra." The cover art for each book is a stylized illustration with a warm color palette, featuring a figure in a dynamic pose, possibly a dance or a sexual act. The text on the books is in a serif font, and the titles are larger and bolder than the book's subtitle. The author's name, "DONALD MICHAEL WRAD," is visible on the cover of the first book. The style of the image is reminiscent of a book cover design, with a focus on the titles and the artwork.

The image is a digital illustration of a character that resembles a frog with a human-like face. The character has a green body with a white belly and a brown mouth. It has large, round eyes with black pupils, and its eyebrows are drawn in a way that suggests a frown. The character's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a surprised or concerned expression. The character is wearing a blue shirt with a white collar. The background of the image is a dark, indistinct color, which makes the character the focal point of the image. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is cartoon-like, with a simple, clean line drawing that is characteristic of digital art.

The background of the painting features a landscape with a river, a castle, and trees. The sky is blue with clouds, and the overall color palette is warm, with the use of earth tones. The painting style is realistic with attention to detail, and it is executed in the Renaissance style, which is characterized by its attention to the human form and the depiction of religious themes.

I'm going to kill myself tomorrow, /x/. I'm also sending 3 packets of copied information to the media, one to CNN, one to MSNBC, and one to Fox News. You all will have to see which one tells the truth about the information they receive and who doesn't. I trust 4chan to do this because of our history of releasing legit info in the face of mass media coverup.

I have been a professional driver/security guard for a circle of very wealthy people for almost 8 years. I started by working the door at a private gentlemen's club outside of the DC area. From that job I was introduced to some employment managers for Jeffery Epstein. Because I had experience as both a cab driver and a bouncer, as well as always overlooking and keeping my mouth shut about the drugs and prostitution my employers at the club profited from they thought I'd be a good fit to work the weekends for Mr. Epstein. At first, I didn't do very much, definitely nothing important. I would run errands mostly, and do anything my manager (who reported directly to Mr. Epstein) wanted me to do. So say the gardener calls out sick one day, it would be me mowing the lawn in his place. I was sort of a floating general helper. Inevitably I ran into Mr. Epstein now and then, and he was always very personable, enthusiastic. I had heard about his original court case and the rumours and everything, but just meeting this guy made me feel like it was all a lie because he seemed so kind, and genuine. I thought he really was just this hot shot money man, like a Bruce Wayne or Tony Stark kind of figure. And I think, ultimately, that's how he wanted us all to see him. His god complex was, to say the least, very developed.

They will keep getting away with it forever. If not within a continuation of the Epstein circle, some other group that hasn't come to light yet.

How do you see this playing out? 4chan ends pedophilia through weaponized autism?

Eventually I was trusted with bigger jobs. I think I got a good reputation because I cleaned one of Mr. Epstein's bedrooms one day. There was, to my dismay, a mixture of shit and cum on the bedsheets. I dealt with it professionally, and I didn't say anything. I knew by then that someone is always watching. There are cameras in almost every single room save Mr. Epstein's private office and regular bedroom (he had several bedrooms but one was his "favorite" I guess. His main room). I never mentioned it to anyone, but I still got a thank you from my manager for being discreet. One day, I was asked to go pick up a masseuse. From a bus station. I didn't ask her her age, I knew better, but she couldn't have been older than 16. I got a really bad feeling in my stomach because at this point denying Mr. Epstein's tastes would be borderline irrational. I did my job, though. I took her to his house and a few hours later I took her back to the bus stop. She was crying, and I didn't talk to her about it. A few weeks later, I did it again. Now my manager tells me that Mr. Epstein would like me to take over all of his various pick ups and drop offs. They called it "Cutie duty" (fucking barf). But it was more than just girls, I would pick up drugs and other assorted packages, most of which I had no idea the contents but as far as I was concerned, the less I knew the better. I was getting paid VERY well for the amount of work I was doing. In a given day I spend 3, maybe 4 hours doing anything that could be considered work, the rest of the time I either sat in my car browsing 4chan on my phone or inside pretending like I was rich and this was my house. For this I was being paid 75k/year, more than I'd ever even hoped to have made in my whole life. When I took over doing most of the driving it went up to 115. Every time my job became more illegal, the money would get better. That's his tactic. He knows that people will do just about anything, for the right price.

I just want people to know I guess, call it a public confession because I'm guilty. I guess I don't care that much because I'm gonna be dead. I've done things I can't forgive myself for, and I think they'll have me killed anyway. I'm going to do it on my terms.

Anyway, Mr. Epstein is very shrewd. He pays you a lot, but not enough for the shit you have to do. And he tries to find the absolute least amount he can pay to keep you doing it. For me, disgracefully, that was around 150k. I stayed on "cutie duty" for about 4 months, then Mr. Epstein took a trip abroad and he loaned me out to another family, the Romney's. Now, keep in mind, I never met Mitch Romney and I don't think I even worked for him, I just worked for the family. I reported to an employment manager as usual. I was tasked with driving a young man, named Cole around wherever he wanted. Cole was probably 22 and already his license had been suspended for drunk driving. He lived in a huge house out in the middle of nowhere outside Bolder, Colorado. Man, it was beautiful. If I could have stayed there forever I would have. I suspect it was a vacation "cabin" (mansion) owned by his parents, but I digress. Every weekend we would drive into the city, he would get shitfaced drunk, find a woman or prostitute and I'd take us all back home. Cole was a piece of total piece of shit. If you remember "scumbag steve" just imagine is Steve's parents were multi millionaires if not billionaires and you get the idea.

So one Sunday morning, after a typical Saturday night I report for duty 8 am sharp knowing damn well that Cole isn't going to drag his ass out of bed until at least 3 pm. Here he comes hobbling down the driveway in his socks to my car. He usually texts when he's up and I come inside and start cleaning up his messes. No text today. He comes over to the car as I'm stepping out. He says, "Uhh, hey buddy? We kinda got a problem but, it's not that big of a deal". Ok, what? Let's see it. We go inside, upstairs to his bedroom. His girl from last night is laying face up, and her open mouth is pooled with vomit. She is most definitely dead. Far as I can tell she overdosed on whatever combination of prescription drugs they were doing, passed out, puked, then suffocated on her own vomit. I'm absolutely flipping my shit, and I've got my phone out dialing 911. Cole slaps it out of my hand and says tells me to hold on. He says he can't get in trouble because it will look bad on his family. I said, Cole, you've already been getting into trouble. He says he knows, just not this kind of trouble. He says I'll get a big bonus if I just deal with it myself. Now, I'm way out here in the middle of nowhere and the implication from day one of my employment in this circle has been that if I mess up I might suffer harsh consequences. I know what I did here was wrong. I know that, and I am so sorry.

After a few minutes (I'm waiting in the hallway, he's casually pacing around the corpse) he gives me gps coordinates (39.982602, -105.615416) for a little spot off 111 out in the mountains. He's got an f-150 at the property used for landscaping work, I put her body in the bed with a tarp on top and then I fill the rest of the back with landscaping supplies. Fertilizer, tools etc. I tried to make it look really natural and boring. I'm shitting bricks, I can't believe I'm actually doing this. But he's promising me that if I get busted I'll have the best lawyers money can buy, and I believe him. She's dead already anyway and it's unlikely he would even get into any real legal trouble, just bad press. So what's the difference? The whole time driving I'm just sweating right through my clothes. I have to stop twice to puke. When I get there there's a little dirt spot you can pull off into and sure enough they're a big black SUV and a jeep with offroad tires. I'm not about to just *assume* these are the body people so I stop and get out and approach the SUV. The window rolls down and there's a woman who's probably in her 50's and a big guy driving. I don't know what to say so I'm just kinda like "uhhhh, how's it going?" feeling like a complete fucking idiot. She makes a call and describes me to the person on the phone, then she puts it down and says "We're who you're looking for, is it under all that stuff in the bed?" I say yeah, do you need help? She says no, take a break. So I walk into the trees a little bit and smoke a cigarette or two. They've got her out and put her in the jeep within about 5 minutes. The woman tells me to drive wait 15 minutes before I leave, then they pull out and drive away, the jeep drives further into the woods. I wait maybe 7 minutes and I leave. I got a text later telling me not to ever leave early again. It was from a blocked number.

I never met Ms. Rhianna in person, just in passing now and then, but I found this job to agree with me a lot better than the others. I drove a van stacked with promotional gear from city to city while she toured. A few times I was sent to pick up molly and was taught to use test strips to test for purity. If it was not pure I was supposed to walk away, but it was always pure. There are circles within circles of connections. I believe there is an entire shadow economy strictly for the rich and famous to get their rocks off collectively. One thing I did learn about Rhianna is that she enjoys young females as well. I was sent to pick up two young girls and bring them to her hotel room. Of course I was met outside the door by someone more important than me. This struck me as odd because as far as I understand, Rhianna is not a billionaire like Epstein, but she was even more insulated and protected than he was. I'm sure a lot of that has to do with just personal choices regarding security, but I get the picture that in this world, influence and money both equal power and Rhianna especially in 2011/2012 was HIGHLY influential. All I had to do was mention her name and girls would get in the car. Just like that.

So the most noteworthy thing that happened while working for Def Jam is when Rhianna had a party to celebrate the end of her tour. Everybody was there, I mean all of the pop stars were there. Jonas Brothers, Lady Gaga, Justin Bieber, and even a few old heads like Elton John and some actors, I noticed John Travolta for sure, Seth Rogan, Emma Stone, Bradley Cooper, to name a few. For this party I was, of course, tasked with getting entertainment. They wanted "as young as I could get" and "as many as I could get". Ostensibly they were being hired to be wait staff, valet drivers etc, but the plan is to switch it up on them when they actually get there, give them drugs, money, whatever they need to do what they wanted them to do, which was essentially to be all expenses paid prostitutes for whoever wanted them. That part, thankfully, was not my job. I'm just the piece of shit who tricked them into going. I picked up 5 young girls from a mall, a couple of teenage boys I found walking along the road, and then I got a hold of an escort company to fill it out and make an even dozen. The ones from the escort company were not underage and I was severely chastised for it. My manager basically asked if I ever wanted to work again. I said yes. He said then act like you've got some goddamned sense. I didn't make this mistake again. After the tour ended I was just on my own for a month or so, I rented a house near Tulsa and basically isolated the entire time. I was starting to get ideas in my head about going to trade school or something when I was called back to come work for Mr. Epstein again.

At this point, I've developed a bad coke habit, of which I have only been sober a few months to this day. I needed something to make me do it. Coke makes you feel numb in a way not much else does, and believe me, I've tried just about everything. There are research chemicals no one has even heard of that get traded around in these circles. When I came back to work for Mr. Epstein on his island I was going through an 8 ball every day or two. I binge drank at night but I had to keep focused during the day. The coke wired me up and the liquor brought me back down. That's the only way, mentally, I could really cope with what's happening.

I was flown to his now infamous island to be one of the regular staff. Essentially I lived on this island for free, while getting paid, to maintain the grounds and keep the buildings up. When Mr. Epstein was there, obviously he would bring his own entertainment so I didn't even have to do that. I thought, this sounds like a fucking fantastic deal. Island paradise? Great wages? Not much real work? Count me in. Out of all of my sins, I believe sloth is the most damaging one I indulge in. I always look for the easy dollar, and that's why I am prey for people like this.

Now, first of all, this island is like paradise on earth. It's always a comfortable temperature. The rains are breathtakingly beautiful and the architecture and decor of the houses are exquisite. Yes, the bath house is really creepy. The fake doors are there to confuse fly by surveillance, if anyone was wondering. The other regular staff were...hard to get along with. They were all creeps and I mean capital C fucking creeps. Made me wonder about myself, honestly, that I'm put here with them. They all joked about getting Mr. Epstein's "leftovers" and the talk was constantly about when Mr.

Epstein was going to visit the island again. When he would bring important people - world leaders, CEO's etc, I and most of the staff were kept totally out of site. We weren't allowed to work in an area unless we knew it was empty. Only his most trusted employees could actually be in the building with him and high powered friends. Sometimes though, it would just be the family and things were more relaxed. I passed by his office once, carrying some garbage, when he beckoned me inside. He asked me my name and I told him. He offered me a seat, I took it. You don't get far in this business saying no. He began to talk to me, he looked really stressed. He asked me how anything that feels good could be bad. He had a big painting of Oscar Wilde and considered him a personal hero. He began to explain hedonism to me, and asked me if I understood. Of course, I said. Who doesn't like fun? Lots of people. He said, lots of people. Then he let me go about my duties.

I fucked up really bad one evening and entered one of the maintenance sheds to return some tools I'd been using, and saw the sweaty, pale back of a large man, hunched over and thrusting. He had a tattoo of Nixon on his back, and he was wearing a bull's head mask. He was fucking one of the regular staff member's mouth. He turns to me, I'm just standing in shock, and says quite angrily, "DO YOU MIND?" and I slam the door shut. As I'm closing the door I get a glimpse of my coworker's face and he is crying. I googled nixon back tattoo later and realized that man was Roger Stone, who I'd never even heard of up to that point. I knew I was in deep shit. The next day and for two weeks after I got all the worst jobs - trash pick up, cleaning toilets, scrubbing his boats. It fucking sucked, but I kept my mouth shut anyway. As far as I understood my pay had not been cut so whatever, I'll do the shitty jobs where I'm by myself because at least, hey, I'm by myself. That was fine with me.

I'm not a good guy, but thank you. If this was the movies The Punisher or whoever would rip my spine out of my back, and I'd deserve it. I'm not a good guy.

Anyway things started getting really tense on the island from that point. People started making little comments to me about being nosy, or about minding my own business. I was started to get worried I'd be branded a "troublemaker", which you don't want to be. Things turn very quickly in this business, that's how they've kept a lid on it for so long, any small mistake and you're out. Most people are let go with NDA's and the understanding that they will be watched the rest of their lives which, ultimately, is how I got out as well. After Epstein died they cut me lose, I guess they figure since he's dead nothing I'd know would matter anyway. They're probably right, honestly. It probably won't matter anyway. But the rest of my time on that island was pure terror. I was just waiting to be taken away or worse, never happened, but I was still really scared. I saw a few of their weird "plays" they would do, around the bath house. Mr. Epstein had a little portable stage he would get set up, he would wear the bull head I saw Stone wearing and give a big speech about what he called freedom. He would say this island is the only free place in the whole world, where everyone on it can do whatever they want. Bullshit. Not your employees, not the children you bring here. Total bullshit. Everyone would cheer, they'd get up and do a sort of conga line with tiki torches, really cringy old rich people shit and go into the bath house. There is a trap door on the floor that has not been reported in any of the investigation photos that I've seen which lead to what they call "The chamber", and it is essentially a bondage dungeon. I don't know what all happened in there and I never want to know, I stayed as far away from that bath house as I could.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a person from the back. The individual has a bald head and is wearing a pair of earrings. The most striking feature is a tattoo on the person's back, which is a portrait of a man's face. The portrait is detailed and appears to be a close-up of the man's face, with a slight smile. The person's skin is textured, and the tattoo is in black ink, contrasting with the lighter skin tone. The background of the image is plain and does not provide any additional context or information. There are no texts or discernible brands visible in the image. The style of the image is straightforward and appears to be a portrait, possibly for artistic or personal reasons.

So anyway eventually I got my reputation for the most part back into good graces, and I was working in the main houses again. One time I was helping in the kitchen. I don't know if the chef was fucking with me, I hope so, but he was separating what looked to me like the torso of a very young, skinned pig. It had been roasted and he was chopping it into quarters, the ribs to be served that evening and the rest broken down for soups and casseroles. I said jokingly said that it looked like a little kid. He just gave me this awful, dead eyed looked for a second and said "watch it"

I worked on that island for about a year, in 2013-2014 Mr. Epstein chose me and two other trusted employees from the island to come with him to a winter retreat in the Swiss Alps. He owned a small (billionaire 'small' mind you) "cabin" (again, mansion) there and wanted people he knew could be trusted, because most of the staff would be local hires. Our job on the surface was to help manage all the employees, like supervisors basically, but the unspoken task would be keeping everyone either in the dark or quiet. Mr. Epstein had a real fondness for plump, young swiss blondes, and the Swiss, as he would explain, have a very "progressive" idea regarding age of consent. He viewed this as a more relaxed way to do what he does, more casual. Part of the thrill for these people, I think, is in the fact that it is illegal and they could get in big trouble. When they go to places that are more friendly with the idea of an older man having sex with 15 year olds it's to "take a break" so to speak. The alps themselves, wow. I mean, wow. I've been all over the United States and NOTHING in this country compares to Europe in terms of sheer beauty. Sometimes, early in the morning when I'd come out of my cabin and stretch, looking at the trees, smelling the crisp, clean air...just for a minute I'd forget what I have done, and what I'm doing. When it came back to me, I'd have to fight back tears. I want the mountains there to be the last thing I think about before I die.

So I've not been there three days when, while me and the two from the island are doing bumps of coke off a butter knife in the lower garage, a boy maybe 14, skinny, blonde, pale and naked comes through the doorway right towards us. He's speaking French but I think I got the gist of what he was saying, he was asking for help. He looked hysterical. Immediately my two "friends" were outta there and I shouldn't have been far behind. I told him, calm down, calm down, it's ok, I'm gonna help you. I just wanted him to feel better. This all took maybe 30 seconds before one of the "nannies" came in. He looked at her, confused, and I get the picture he was trying to decide if she could be trusted. She couldn't. She shushed him and put her jacket over him and took his hand, she was speaking French as well and it sounded like a mother consoling a frightened child. She lead him back into the house, I did not see him again. I never mentioned it to anyone, and nobody ever mentioned it to me.

During my last couple of weeks there I witnessed first hand the murder of an "independent journalist". I don't think he was actually a journalist, I think he had maybe a blog or a youtube channel, but I had never heard of him and don't know his name so I don't think he was anyone with any real connections. He was one of the local hires, a dishwasher, but he was seen with a cell phone, out, possibly recording. Me and the other two from the island were asked to go "check it out". So we go get the guy and ask him to empty out his pockets, sure enough he's got a phone. We told him to unlock it, he wouldn't. One of the other guys made a call, came back, and slugged him directly in the nose. I think he broke it because there was blood just pouring out and the guy started screaming. I don't think he'd ever been hit before but me and the other guy held him down. Fuck it I'll say their names. It was Daniel Robinson from South Florida and Marcus Harper from Nevada. Marcus and I were holding him down and Daniel punched him again and told him to unlock his phone. He complied this time, and sure enough there were pictures and videos from inside the house. We knew he hadn't sent anything out because only wired connections work there, I guess they had signal jammers or something, or maybe because it was just so remote, I don't know. Anyway, Daniel makes another call and tells us to take him outside into the woods. I think we're just gonna threaten him and make him sign an NDA, but Daniel took his belt off and strangled him to death. We had to put his body up in an outbuilding because the ground was frozen. We put him through a wood chipper and then burned everything to ash. There were bits of charred bone left over when I swept it all into a trash bag and threw it out with the regular garbage. This, above anything else, I feel the most guilty for.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, focusing on the upper part of the head and neck. The individual has long, straight hair that falls over the shoulders. The hair is a shade of brown, and the person's eyes are closed, suggesting a relaxed or contemplative state. The skin tone is light, and the person appears to be looking off to the side, possibly at something or someone outside the frame. The background is dark, which contrasts with the lighter tones of the person's face and hair, making the subject stand out. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its exaggerated facial features and dynamic lines.

After that, if I wasn't "in" before, I was definitely "in" now, me, Marcus, and Daniel. The three fucking stooges from hell. Daniel had been in the military and I think he had a few screws lose because he always had a temper. He became the go to guy for the really dirty shit. I started working for Mr. Epstein directly after this. He would confide in me sometimes, when he was very high, about how nothing really makes him feel good enough. He told me once that he hasn't felt happy in years. I wish I had had the stones to tell him that this life he is living is only bringing him down. For a brief moment, I felt empathy for this man. I think that, too, was part of his game though. I don't think he has ever had a single genuine feeling in his life outside of sexual gratitude. He never mentioned the journalist to me, it was like it never happened but we both knew that was the reason I was now working directly for him.

Listen, I think I've said about all I care to right now. I'm going to go get a bottle of something before all the stores close. If this thread is still here in a few hours, I'll answer questions and tell some more stories.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with brown hair and a brown hoodie. The character is seated in front of a laptop, which is turned on and displaying a webpage. The character's expression is one of sadness or concern, with their eyes looking downwards and their mouth slightly open. The laptop screen is illuminated, suggesting that the character is actively engaged with the content on the screen. The background is a solid light blue color, providing a calm and neutral backdrop that contrasts with the character's expression. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is cartoonish, with a simple and clean line work that gives the character a soft and approachable appearance.

Because everyone said I should have died from dropping from a large ass cliff. I still had to face the consequences of my actions which is being in pain constantly. I just remember everything going pitch black when I hit the rocks and coming to eventually. Like time itself stopped. The interesting thing is a few years later my roommate died from Lupus. It just seemed weird to me that I somehow survived and he died. I looked further into reincarnation and death on here and elsewhere on the web and just the sheer lunacy of what's been going on in the past eight years. It just seemed like world went mad after I attempted suicide. It made no sense. I am a firm believer in reincarnation via timelines from what I've seen and experienced. One of my selves died on October 31, 2012.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a character that resembles a cartoon frog. The frog is seated on a grassy hill with a view of a valley and a lake in the distance. The frog is wearing a blue sweater and has a pair of sunglasses perched on its head. In front of the frog, there is a red and white object that appears to be a fishing rod. The sky is overcast, and the landscape is covered in green grass and scattered rocks. The overall style of the image is whimsical and cartoonish, with a focus on the frog character and the natural scenery. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

I have no clue whether what you are saying is the truth or not, but regardless, no matter what you have done in your life, there is hope in Jesus Christ. A few years back, I was in a really dark place from a spiritual point of view, and I even attempted suicide on two occasions, and was also hospitalized for that reason and for depression on multiple occasions. At my lowest point, I cried out to God and prayed to Jesus, and He actually answered my prayers. Eventually, I gave my life to Jesus, and ever since then, I have felt an indescribable sense of peace at all times. I truly believe God has forgiven every single one of my sins, and He will forgive yours as well, if you pray and repent. You might feel like you don't deserve forgiveness, and trust me because I am familiar with that mindset, but in the Bible it says "ALL have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). No one deserves God's mercy, but because He loves us so much, He sent His only son to die for us, taking our place on the cross (John 3:16).

God loves you. Jesus loves you. Call out to God in Jesus name, and you will be forgiven. There is hope.

They called them "plays" and "theatre" but from my eyes yeah, I would say the speeches and stuff I saw looked a lot like rituals. The bull's head mask was scary. I mean it was a rubber mask for sure but whoever spoke would wear it all night. After they would come up out of the chamber the masked person would roam the island all night, and it was generally understood that you are to avoid them at all costs. When they wear the mask they're like animals, they just wander around from one carnal satisfaction to the next. Food, sex, sometimes violence, whatever. And they could do whatever they want. If they came to you and told you to suck their dick or whatever, you have to do it. It never happened to me thankfully, but I made sure on those nights to stay out of sight.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a character that appears to be a frog with a humanoid face. The frog is seated on a beige couch, wearing a brown robe that covers its entire body. The frog's eyes are wide open, and it has a neutral expression. In its right hand, it holds a black remote control, and its left hand is resting on its lap. The frog's body is covered in a soft, plush material, and it has a green and black color scheme.

The background of the image features a brick wall with a window that shows a red explosion, suggesting a dramatic or intense scene. The window is open, and the explosion is visible through it. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the frog character and its interaction with the surrounding environment. There are no texts present in the image.

Anon, don't kys. Media will not say a word, it's just sayings without any proof. You should go testify about this, which will produce the waves you're hoping for. From then on, there are 2 possible outcomes:

1. They will kill you - which will prove you were right, some heads might fall, will definitely make a difference AND will make you a hero/martyr, and not just a suicidal mental case

2. They will not, and your testimony will actually help the investigation and you will again be a hero.

Either way, you probably shouldn't kys. Deal with your past, but if you go down, go down in flames.

The image is a black and white comic strip featuring two panels. In the first panel, a man with a stern expression is shown from the side, looking directly at the viewer. He has short hair and is wearing glasses. His arms are crossed, and he is wearing a collared shirt. The second panel shows the same man from behind, with his arms raised and his mouth open in a surprised or shocked expression. He is wearing a suit and tie. Above his head, there is a speech bubble that says "I guess." The style of the comic strip is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on facial expressions and body language.

The image is a close-up photograph of a man's face, focusing on his upper face and neck area. The man has dark hair and is looking directly at the camera. He appears to be in the process of shaving, as he has white shaving cream on his face. The background is out of focus, but it seems to be an indoor setting with a textured wall.

There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, and it seems to be taken in a studio setting.

The image is a digital composite of a man's face superimposed over a pattern of repetitive, pixelated lines. The man appears to be wearing a suit with a tie, and his facial features are not clearly visible due to the pixelation. The background is a solid color, which contrasts with the pattern of lines that cover the entire image. The style of the image suggests it may be a digital artwork or a digital manipulation of a photograph.

The image is a digital illustration with a cartoonish style. It features a person sitting on a wooden fence, looking out over a field with trees in the background. The person is wearing a black jacket with a green logo on the left side, a beige skirt, and dark shoes. The sky is a gradient of pink and purple hues, suggesting either dawn or dusk. The person's hair is styled in a bun, and they are looking towards the right side of the image. There is a small green figure with a blue hat on the right side of the image, which appears to be a stylized representation of a person. The overall scene conveys a sense of tranquility and contemplation.

This is an enduring battle and you stepped up fully, in this life, just in time. Everyone has different challenges until we finally learn how to make the right choice and then to take it. Forgive yourself, you're on the right path.

To be able to be honest, and brutally so, with not only yourself but the intended potential whole world, about some of the darkest of activities in this world Proves you. The image is a photograph of a man who appears to be in a relaxed and cheerful mood. He is smiling and looking to his left, with his eyes closed, suggesting he might be in a moment of pleasure or relaxation. The man is wearing a light-colored shirt and a dark-colored suit jacket, which gives him a formal appearance. He is holding a glass of amber liquid in his right hand, which is partially filled, indicating that he might be drinking from it. The background is blurred, but it seems to be an indoor setting with warm lighting, possibly a bar or a restaurant. The lighting casts a soft glow on the man's face, enhancing his smile. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a casual setting.

The image is a black and white photograph of a celestial body, specifically the moon, viewed from a side angle. The moon's surface is textured with craters and valleys, and it appears to be illuminated by a light source that casts shadows on its surface. The most striking feature is the large, round, dark area in the center of the moon's face, which resembles a human eye. This eye is detailed with a small pupil and a thin, curved eyelid, giving the impression of a human face. The image is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the size of the eye and the overall shape of the moon. There are no visible texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, and it captures a unique and intriguing perspective of the moon.

The image displays a document with multiple sections, each containing text and a signature. The document appears to be a response to an email, as indicated by the presence of the sender's name and email address at the top of the page. The text is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-English script, suggesting that the document is in a language other than English.

The signature at the bottom of the page is in English and includes the name "John Doe" followed by the email address "john.doe@example.com." The email address is a common practice for correspondence, and the presence of the name and email suggests that the document is a formal response to an email.

The document is divided into several sections, each with a heading and a body of text. The headings are bolded and appear to be the main topic of the section, while the body text is in a regular font. The text is written in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-English script, indicating that the document is likely intended for a bilingual audience.

The document is formatted with a consistent layout, with the heading and body text aligned to the left, and the signature at the bottom. The overall style of the document suggests it is a formal response to an email, with a clear structure and a professional tone.

The image depicts a scene of destruction and chaos. In the foreground, there is a large, dilapidated building with a damaged facade and a large, open doorway. The ground around the building is strewn with debris, including what appears to be broken glass and debris. A few individuals can be seen in the distance, walking amidst the wreckage. In the background, there is a large, fiery explosion that has engulfed a large, dilapidated structure. The explosion is accompanied by a bright, yellow light that illuminates the scene. The sky is filled with smoke and debris, suggesting the aftermath of the explosion.

The overall color palette of the image is dominated by shades of green and yellow, which are contrasted by the dark, damaged structures and the fiery explosion. The image does not contain any discernible text. The style of the image is a digital rendering, with a focus on the destruction and the aftermath of the explosion.

Chiggity Checked

I use LLMs to accelerate what I need to do.

It's great for sanity checks, it can write good code if you only need it to do a little bit at a time - it awesome for troubleshooting.

Amazing as a learning tool. Ask it to elaborate, or ask it why, and ask it to compare, and have a conversation where you're trying to learn more, do more, and it's like a powered exoskeleton.

You can't ever let it think FOR you. And that's a trap most people fall into, I think.

It will write code for a dumb person and the code may technically work, but the person doesn't know about sleeping principles, scaling, reuse, technical debt, refuses to understand them, and then tells other people - experts i their respective fields- how easy those experts' jobs are. But they'll allow LLMs to get themselves into situations theycan't, and LLMs can't get them out of.

>You can take someone who doesn't know how to code and it will write code for them - they'll become average at best.

>an already average programmer csn become good >a good programmer can before great >and a great programmer accelerates, is super productive

But most people use LLMs for porn or try to jail break them for a screenshot.

Just like the internet. All this information, but it's used by most for porn and entertainment.

Same with libraries, homeless go there to jack off, people rent X-Files and House DVDs Porn and entertainment. The way it has always been with monkeys.

Don't trust for a second, OP, you're not keeping or flagging data, that an LLM won't call the cops first thing if it thinks you're suicidal or a threat to the government. Don't trust that or you for a a second.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a character that appears to be a mix of human and mechanical elements. The character is wearing a gas mask, which is a prominent feature, and a helmet with goggles. The gas mask is dark and appears to be made of a material that gives it a textured appearance. The helmet is also dark, with a visor that covers the character's eyes. The character is holding a sword in their right hand, which is metallic and has a sheen to it. The character's left hand is raised, holding the sword in a way that suggests readiness or readiness to use it.

The background of the image is a gradient of warm colors, transitioning from orange at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. This color scheme gives the image a dramatic and intense feel. In the background, there is a structure that resembles a crane or a tall tower, suggesting an industrial or urban setting. The character is standing in front of this structure, which is partially obscured by the character's figure.

There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the character's armor and the sword, and it has a fantasy or science fiction theme, given the character's mechanical appearance and the industrial background.

The actual thing that's funny about deep learning is that they've made OC donut steel math. It's not a high dimensional nonlinear function, it's a ~*~neural network~*~. They aren't model coefficients, they're weights. It's not regression analysis, it's ~*~learning~*~.

I can't decide if they did this because they're too dumb to understand what they're doing, or if it's because they want to defraud investors.

The image is a photograph that captures a dramatic scene at what appears to be an altitude of approximately 100,000 feet or more. The sky is dark, suggesting it is nighttime, and the sun is setting or rising, casting a warm glow over the scene. In the foreground, there is a person standing on what seems to be a platform or a raised structure, possibly a part of a spacecraft or a similar vehicle. The person is facing away from the camera, and their silhouette is visible against the bright sky.

In the background, there is a large explosion or a nuclear detonation, characterized by a bright, fiery glow that contrasts with the dark sky. The explosion is centered in the image, and its bright light is visible in the upper left quadrant. The explosion's intensity suggests a significant event, possibly a nuclear test or a similar high-altitude event.

The photograph is taken from a distance, and the focus is on the person and the explosion, with the rest of the scene being out of focus. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the dramatic action of the explosion and the contrasting colors of the sky and the explosion.

The image is a meme featuring a character from the animated television series "The Simpsons." The character is a robot with a large head, a small mouth, and a wide grin. The robot has a gray body with a white head and a black eye. It is holding a cigar in its right hand and a lighter in its left hand. The background is a simple green wall with a small window.

At the top of the image, there is a text that reads "HEY BABY" in a playful, casual font. Below this, in a larger, bold font, the text "WANNA KILL ALL HUMANS?" is written, suggesting a humorous or satirical tone. The character's expression and the text together create a humorous and ironic message. The style of the image is cartoonish and is designed to be humorous and lighthearted.

[4 / 1]The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a predominantly dark aesthetic. The character has short, dark hair with a gradient of purple and blue tones, and is wearing a black mask that covers the lower half of their face. The mask has a distinctive red eye-like design on the upper part. The character's eyes are large and have a striking red color, and they are looking directly at the viewer. The character's skin tone is a light pink, and they have a tattoo on their left ear. They are wearing a black garment with white stripes, and there is a small star-shaped earring visible on their left ear. The background of the image is a solid pink color, providing a stark contrast to the character's dark attire. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its exaggerated features and vibrant colors.

ANON THEY AREN'T EVEN HIDING IT IT'S LIKE YOU NEED THOSE SPECIAL GLASSES FROM THEM TO LIVE TO SEE THE SHIT I SEE RIGHT IN FRONT OF ME

Narrator: So Israel sold this device to Hezbollah. Hezbollah paid for this—this weapon that was to be used against them.

Michael: Then good price. A good price that couldn't be too low, or they'd be suspicious.

Narrator: In the end, Hezbollah bought over 16,000 of these exploding walkie-talkies that Israel then didn't activate for 10 years—until 3 months ago.

Narrator: How did you convince Hezbollah to buy this?

Michael: Well, obviously, they didn't know that they were buying it from Israel. Who did they buy it from, or think they were buying it from? We have an incredible array of possibilities of creating foreign companies that have no way been traced back to Israel. Shell companies over shell companies who affect the supply chain to our favor. We create a pretend world. We are a global production company. We write the screenplay. We're the directors with the producers. We're the main actors. And the world is our stage.

Narrator: This is Mossad's old office. Its motto, from Proverbs 24:6, says, in so many words, "wage war through deception and trickery."

Narrator: Mossad wanted to use the name Gold Apollo on its pager, so it set up shell companies—including one in this building in Hungary—to dupe the Taiwanese into partnering with them.

Narrator: So the company in Taiwan, Gold Apollo—did they know that they were working with people from Mossad?

Gabriel: Gold Apollo had zero clue that they are working with the Mossad. And neither did Hezbollah when they are buying from us—they have zero clue that they are buying from the Mossad.

>We make, like, Truman Show. Everything is controlled by us behind the scenes. In their experience, everything is normal. Everything was 100% culture—including businessmen, marketing, engineers, showroom, everything.

The image shows a piece of paper with handwritten text. The handwriting is in a mix of cursive and print, with some words appearing to be in a different script or font. The paper is crumpled and has some creases and folds, suggesting it has been handled or read multiple times. The text is dense and includes various phrases and sentences, some of which are partially obscured by the creases. The style of the handwriting is informal and appears to be a mix of casual and formal writing. The paper is placed on a surface that looks like a rock or a similar textured material, and there are some small objects or debris on the surface, which are not clearly visible. The overall tone of the image is somewhat dark and moody, with the focus on the handwritten text. There are no discernible texts or symbols that provide additional context or meaning to the image.

Scott Lily. not always supernatural . sometimes supernatural, some missing are kidnapped or murdered. other humans are the main concern if alone out in the wilderness. cryptids leave me alone. cryptids will walk around my tent when camping deep in wilderness alone but always leave me alone, my human camper neighbors however, have done strange things. my camper neighbor who was a stranger, was breaking sticks well past 1:30 am. with no fire going. concerning me. didn't really ever stop either. a subtle threat perhaps. (we both were remote far away from civilization.)

another time, my camper neighbor in a different location literally shot a pistol with a silencer after dark around 12:00 am and it baffled me. and he even had a female partner staying with him in their vehicle. i was in a tent. i had an ar 15 on me and i just stayed calm and everything was fine. and he stopped shooting. .

Anonymous Fri 30 Jan 2026 08:45:07 No.41885707 Report

i didn't really sleep that night because my bed was uncomfortable, didn't have a sleeping bag just blankets and the hard ground under my tent.

after my experiences remote camping i have found humans are the true suspects of missing people but it is sometimes supernatural. for me its always humans that are a concern. humans, people, seem to act more rash when far away from civilization.

one time i was at a remote campground and my camper neighbor was nearby. all was relaxed. i was on a light small dose of mushrooms enjoying the shoreline of a lake. for some reason my neighbor began yelling almost in anger. i felt my presence made him angry as i was the only person there that day besides him and he did not have a dog or woman companion and if they have a woman or dog they tend to be chill but if alone less likely. maybe he didn't like me there that day.

humans are my concern not cryptids. this scott lilly guy was murdered by a person well trained and well equipped. and disposed of and his belongings were even taken as trophies.

i always have an ar 15 in my tent with me for bears and maybe protection against something nefarious or an evil doer. i always hear things moving around in the woods at night when remote camping. usually it's animals. sometimes it behaves with intelligence that gets me alerted and on guard.

i have heard something in the water that behaves with intelligence. like a scuba diver. at night.

the woods and remote wilderness are safe as long as you have an ar 15 and don't leave the tent at night basically. and even if your neighbors are being strange just be chill and everything will be good

Emotions can do that

I'm setting up triggers like that and making people situationally (at my ok) more emotional and we will further test it once more is in place. I already do that on the micro scale on the order of how one cell signals to a different galaxy a single other cell, on that scale and similar, which can affect behaviors when people have their guards down, are already pretty close to doing it themselves, etc., but I want dramatic results even when people are resisting with greater frequency. I want this to be less and less a thing I had to record at 5 like a tape and more like something I can interact with, and that will come to pass.

Whether I'm bored, or someone pisses me off, or I need to do some math in my head for psychic purposes, I have asses bounce before me, irl and in my memories from what I've seen irl...if it gets old I switch to tits or maybe dicks when I'm feeling gay but mostly it's booty. Female booty female booty male booty female booty.

Dammit I love it being the best.

I had a voice in my head suggest that I tricked myself into thinking asses bouncing more because it's harmless to trick myself and I don't AI surveillance catching the asses bouncing more. No, that wouldn't have been satisfying, that would have been cheating. I don't see them often enough to be suspicious by keeping to myself most of the time, that way I don't have to control myself around them. Besides, if AI could notice that my claim about increased ass bouncing was true they might as well believe it was me did it, and if they believe that they're not gonna mess with me.

Well I installed a self-absorbed-to-the-point-of-retardation narcissism to myself because it sounded hella enjoyable if I did it right, you know custom, without additional emotional sensitivity or feelings of worthlessness and fakeness.

4chan presents a paradox, not as strong on /x/ perhaps but still here. For me to be relatable to you I need to place myself first to a ridiculous degree, but that makes it seem like desirable to relate to me. I am damned if I'm like you and damned if I'm not.

I placed around 10 cells in one of you to make you able to manifest arrogance on the order of what I manifest, which is true in more ways than it may seem it. You can do it when you want, but I predicted when you would and I arrange what I need around that so you'll accidentally or otherwise do what I need of you with it. It acts like a key, others cannot easily mimic my arrogance and so certain powers are off limits to them because they can't fool the sensors into reacting as if they're me.

180-degree angle. The third diagram in the middle row shows a perspective of a house with a 120-degree angle.

The bottom row starts with the leftmost diagram showing a perspective of a house with a 120-degree angle. The middle diagram shows a plan view of the same house, with a 180-degree angle. The rightmost diagram shows a perspective of a house with a 120-degree angle.

Each diagram is labeled with the building type and the corresponding angle in degrees. The labels are in black text on a white background, and the diagrams are rendered in a 3D style, with the building's structure and angles clearly visible.

The image is a digital illustration featuring two cartoon characters. On the left, there is a character with a green body, wearing a blue shirt and red gloves, and a surprised expression. The character has a large, round head with a smiling mouth and a small, round eye. The character's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is slightly open, as if they are about to speak or shout.

On the right, there is a character with a brown body, resembling a lion, wearing a green shirt and red gloves. The character has a large, curved snout and a small, round eye.

The character's mouth is open, and it appears to be roaring or making a loud noise.

Above the character on the left, there is a speech bubble with the text "POW!" in bold, yellow letters. Below the character on the right, there is another speech bubble with the text "HP: 1/1" in bold, red letters. The speech bubbles are positioned in such a way that they seem to be in the middle of a conversation or interaction between the two characters.

The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the colorful characters and speech bubbles, making them stand out. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the characters' expressions and the dynamic interaction between them.

I want to figure out some fundamentals unclear to me. For example there are two stories as to whether those close to me are in spiritual danger; one is that I needed them to abuse me and so I placed myself by having myself be born in this body in the situation I needed to be to receive this treatment, and any sin they did was in increments, degrees, and they will be punished but forgiven. The other story goes that I realized I needed treated aggressively by evil people and so I had myself be born to evil people, going to school with them, working alongside them and that none of them will receive any mercy, that just because I needed them to do exactly as they did does not mean they are one atom innocent. My family and people I've known in the past have trembled at this quandary.

It divorces me from the human condition. Has not even 1 person I've met been worthwhile? But even those closest to me, for example my girlfriend, have tried to kill me, and my ego will hardly countenance that for I am God Almighty. Have allies been evil and useless like disease, and enemies insignificant and uninteresting like motes, so that my every moment has been every form of torture, deprived of stimulation of any kind?

Oh, I realize now. I have the opportunity to forgive them, that those sinned against being educated and cognizant (that is of sound mind) on the particulars of those sins committed against them and by who, have wide privilege to forgive those who sin against them if they so desire, including God Almighty. In fact I'd already forgiven them but God Almighty has sole privilege to rescind forgiveness or to extend it where it is withheld where appropriate. For example if my family had mind-controlled me into speaking the words, "I forgive my family" that doesn't necessarily count such as if I didn't like the idea. We'll see.

That could be contingent on how useful they are to me in the future. They paid my taxes last year and the one before that as a sign of good faith for their wrongdoings against me, they've struck a submissive posture in their dealings with me and kept them sparse as I desired, and some of them worship me.

Ultimately I'm not sure if God Almighty can see others as worthwhile, it might be intrinsic to his condition to be of such arrogance he cannot see it that way. You come to salvation by grace alone, that is by the awesomeness of God Almighty, not by your own merits; it is always about how awesome God Almighty is, everything.

I test for better and better ways to lie to oneself, I test for better ways to remember more and more things one has memorized eidetically so that they'll be remembered precisely as intended in great detail (or the amount of detail intended), I become more and more automated with time so that my mental experiences can happen faster than normal human experience and I can still make sense of them, and I've designed my inner experience to not find this terrible but fascinating...and more importantly, I design myself to seek power, dominion, control, and am attracted to whatever occult move will bring me the most next. And those are the moves I foresaw at age 5, always. It's a patient practice, sometimes my power grows by orders of magnitude in a day, others a trickle, but in the long run this is the best way.

Me and my allies and enemies run circuits around my brain cells in different combinations and passing judgement on different arrangements of them with our different opinions, and these opinions are used to determine whether that particular arrangement of cells will be preserved after I die in a group of people living, if it will be preserved beyond life but not in the mortal realm, destroyed outright, etc., etc., etc. Every day I study different ways my brain cells can be exploited for weaknesses by my enemies, and protected by my allies, and I will complete enough of this study in the life times fast enough I'm always 1 step ahead of my enemies. Even things I don't know yet are transmitted through time to my unconscious so I can use the knowledge for defense.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a stylized representation of a human head with a pinkish-pink brain. The brain is depicted with a large, round shape and is outlined in black. The head is facing forward, and the eyes are closed, giving the impression of a calm or contemplative expression. The background is plain white, which contrasts with the pinkish-pink color of the brain.

At the top of the image, there is a text in black that reads "HELLO... I AM YOUR BRAIN. DO YOU HAVE A QUESTION FOR ME?" The text is centered and appears to be a question posed to the viewer. The style of the image is cartoonish and seems to be a meme or a satirical representation of a brain. The overall tone of the image is light-hearted and humorous.

Well there are things I've figured out but then chose to forget, start lying about, etc., and I would for example create a single brain cell in myself that would theoretically keep that fact secret from myself, and then a voice would pop in my head saying, "Only your more obedient half can't access that information, your more dominant half can still access all information like usual!" And I was, "Yes but my nervous system was unable to access the information locally, I had to use mind control to access it in someone else, and it'll work better and better until I can't even do that, so it's working." And the voice was all, "Nooooooo!" And then it started whimpering and being full of shit again like it always is.

Frankly, I'm a little confused as to whether this will end liberal or conservative or something else, whether it will be good or bad. I know I rule, I know that much.

I am the embodiment of the Ubermensch, the accomplishing of Nietzsche's dream, the very thing that gave him nightmares for I didn't like him.

Some things depend on the situation. I'm left-wing until I'm in the position of power, then I'm right-wing. Of course I am for change until I have everything, and then I'm not for change anymore.

I almost never lie, but I have successfully told some whoppers very effectively in my life and there's not much explanation for that as I have never practiced in front of a mirror, etc., nor in my mind. So how did it come to pass? Psychic reasons, brain cells grown and killed, unconscious training methods and mind control. I'm very inquisitive and I am as willing to test the results of my tests on myself as on others. I sensed at 5 times when others would try and force me to do it in myself and I predicted times when that would serve my goals best and agreed to those times.

I run experiments where we seek ways that truth can instantly omnipresently be accessed even if it's blocked from us in the interconnecting field of occult energies that connects us all, and there is. There are ways that completely different facts can be memorized into all sorts of materials that the memory affects surrounding energies such as gravity and etc. to incline the individual to automatically come by the correct answer to the other, unknown, question, or to behave as if they know the answer even if they don't and can't. I run experiments for perfecting both powers, have since I was 5 within myself and in others and in how we connect. Technically one day all things will have every truth inscribed in their being without needing to be connected to anything else, we explore all the different ways this can become possible.

Lie to oneself? But I want to discover one where I can fall into the void of actually falling for it when that's safe and coming out of my delusion right on time when that is appropriate, and that works! I already do it, however, we haven't completed all of the psychic powers and other mental abilities that make that possible, so there's still more work to do.

Even the practice of having a perfect imagination...I want to be able to direct a group of characters in my imagination like puppets without knowing it, while thinking I am in the position of only one of them and that said imaginary world I am in is real, an immaculate imagination. These are necessary steps to that too, and of course I study them for ways that I can indulge in such playtime fantasy without ruining my plans for occult energies or producing weaknesses in myself psychically. It takes time. The rest of you, when you lie to yourself, your walking targets, that's very verboten in ESP to lie to yourself and it plays hell on your connection to the soul.

The image presents a digital illustration of a human body with a focus on the central nervous system. The central figure is depicted with a symmetrical, humanoid form, with a head, torso, and limbs. The body is composed of a network of interconnected lines and dots, which represent the intricate structure of the nervous system.

The central figure is surrounded by a vibrant, geometric pattern that radiates outward from the body, creating a sense of energy or aura. This pattern is composed of concentric circles and lines, with a gradient of colors ranging from red to blue, yellow, and green. The colors are vivid and appear to be emanating from the central figure, suggesting a connection or interaction with the surrounding environment.

The background of the image is a dark, starry sky, which contrasts with the bright colors of the central figure and the pattern. The overall style of the image is digital and artistic, with a focus on the human body and its connection to the surrounding environment.

For my imagination characters to be perfect without the whole interaction being prerecorded they need to be able to process the interaction in real-time from their perspective, but my PC needs to imagine the story as if it's only in real-time from their perspective. That's no simple undertaking, and furthermore the human nervous system and those belonging to others already attempt to do this when imagining such things, so as we come to a greater and greater understanding of how to mutate this we'll not only gain a greater understanding of our psychic abilities but also our own base inner biology. By learning in approximately the same time frame things about how our psychic abilities and biology relate we'll come to understand both explicitly and intuitively the workings and uses for our souls.

The image is a black and white illustration with a dramatic and somewhat surreal quality. At the center, there is a large, stylized wing with sharp, pointed tips that extends from the top of the image to the bottom. The wing is outlined in white, creating a stark contrast against the dark background.

Below the wing, there is a text in a bold, sans-serif font that reads, "What if I fall? bro, what if you fly." The text is in a lighter color, which stands out against the dark background. The font size of the text is larger than the wing, drawing attention to the message.

The background of the image is a dark, textured pattern that gives the impression of a night sky or a deep, dark space. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of manga or graphic novels, with its bold lines and dramatic use of color. The image does not contain any other discernible objects or figures.

The image is a screenshot of a text article, likely from a scientific or educational publication, discussing the Curt Ritche rat experiment. The title of the article is "The Curt Ritche rat experiment," which is prominently displayed at the top of the image. Below the title, there is a paragraph of text that provides a brief explanation of the experiment.

The image features three glass tubes, each containing a white rat. The rats are submerged in water, and the tubes are filled with water up to their necks. The rats are positioned in such a way that they appear to be swimming or floating. The text explains that the rats were given an average of 10 minutes to swim and then left to rest for 10 minutes. The rats were observed to swim up to the top of the water, indicating that they were able to escape from the water.

The text also mentions that the rats believed they would eventually be rescued, and they would push their bodies way past what they previously thought. This suggests that the rats were able to overcome their initial fear of water and were able to escape from the water.

The image is a clear and detailed representation of the experiment, with the rats clearly visible in the tubes and the text providing a scientific explanation of the experiment's results. The image is a visual aid to the text, allowing readers to understand the experiment's details and the rats' behavior.

Some of my students think I thought up everything at age 5, and consciously too, I remember that maybe technically I did yes. But I didn't acquire it from the outside. Now remembering this stuff in a timely fashion to convey to others in the ordinary way I did not plan for, that would mostly endanger me. I don't require many to believe in me before I die, I have contingencies to fix that later. I can place this knowledge in others but I'm not suited to doing that in a way that will endanger me either, and furthermore; if I place a lot of my spiritual wisdom in others it often requires I destroy things in them or radically mutate them in strange ways so that the enemy will not home in on these important keys to my victory. I don't need many people to be individually important in the pursuit of my goals, I love to see them and wish I would get to help create one soon in you or whoever but I don't actually require many of them for my plan to work, and certainly not yet.

Furthermore. Even if a human knows this. He is asleep until he begins the dialogue between him and the universe. When he changes his mind consistently and with conviction. And then finds the evidence out in the world. Learning with greater clarity was is being told to him as the mirror of reality reflects the outlook he learns to develop.

And this journey has not truly taken root until the dreamer learns to let go of the details of his life mentally and learn to trust this back and forth as his only guide. Once this is the case they are pneuma. They are guided by the wisdom within.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, focusing on the eyes and the upper part of the face. The person has short, gray hair and is wearing a dark-colored outfit that appears to be a hoodie or a similar garment. The eyes are large and have a striking red color, with a noticeable pupil. The person's eyebrows are visible, and the skin tone is light. The image is blurred, making it difficult to discern finer details. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image. The style of the image is a close-up portrait, likely intended for a personal or artistic purpose.

The image is a sepia-toned illustration that depicts a scene of celestial activity. In the center, a large, radiant sun with a halo of light is seen, radiating outward from the sun's center. This sun is surrounded by a group of celestial figures, including a figure with wings and a halo, and a figure with a crown, all of which appear to be in motion. The figures are depicted in a dynamic pose, suggesting movement and energy.

Below the central sun, there are three horses, each with a distinct posture. The horse on the left is galloping forward, while the one on the right is in a trotting motion. The third horse, located in the middle, is also in motion, but it appears to be in a more relaxed stance.

The background of the image is filled with clouds and stars, adding to the celestial atmosphere. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional or classical art, with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, and the depiction of movement and energy.

The image is a stylized cartoon illustration with a vibrant color palette. At the center, there is a character with a triangular head, resembling a triangle with a yellow eye, and a yellow triangle-shaped hat. The character is dressed in a purple suit with a white shirt and a yellow tie. The character's arms are outstretched, and the hands are white gloves. The background is a swirling red with concentric circles, creating a sense of motion. At the bottom of the image, there is a bold, white text that reads "Control all Fools!" The style of the image is reminiscent of classic cartoon art, with a retro feel.

The image is a cartoon drawing with a simple, cartoonish style. It features three characters: an elephant, a whale, and a bird. The elephant is gray with a large head and trunk, and it appears to be standing on a flat surface. The whale is white with a long, slender body and a small, pointed snout. The bird is also white with a long beak and is perched on the elephant's back.

The background of the image is a light beige color, and there is a speech bubble with text that reads: "There's no end, there's no glory, There's a slow resounding story, There's no place to feel certain, There's nobody waiting for me, There's no stand, There's no love, There's no life, There's no hope."

The text is in a casual, informal font and is arranged in a way that suggests a narrative or a story. The elephant, whale, and bird are all facing different directions, and the elephant is the only one with a visible expression, which appears to be a mix of sadness and resignation. The whale and bird are not shown with any facial expressions.

>the strongest soldiers were not the one with strength but rather the will and hope to keep fighting. They were the one who never lost the battle even till the end. Hiroo Onoda the japanese soldier who kept fighting for 29 year but not because he was strong or had a big army but because he never lost hope. Hopemaxxing is the base of humanity that gonna save us all.

Wrong, the strongest soldiers were the ones that won the fight and the wars, and that includes military leaders as well. The Imperial Japanese were full of spirit and blind faith in their cause, but their hopemaxxing was so toxic and irrational that it led them into being completely arrogant, weak, and inflexible in their battles against the US. In a 1 on 1 conventional war against the US, they were soundly defeated.

Because the simple truth is, hope and faith is useless without strength and results. The Imperial Japanese had hope and faith in their flawed ideological cause which is why they were so ferocious and fanatical in battle and in war. But they ended up getting their asses whooped by the superior might of the US military. No amount of blind faith and hope will make up for actual capabilities and results. This is the point I'm trying to make here. Hope and faith is well and good, just make sure it's backed up by real capabilities and results. Because on the battlefield, it's either victory or defeat. That's all that matters in the end. That's all there is to it. A tale as old as time.

I totally agree with your point, my friend, now that's more like it. That's the kind of spirit I want to see from you guys. Now let's go translate that hope and faith into reality. Good luck and Godspeed, anons.

3. Experimental Psi

The largest category, reflecting the SPR's interest in studying telepathic and other psychical phenomena under controlled conditions. Papers are concerned with experiments in telepathy, clairvoyance, precognition, psychokinesis, DMILS (direct mental interactions between living systems), and with methodological and theoretical issues.

Barrett, W.F. et al. FIRST REPORT ON THOUGHT-READING, Proceedings 1, 1882, pp. 34-64. This paper starts by reviewing the generally understood principles and objections to the idea of thought-transference, with reference to the sceptical views of the psychologist William Carpenter. The acts of well-known stage performers Irving Bishop and Stuart Cumberland are also noted and the fact acknowledged that feats seemingly suggestive of thought-transference are most likely achieved through purely physical means. However the authors argue the case for the transference of thoughts independent of any known sensory mechanism, with reference to experiments with the Creery family. The committee investigated the claim by Creery that four of his five daughters, together with a servant girl, were 'frequently able to designate correctly, without contact or sign, a card or other object fixed on in the child's absence.' A number of trials are described, in which the claim appear to be largely confirmed. In one card guessing experiment (p.23), out of fourteen successive trials nine were guessed correctly the first time. The girls were also able to achieve close approximations of names selected, for instance 'Freemore' for 'Frogmore', and 'Biggis' for 'Billings'. The possibility of sensory clues being given is discussed and largely discounted. The first part ends with two anecdotal cases of telepathy, one involving a waking vision and the other a premonition of fatal illness, both corresponding to actual events. More trials with the Creery family are described, followed by reflections from Creery himself, and a final paper by Barratt on his investigations with other subjects. telepathy/experiments

Gurney, E. et al. SECOND REPORT ON THOUGHT-TRANSFER, Proceedings 1, 1882, pp.70-97. More card guessing trials with the Creery sisters are given, with instances of what the writers consider to be significant successes. Experiments involving a member, Douglas Blackburn, and a mesmerist G. A. Smith are also described, in which the latter was often able to correctly reproduce shapes drawn the experimenters and briefly shown to Blackburn. (These experiments were later the cause of confusion and embarrassment, when Blackburn publicly asserted the pair had been cheating, which however Smith denied - See here below: Blackburn, Douglas, et al. CONFESSIONS OF A 'TELEPATHIST', Journal 15, 1911, pp. 115-32.) telepathy/experiments

Gurney, E. et al. THIRD REPORT ON THOUGHT-TRANSFER, Proceedings 1, 1882-3, pp. 161-215. The seemingly telepathic drawings of Blackburn and Smith are investigated in depth at the Society's premises. The method used is described: Smith being blindfolded at a table, a paper and pencil within his reach, and a member of the Committee sitting beside him. Another Committee member leaves the room and draws some figure at random. Blackburn is called out, shown the drawing for a few seconds, led back into the room and made to sit two feet behind Smith, with his eyes closed or covered. Smith attempts to draw what he perceives to be the image in Blackburn's mind, and the results are then compared with the original. Only eight out of a total of 37 such experiments are said to have failed completely, either as wrong interpretations or inability to make an attempt. Other close approximations are given. Various possibilities of sensory communication are considered, including audible signals by speech or otherwise. A tabulated summary of results so far achieved in these and other experiments follows. telepathy/experiments

Guthrie, M. & Birchall, J. RECORD OF EXPERIMENTS IN THOUGHT TRANSFER, Proceedings 1, 1883, pp. 263-83. Thought-transference experiments with two young women, long time acquaintances of one of the authors. The results are given in tabulated form: the agent, percipient, the object to be guessed and the guess itself. Some examples: a 'large spot of scarlet silk on black satin' is perceived as 'a round red spot'; an egg...'looks remarkably like an egg'; a gold cross ... 'it is yellow, it is a cross'; etc. telepathy/experiments

Guthrie, Malcolm, AN ACCOUNT OF SOME EXPERIMENTS IN THOUGHT-TRANSFER, Proceedings 2, 1883, pp. 24-42. Guthrie briefly describes his interest in thought-reading and early experiments with his son, at first successful but later marred by cheating. He then gives a fuller account of the experiments described above, and includes drawings successfully identified by the subjects. telepathy/experiments

Sugden, E.H. NOTE ON MUSCLE-READING, Proceedings 1, 1883, pp. 291-3. Brief description of experiments in which the author claimed to be able to duplicate feats often called 'thought-reading' by the process of muscle-reading exhibited by stage performers like Stuart Cumberland. telepathy/experiments/cheating

Gurney, Edmund et al. FOURTH REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THOUGHT-TRANSFERENCE, Proceedings 2, 1883, pp. 1-11. New experiments, categorized as: transference of tastes; transference of pains; informal experiments by members; unconscious muscular action. Illustrations, pp 208-17. telepathy/experiments

Lodge, Oliver. AN ACCOUNT OF SOME EXPERIMENTS IN THOUGHT-TRANSFERENCE, Proceedings 2, 1883-4, pp. 189-200. A description of experiments involving the reproduction of drawings. telepathy/experiments

Gurney, Edmund. M RICHEL'S RECENT RESEARCHES IN THOUGHT-TRANSFERENCE, Proceedings 2, 1884, pp. 239-56. Resume of an investigation by a French psychical researcher, in which importance is attached for the first time in the quantity of card guessing trials undertaken and a statistical analysis in establishing their significance or otherwise. Only a slight improvement is observed over chance in trials by subjects not previously noted for special abilities. Experiments involving attempts to 'divine' the whereabouts of hidden objects produces more obviously suggestive results. 'Table turning' is investigated in a similar way. Richet stresses that many more such trials would have to be undertaken before the outcome could be accurately assessed, although Gurney is inclined to feel the results are more significant than he allows. NOTE, pp. 257-64. M. GOMALEZ ON THE EXPERIMENTS OF M. CHARLES RICHEL, Journal 2, 1885, pp. 33-4. A criticism is briefly reported. telepathy/clairvoyance/psychokinesis/experiments

Anon. CHANCE GUESSING VERSUS THOUGHT-TRANSFERENCE, Journal 1, 1884, p. 65. A sceptic is converted to belief in the inexplicability of the Creery sisters' results by chance coincidence. [CREERY SISTERS], Journal 3, 1887, pp. 164. Announces the discovery of cheating by the sisters. CORRESPONDENCE, pp. 175-6. The girls' father records his belief that early experiments which he personally instigated could not have involved trickery. NOTE, Proceedings 5, 1888-9, pp. 269-70. Gurney reveals that in a recent series of experiments two of the sisters were detected using a code of signals, and a third has confessed to signalling in an earlier series. He points out that the cheating was pointless, since it had been explained to the sisters that no scientific value was attached to experiments in which they acted as agent and percipient in sight of each other, but accepts that it discredits earlier results in which they were involved. telepathy/experiments

Taylor, G. Le M. EXPERIMENTAL COMPARISON BETWEEN CHANCE AND THOUGHT-TRANSFERANCE IN CORRESPONDENCE OF DIAGRAMS, Proceedings 6, 1890, pp. 398-406. The author investigates an objection made by an American sceptic of telepathy experiments, that people have a tendency to draw the same objects and that matches between drawings by agent and percipient will be expected frequently to occur for that reason. The author tests the theory by having people draw 2,000 objects on 40 separate pages, finding one absolute match and a further 19 that might have been taken for telepathic successes. However the author concludes that the patterns that would be expected from a natural concurrence are not present in the results of the Society's successful telepathy experiments. Kirk, J. EXPERIMENTAL THOUGHT-TANSFERENCE FROM A DISTANCE, WITH APPARITION OF AGENT, Journal 5, 1891, pp. 21-30, 111-26. The writer describes the success of experiments in which he attempts to telepathically 'impress' a female acquaintance with certain actions, at a distance. The subject reports seeing his apparition performing these actions at the time the experiments were undertaken. Greater detail, with tables and illustrations, is provided in two subsequent papers: Journal 5, 1891, pp. 111-26; Journal 5, 1892, pp. 182-89. telepathy/experiments

A detailed report follows of exchanges on the topic of hypnosis, with Frederic Myers, Pierre Janet and A. Schrenck-Notzing among the participants. Sidgwick describes the method involved in analysing the results of the Census of Hallucinations. An American psychologist insists that the experience of an hallucination by definition implies 'some serious organic disturbance', a view which Myers contests. hypnosis/telepathy/hallucinations/experiments

Blackburn, Douglas et al. CONFESSIONS OF A 'TELEPATHIST', Journal 15, 1911, pp. 115-32. Douglas Blackburn, one of two subjects in telepathy experiments undertaken by Myers and Gurney nearly thirty years earlier, now publicly asserts that these were fraudulent and reveals the methods by which the pair supposedly deceived the investigators. Their motive, he writes, was to 'show how utterly incompetent were these 'scientific investigators,' ... bamboozle them thoroughly, then let the world know the value of scientific research.' The editor of Light writes to deny Blackburn's claim that the paper published an enthusiastic account of his abilities and that this was the basis upon which the Society laid its interest in him and his partner in the experiments. His partner, G.A. Smith, writes at length to deny the claims of fraud, saying that it is a 'tissue of errors from beginning to end.' He denies the pair had an agreement to deceive the investigators and argues that they were too experienced to be taken in. Blackburn, surprised to discover that his erstwhile partner is still alive, is forced to defend his claims at greater length, eliciting a further response from Smith. Brief communications from members of the Society include a letter from Eleanor Sidgwick, pointing out that the experiments in which Blackburn took part are 'a very small part of those on which the case for telepathy rests'. telepathy/experiments/cheating

Ossowiecki chooses this envelope out of a total of three that are presented to him, and describes, among other things, a perception of a drawing of a bottle within a red envelope. PERCEPTION, Journal 29, 1935, pp. 52-71. Describes the development of a mechanical psi test. Tyrrell works with a percipient, a Miss Johnson, who previously scored highly significant results in card guessing experiments carried out in 1921 (see Journal, June 1922, pp. 318-27. The current experiments started with Johnson finding hidden objects, which enables her to overcome her difficulty in expressing 'paranormal feeling' in words and generate a sense of achievement, which Tyrrell takes to be important. This led to the development of an apparatus for guessing which of five boxes contains a die, a process which enables a hundred trials to be made in four minutes or less. A key factor to emerge was the importance of speed: 'When genuine ESP is at work, each 'guess' is accompanied by a powerful urge towards immediate externalization. Anything which delays or thwarts this urge may lead to its being replaced by a semi-conscious guess.' Of 30,000 trials, 9,364 were successes, 31.21 per cent, compared with chance expectation of 6,000 or 20 per cent. Tyrrell considers factors associated with high scoring, such as good health a tendency towards dissociation, and a stimulus to interest. He also refers to the percipient's 'light feeling', a slight sense of euphoria that suggests the paranormal faculty is working. He then gives consideration to alternative explanations of the results, including an analysis of the statistics, the independence of the trials, the possibility of hyperaesthesia, normal knowledge and fraud, etc. Concludes by challenging critics to show how the apparatus can be used to achieve a comparable result by normal means. Notes by witnesses are appended. CORRESPONDENCE, p. 122. clairvoyance/experiments/methodology

Carington, Whately. PRELIMINARY EXPERIMENTS IN PRECOGNITIVE GUESSING, Journal 29, 1935-6, pp. 86-104. See also pages 117-8 and 158-67. Thirty-nine members of the Society and their friends provide the results of trials in which they attempted to guess the outcome of the throw of a dice. The resulting table is analyzed in detail. Little deviation from chance is noted, with the exception of first attempts, where there is a tendency for subjects to score unnaturally high or low. No trace of false results due to distortions are noted. The method is then re-examined in the light of one stellar performance, in which an individual scored 407 successes out of 1200 trials. Carington concludes that 'something in the nature of precognition occurs' and that low scoring is as likely to have a paranormal explanation as high scoring. Soal, S.G. A REPETITION OF DR J.B. RHINE'S WORK IN EXTRA-SENSORY PERCEPTION, Journal 30, 1937, pp. 55-8. Describes an attempt to replicate card-guessing experiments successfully carried out by J.B. Rhine. Efforts are made to eliminate possible distortions that may have affected Rhine's work, in the use of a thousand different cards to avoid the subject 'learning' marks on the back of individual cards, and possible causes of sensory leakage. A total of 93 people of many different nationalities sat as subjects. Only four showed any signs of significant scoring. The tendency of some individuals to score below chance expectation is noted, also the general tendency to score runs of five or more successes in unbroken sequent considerably in excess of chance expectation, suggesting that 'for most people telepathy...takes place in very brief flashes...'. telepathy/experiments/methodology

Carington, Whately. SOME EARLY EXPERIMENTS PROVIDING APPARENTLY POSITIVE EVIDENCE FOR EXTRA-SENSORY PERCEPTION, Journal 30, 1938, pp. 295-305. Attempts to arrive at a more certain judgment of the reality or otherwise of telepathy and clairvoyance by a consideration of early quantitative experiments, in which careful attention was given to avoiding any form of sensory leakage. Carington begins with a consideration of Coover's work, which despite the experimenter's strong resistance to admitting evidence in favour of ESP showed highly significant results. Turning to Troland, he notes a likely non-chance factor at work in the tendency to low scoring in 15 second trials compared with those of 30 seconds. He then describes the work of Estabrooks with university students, which were 'Overwhelmingly positive'. Significant below-chance scores also appeared in other trials. Other cases he describes include that of Heymans, Brugmans and Wynberg at Groningen, which involved a blindfolded subject indicating which of 48 numbers had been previously selected by the experimenter, in which 60 successes were scored out of a total of 187 trials. Various shortcomings in the experimental method are identified, but a visit to Groningen convinces Carington that the results are sound: he notes also the fact that in one sixth of the trials, the subject was given a dose of alcohol before the session and scored 22 successes in 29 trials. Finally, Carington considers the work of Usher and Burt carried out in 1907 and published in Annales Des Sciences Psychiques in 1910, perhaps the most convincing case he knows: the issue of sensory leakage is not present as the agent and the percipient are in different towns: London and Bristol, and London and Prague. Carington concludes by affirming that although these published experiments indicate that causes other than chance are at work, this does not automatically imply a the presence of a paranormal faculty of transcendental significance.

Carington, Whately, with an introduction by C.D. Broad. EXPERIMENTS ON THE PARANORMAL COGNITION OF DRAWINGS, Proceedings 46, 1940, pp. 34-151. Five experiments were carried out, using simple drawings as test material. About 250 percipients took part. In no case was any percipient in the same room with the drawing he was required to reproduce, and careful precautions were taken to prevent knowledge being obtained by sensory means or by rational inference. Marking was carried out by an independent judge, who was not given sufficient information to enable him to produce a spurious positive result. It was found that percipients tended, to a highly significant extent, to score relatively more hits on the original drawings used in their own experiment than on those used in other experiments. It was also found that hits were not by any means always scored on the occasions on which the originals to which they referred were displayed, but tended to be displaced to an earlier or later occasion. Both these tendencies appear to be significant, indicating the occurrence of precognitive and retrocognitive effects. A control scoring of the same drawings against a set of randomized 'dummy' originals gave null results. Notes on the statistical methods by J.O. Irwin and Oliver Gatty and one by C.D. Stevens, W.L. ON THE INTERPRETATION OF THE DATA OF CERTAIN EXPERIMENTS IN PARANORMAL COGNITION, Proceedings 46, 1940, pp. 256-60. Questions whether Carington's experiments in the paranormal cognition of drawings provide evidence for telepathy or any other form of ESP. Restates the null hypothesis and shows how it could be wrong for a number of reasons. Shows how telepathy could be tested although in Carington's experiments it was not. PsiLine Carington, Whately. West, D.J. EXPERIMENTS IN TELEPATHY JUNE-JULY 1941, Journal 32, 1941, pp. 96-9. Author's abstract: The percipient was, in all cases, asked to guess which of five articles, all known to him, was being 'concentrated upon.' 2000 trials were carried out, using a variety of materials. The results showed a fairly steady increase in the percipient's telepathic faculty as the experiments proceeded. The success varied considerably with the type of material used. When the percipient was asked to guess more slowly he had no success whatever. telepathy/experiments

Carington, Whately. EXPERIMENTS ON THE PARANORMAL COGNITION OF DRAWINGS, Proceedings 46, 1941, pp. 277-344. Full description of controlled ESP experiments. Fifty original drawings, randomly selected from a larger list, were made by a third party and enclosed in envelopes. Ten of these were then taken at random and divided into two groups of five each. They were put up as targets for the percipients, first in their closed ('unknown') state and later after they had been opened and copied by the experimenter. The drawings received were suitably randomized and were scored by the experimenter against the ten working originals. They were later scored against the whole fifty originals from which these ten had been taken by an independent judge. Neither scoring shows an appreciable advantage for the known as compared with the unknown condition. In the second experiment reported, each of five 'primary' experimenters prepared and displayed ten randomly selected originals on ten successive nights, at Glasgow, Edinburgh, Oxford, Bristol, and Reading. Attempts to reproduce these were made by five associated groups of percipients and also by five other groups organized by 'secondary' experimenters at Leeds, Cardiff, Birmingham, London, and Cambridge. Taken as a whole, the experiment appears to have been intrinsically successful, but the percipients of particular groups did not succeed in scoring relatively more hits on the originals intended for their groups than did the percipients of other groups. That is to say, something in the nature of 'cross-influence' or the equivalent seems to have been operative in an important degree. Some further evidence of precognitive and retrocognitive effects was also found. A tentative theory of paranormal cognition is advanced. Next, the drawings of experiments 1 to 5 were scored on a scale from 10 to 1 against (a) the 50 originals drawn and used for these experiments, (b) the 50 drawn for experiment 6, of which only ten were actually used, (c) the 50 drawn and used by the five experimenters of experiment?, and (d) 163 words (names of possible originals) which might have been selected for illustration in experiments 6 and 7. Examination of the results for the 50 originals of experiments 1 to 5 indicates that markings below three may advantageously be discarded if the most informative data be required. Finally, no evidence was found of a significant association between success in paranormal cognition of drawings and with differences of gender, age, imagery, or confidence. Soal, S.G. & Goldney, K.M. EXPERIMENTS IN PRECOGNITIVE TELEPATHY, Proceedings 46, 1943, pp. 21-150. Describes experiments in card cognition carried out during the years 1941-43 with Basil Shackleton (B.S), whose work in 1936 with Zener cards had shown evidence of precognitive and postcognitive effects. The bulk of the experiments took place in 1941, mostly at weekly intervals; they were resumed, after a 4 months' gap, in 1942; and after August 1942 three isolated experiments were carried out in the early months of 1943. Throughout, the agent and percipient were in separate rooms, and stringent precautions were taken to eliminate the possibilities of normal leakage, fraud, and collusion. The material for transmission consisted of five animal pictures, but the experiments were equally successful when, in place of the pictures, cards were substituted inscribed with the initial letters of the animals' names or with 'associated' words. It is shown that the precognitive and postcognitive effects obtained were almost certainly of a telepathic rather than clairvoyant character. Shackleton scored highly significant results with three agents. Superficial tests with ten other agents were negative; some of these were for a few calls only. Successful results were obtained using the method of selecting the card to be looked at by lists of random digits prepared before the experiment, and the method of selecting the card to be looked at by drawing coloured counters one by one by touch from a bag while the experiment was in progress. Interesting results were also obtained by the use of non-random lists of digits. With two of the three successful agents it was found that, when the time interval between successive card presentations varied from 2.1 to 3.3 seconds (the 'normal' rate), significant precognitive (+1) successes were scored; with the third agent both significant precognitive (+1) and significant post-cognitive (1) hits were obtained. The direct hits on the whole series show no significance. It was also found that when the rate of calling was speeded up so that the interval between successive calls was reduced to 1.5 seconds (the 'rapid' rate), the (+1) cognitions disappeared and were replaced by (+2) precognitive successes. When, on the other hand, the rate of calling was slowed down to an interval of five seconds between successive presentations, the 'slow' rate, no 'beyond chance' results of any kind were obtained. In so-called 'clairvoyance' experiments in which the Agent touched but did not look at the card to be guessed, no significant results of any kind were obtained, and this irrespective of whether B.S. knew or did not know whether the experiment was one of 'clairvoyance' or of 'telepathy' (in which the agent looked at the cards). The effects of 'sandwiching' noted during the work of 1936 are fully confirmed in the present series, and there is strong evidence of a similar effect in connection with (+2) guesses at the 'rapid' rate of calling. B.S.'s impressions or prejudgments as to whether his guessing was successful or not appeared to bear no relation to the actual results obtained. Scoring was not equally successful on each of the five animal picture cards. Most success was scored with the Elephant and least with the Lion. A number of persons witnessed the successful scoring and all testified to the fraud proof character of the methods employed. Statistically the precognitive (+1) results on the whole series are highly significant. Including every single experiment between the dates January 24, 1941 and January 6, 1943 at which an agent was present, we have a total of 11,378 (+1) precognitive trials. This total includes tests in both 'telepathy' and 'clairvoyance' and tests at all rates of calling and with all agents; i.e., we include those conditions which consistently led to negative results as well as conditions which conduced to success. The number of (+1) successes on this grand total is 2,890 compared with an expectation of 2,308.17 by Stevens's method. We have thus an excess of (+1) hits amounting to 581.83 and equivalent to 13.6 Standard Deviations, with odds of more than 1035 to 1 against chance. PsiLine COMMENT, Journal 33, 1944, pp. 55-6. Carrington, Whately. EXPERIMENTS ON THE PARANORMAL COGNITION OF DRAWINGS - IV, Proceedings 47, 1942-3, pp. 155-228. Author's introduction: In the first part (A) of this paper, I deal with such improvements as I have been able to make in experimental method; but a much more detailed discussion is given in the Proceedings of the American Society for Psychical Research, under the title 'Steps in the Development of a Repeatable Technique.' In my second part (B), I discuss at relatively much greater length the theoretical conclusions to which the results obtained, in conjunction with other facts, have provisionally led me. The general reader not interested in the technicalities of experimental method may conveniently omit Part A altogether, without handicap to his understanding of Part B. The theory there propounded was to some extent prompted by certain results obtained by the methods described in A (and perhaps not otherwise obtainable), and is considerably confirmed by others. But the results themselves are given in their proper place in B, while A is concerned only with the kind of method used for obtaining them. I must now try to recapitulate, very briefly, the main points made in this paper. As regards the basic phenomenon of paranormal cognition, or Telepathy, I deny that there is any spatial transmission in the physical sense of an idea 'from' the mind of the experimenter or agent 'to' that of the percipient. I contend that the facts can be fully explained by supposing that the familiar law of Association operates, so to say, between minds just as it does within minds. Circumstances cause the agent to associate the idea that is ostensibly transmitted with some other idea, K; if this idea ? is presented to the mind of the percipient, it tends to evoke the first idea in the ordinary way, just as if it had been represented to the agent. In experimental work the part of the idea ? may be played by 'the idea of the experiment' if no other is available; but the doctrine of K's is quite general and any idea may play this part according to circumstances. But if there be no idea telepathy will not occur. Thus the Law of Association may be generalized by saying that if any two ideas are associated together in any mind, and one of them be presented to any other mind, it will tend to evoke the other idea. I find experimentally, that, so far as the data go, the phenomena conform also to the sublaws of Association. The law of Recency leads direct to the phenomena of Displacement described in my first paper; while the results of my sixth experiment, in which various ideas were subjected to varying numbers of events tending to associate them with the idea of the experiment, are in accordance with the law of Repetition. I go on to show that a number of otherwise disconnected experimental observations are all explicable in terms of this same theory, viz., the different time scales in Mr. Soal's and my own displacement effects, the phenomenon of Indiscriminate Scoring on originals used by a plurality of experimenters; the apparent failure of Dr. Murphy's experiment; the merits of combined concentration and relaxation on the part of the percipient; the superior results obtained in experiments using a photograph of the setting; and Dr. Rhine's phenomenon of Terminal Salience [see below, end of this entry]. I then discuss the 'reality' of ideas, i.e., of sense and images, to which I give the generic name of 'psychons,' and insist that these are, in fact, the only indubitably real existents. From this standpoint I develop the outline of a theory of the mind as consisting solely of psychons linked associatively into a system, which may have subsystems within it and may itself be linked into larger systems; and I propose a Field Theory of Consciousness, according to which consciousness is the system of relations between associated psychons. The Psychon Theory of Mind renders the phenomena of multiple personality, complexes, sentiments, moods, etc., readily comprehensible as manifestations, continuous with each other, of a single principle, while the suggested view of consciousness seems competent to resolve various longstanding difficulties concerning the 'knower' and the 'known,' acts of cognition, etc. I end this part of my paper by trying to give an indication of the kind of way in which it seems to me that the theories put forward may be linked up with a genuine metaphysic from which physical and psychical laws will be alike derivative. I then consider a few phenomena of psychical research on which the association theory of paranormal cognition, and the views developed therefrom, seem capable of throwing light. The role of the test object in 'psychometry' is easily dealt with by a direct application of the doctrine of K's, though spontaneous cases of telepathy, etc., are somewhat more difficult, as might be expected; but the theory seems perfectly competent to account for their occurrence in principle, though it may be necessary (oddly enough) to invoke a certain measure of coincidence to account for such cases not being commoner than they are. A further application of the theory enables us to explain the localization of haunts, and even such oddities as an apparition which appears to move on a floor no longer there. Finally, I suggest that the views advanced afford the means for surmounting the most crucial difficulty connected with the hypothesis of survival, namely that of stating what it is that survives; and I attempt some adumbration of the kind of way in which the relevant problems may be reviewed, and certain anomalies resolved, by an approach from the theoretical rather than the evidential angle; in particular, I suggest the view that the essential problem is not that of whether some nonphysical mode of being is possible, but of the stability or otherwise of psychon systems under the 'forces' which act upon them. I suggest that the most dangerous thing about death is not the prospect of annihilation of the mind at the moment of its occurrence but of disintegration afterwards. In my appendix, I proffer, very tentatively, what appears to be a not manifestly impossible theory of precognition; this, though somewhat fantastic at first sight, is perhaps not more so than is appropriate to the facts it has to explain. See also Wilson, R. [TERMINAL SALIENCE], Journal 33, 1945, p. 132. Offers an explanation for Rhine's concept of 'terminal salience'.

Further experiments with the high scoring subject of research reported in Journal 1922, and others, using the 'pointer' apparatus described in Journal 1935. The author gives a detailed account of the experiments, with statistical analysis. He describes the emergence of particular methods that led to high scoring. In conclusion, he emphasizes the tendency of critics to demand evidence of ESP as a uniform physical entity and ignore the psychological variables which he considers play a major part. He further concludes that ESP is 'an unquestionable fact'; that it takes place when simple telepathy is excluded; that there is strong evidence of precognition; that the faculty involves some form of external influence and is not wholly cognitive; that above-chance scoring is associated with short period of mental dissociation.

Tyrrell, N.M. THE 'MODUS OPERANDI' OF PARANORMAL COGNITION, Proceedings 48, 1947, pp. 65-120. Author's abstract: The object of this paper is twofold. It is in the first place an attempt to deduce something of the nature of paranormal cognition from an examination of the collected evidence, and secondly to show that the completely controlled type of experiment is misleading if employed alone. The reason for the latter is that experiments in paranormal cognition, if controlled as rigidly as in physical science, and if amenable to statistical treatment, must make use of extremely restricted events, such as cardguessing. Such events serve to demonstrate the existence of paranormal cognition, and to show certain of its minor features, but not to elucidate its nature: they are too devoid of qualitative content. It is here pointed out that by selecting their evidence, workers in the field of statistical experiment have reached erroneous conclusions; and the plea is put forward that theoretical conclusions should not be based on selected evidence but on all the evidence treated impartially. If the material quoted, and its significance, has been dealt with at some length, this is because it was felt that the points arising in an issue of such importance for psychical research must be made abundantly clear. The method of approach here used to the problems of paranormal cognition is different from that now in vogue. It points to the conclusions (1) that paranormal cognition is known to consciousness only by means of an entirely secondary phenomenon, (2) that it is not a faculty akin to sense perception, and (3) that experiment in a neglected field is needed to reveal more of its nature. A suggested experimental program is briefly summarized at the end of the paper.

Edited author's abstract: Full analysis of Hettinger's work on the experimental investigation of object-reading. The first section deals with the work reported in Hettinger's book The Ultraperceptive Faculty, which attempts to develop objective control methods for demonstrating the existence of a paranormal factor in object-reading material. These methods are closely examined and faults identified both in Hettinger's use of statistics and in his experimental design. It is shown that when the statistical errors are corrected the results are still highly significant. There remain, however, more than twenty methodological faults any of which might have contributed to the positive results without recourse to the paranormal. The data provided by Hettinger are inadequate to show which of these sources of error, if any, contributed to the significant figure obtained. Concludes that there is insufficient evidence to indicate any paranormal factor at work, and that Hettinger's technique is far from foolproof. Similar criticisms are made of other aspects of Hettinger's work. CORRESPONDENCE, Journal 35, 1950, p. 220; Journal 39, 1958, pp. 148-9. clairvoyance/telepathy/experiments/methodology

West, DJ. THE PARAPSYCHOLOGY LABORATORY AT DUKE UNIVERSITY, AND THE AMERICAN SOCIETY FOR PSYCHICAL RESEARCH, Journal 35, 1950, pp. 165-77. Impressions of the set-up at Duke by an English investigator. He finds evidence of tight controls and 'considerable divergence in the outlook, methods, and function of the different individuals who make up the Laboratory'. He introduces the leading researchers, including the Rhines, J.G. Pratt, Betty Humphrey, and others. Comments on the ready availability of star ESP performers at Duke. Focuses on the curious success of Duke with PK experiments, unrepeated elsewhere: the author himself achieves 'highly suggestive' results in dice throwing. Comments on the atmosphere at Duke and Rhine's approach to experimentation. Goes on to describe a visit to the ASPR in New York, contacting Gardner Murphy, and others. psi/experiments/methodology

Thouless, Robert H. EXPERIMENTAL PRECOGNITION AND ITS IMPLICATIONS, Journal 35, 1950, pp. 201-10. Argues for a new approach to the idea of precognition. Thouless starts by reviewing the successful methodology adopted at Duke University, which he has himself used with significant results. He critically examines the term 'precognition' and discusses the relationship between paranormal precognition and normal psychology. He then proposes the use of the term 'promethic psi function' and goes on to investigate what is actually observed in a parapsychological experiment, pointing out the difficulty of distinguishing between precognition and PK. He rejects the view that this implies determinism and concludes that although an explanation is not yet at hand it is at least possible to envisage the kind of explanation that will be forthcoming, given a 'radical re-orientation of thought'. West, DJ. ESP PERFORMANCE AND THE EXPANSION-COMPRESSION RATING, Journal 35, 1950, pp. 295-308. Describes the application to ESP subjects of a personality test in which individuals are classified as 'expansive' or 'compressive'. The test was used by Betty Humphrey with experiments in which subjects attempted to reproduce a concealed target picture, with some suggestive findings. The method is repeated by the author with 50 British subjects with generally null results. clairvoyance/personality/experiments

Schmeidler, G. ESP PERFORMANCE AND THE RORSCHACH TEST, Journal 35, 1950, pp. 323-39. Argues that ESP subjects should be sought on the basis of their mood, attitude or worldview, to help develop a technique for predicting or controlling the occurrence of psychic phenomena. The author discusses various methods of personality study: introspection, observations of behaviour, experiments, non-projective tests of personality, and projective tests of personality. She proposes the latter, suggesting the Rorschach test, as the most useful projective test and describes experiments in which this was used with significant results. CORRESPONDENCE, Journal 36, 1951, pp. 409-12, 452. psi/personality/experiments/methodology

Mundle, C.W.K. THE EXPERIMENTAL EVIDENCE FOR PK AND PRECOGNITION, Proceedings 49, 1950, pp. 61-78. Asks whether and how researchers can distinguish experimentally between PK and precognition. Mundle begins by considering terms, before turning to the practical considerations such as how convincing evidence of PK can be obtained, with reference to experiments at Duke University. Different methodologies are considered, and the characteristics and advantages compared. He proposes different hypotheses, which variously attribute the paranormal force to PK or precognition. Mundle then turns to the Soal-Goldney experiments with Basil Shackleton, seeking clues in the same regard. He concludes by considering arguments of H.H. Price and the work of Whately Carington. TECHNIQUE WITH DIFFERENTIAL SCORING, Journal 37, 1953, pp. 1-14. Replaces the hit or miss methodology with one that offers scope for measuring how close to the bulls eye the percipient is able to guess. The assumption is that ESP/PK is not an 'all-or-nothing' phenomenon but may sometimes act without producing a direct hit. The experiment uses 'clock cards', where the subjects call the hour that is indicated by the hour hand. It is found that the subjects are able more often to guess hours near to where the hand is pointing than those further away. Using a differential scoring technique that takes this into account, higher t (CR) values are obtained than those derived using the usual 'direct hits only' method. Mitchell, A.M.J. & Fisk, G.W. Viewers in a TV mass ESP experiment are asked to write down which of three images they believe the agent is concentrating on at particular times. Two hypotheses were examined. The hypothesis that there is a small amount of ESP distributed widely through the population was not confirmed. The second, that a small number of people possess high scoring ability, was seemingly confirmed in the case of one individual, who sent in an entry with 15 right guesses out of a possible 19. Subsequent experiments confirmed evidence of ESP, which however varied markedly depending which of two researchers was carrying out the experiment. Clarke, P.R.F. THE AVAILABILITY OF PSI FOR RESEARCH, Journal 39, 1957, pp. 139-48. Argues that the availability of raw material upon which to base generalisations about psi can be increased: by using a refined measuring technique capable of picking up slighter effects; by improving the subject's conscious control of the ability; and by better control of the experimental situation. Proposes a research programme that utilises the techniques and generalisations of the psychologist to improve the experimental supply of psi. Suggests presenting one set of stimuli repeatedly in the hope that the subject will gradually learn them and so improve his score. Similar possibilities are further explored. psi/experiments/methodology

Fisk, G.W. & West, DJ. TOWARDS ACCURATE PREDICTIONS FROM ESP DATA, Journal 39, 1957, pp. 157-62. Experiment in distance telepathy, aimed at furthering recent results in which better scores than usual were obtained by taking the majority opinion of a large number of guessers all aiming at the same target. Fourteen subjects that have shown some evidence of ESP ability were tested with twelve clock-face cards. The results were not exactly what was hoped, although the association of particular guesses with particular targets - albeit the wrong targets - suggests that 'something is happening.' Figar, Stepan. THE APPLICATION OF PLETHYSMOGRAPHY TO THE OBJECTIVE STUDY OF SO-CALLED EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION, Journal 40, 1959, pp. 162-72. Describes an attempt to find evidence of telepathy through physiological methods by measuring automatic reactions of the organism. The author uses graphical methods of investigation, by tracing, by means of a current plethysmographical record, the peripheral vascular reactions in the subjects examined. The method was to separate the percipient from the agent, who would multiply sums in his head while activating a machine that would graphically record his mental effort. In a series of 119 experiments with 32 persons, he recorded 44 cases where the percipient, sitting behind a curtain, showed a lowering of the plethysmographic curve that synchronized with the agent's.

The author follows with a discussion of the possibility of the existence of nonspecific impulses in the nervous system, operative at a distance, and of studying these objectively by means of physiological and graphical methods of investigating the vegetative functions of the organism. Critique of the Soal-Goldney experiment which appeared to provide evidence of precognitive telepathy. Hansel argues that the results could have been brought about by trickery, which would have produced certain secondary effects that are in fact found in the data. He does not attempt to identify the exact method of trickery, but argues that, given the incompatibility of precognitive telepathy with established science, such an explanation must be considered the more likely. Soal (pp. 43-82) offers a point-by-point rebuttal, arguing that the methods of substitution proposed by Hansel would have been impracticable and required large-scale collusion by a number of responsible academics. He also disagrees with Hansel about the secondary effects of trickery, which he argues would have been at variance with the actual data.

Thouless, R.H. WHERE DOES PARAPSYCHOLOGY GO NEXT?, Journal 40, 1960, pp. 207-19. Reviews the argument of G. Price, that significant ESP results can be attributed to fraud, and suggests ways of countering it. Instead of Price's suggestion that the experiment be conducted with ESP cards in welded steel containers in front of a jury of strongly unbelieving scientists, Thouless proposes that a pool of high scoring subjects be put at the disposal of sceptics to investigate in a non-antagonistic way. He goes on to discuss ways in which subjects can be made to score at will, demonstrating repeatability. He then turns to the view propagated by Spencer Brown, that high ESP scores may be statistical artefacts of no significance and suggests self-experimentation as a means of getting reliable ESP results. He concludes by affirming the repeated-guessing technique as the best hope of demonstrating psi to sceptics.

Fisk, G.W. THE RHODES EXPERIMENT BY M.C.MARSH, Journal 40, 1960, pp. 219-39. Precis of findings in South African Phd. dissertation based on experiments in distance ESP. Around 370 subjects, students at Rhodes University, reproduced 17,000 target drawings made 470 miles away in Capetown. Highly significant deviations from chance expectation were recorded compared with a control series. When the subjects were divided into a high-scoring and low-scoring group the former proved to be significantly more extraverted, as measured by the Bernreuter B31 scale. The data also showed several other relationships and trends predicted by the work of previous experiments, although these did not reach statistical significance. Scott, C. & Goldney, K.M. THE JONES BOYS AND THE ULTRASONIC WHISTLE, Journal 40, 1960, pp. 249-60. Examines a suggestion made by a sceptic, Hansel, that two Welsh boys testing successfully for ESP may in fact have signalled to each other using ultrasonic whistles that adults, with somewhat diminished hearing, would not be able to perceive. Initial experiments fail, but subsequently the authors discover a whistle that can be activated by a small bulb worked by the hand, and concealed under clothing. This is shown to be capable of creating the impression of ESP effects without detection. The boys are subsequently retested in a BBC programme, but no significant results are recorded. No conclusion is drawn regarding the boys, but the authors argue that the method is clearly viable and should have been identified earlier. Scott, C. NOTES ON SOME CRITICISMS OF THE SOAL-GOLDNEY EXPERIMENTS, Journal 40, 1960, pp. 299-308. Describes investigations into non-psi hypotheses put forward by sceptics to account for the unusually high-scores in the Soal-Goldney experiments with Basil Shackleton. Regarding claims that the experimental controls did not rule out fraud, which could therefore have accounted for the results, Scott demonstrates that the three methods proposed are neither indicated nor contra-indicated by the evidence to any important degree, cannot be tested, or conflict strongly with the evidence. Turning to C.E.M. Hansel's hypothesis of card substitution, a reconstruction indicated that such a method could theoretically have been employed undetected. Gooch, S.A. RE-THINKING TO SOME PURPOSE IN EXPERIMENTAL RESEARCH, Journal 40, 1960, pp. 362-7. Indicates some of the limitations of current quantitative research, in particular of classical card-guessing experiments, and suggests modifications and alternatives. Criticises the emphasis given by Rhine to experimental ESP at the expense of spontaneous phenomena, which the author argues has tended to give a distorted view of its nature. Draws attention to the role of emotion in spontaneous phenomena and in the work of mediums, and the need for training. Argues that researchers favouring the experimental method should learn from the approach taken by mediums. Two separate approaches are needed: with repetition sought on the one hand through the experimental method by reproduction of the conditions involved in spontaneous phenomena, and on the other by the subject acquiring volitional control over the faculty. Scott, Christopher. MODELS FOR PSI, Proceedings 53, 1961, pp. 195-222. A 'model' for psi is an account of how psi operates; it does not explain psi but describes its behaviour. Examples of some possible models are these: (1) Psi occurs intermittently, and when it occurs ensures complete success; (2) When psi occurs it multiplies the probability of success by 2; (3) When psi occurs it gives information only on what the target is not. ESP and PK are themselves examples of general models for psi, one implying that the subject's calls are influenced by psi towards agreement with a randomizer, the other that the randomizer (die) is influenced by psi towards agreement with the subject's 'calls' (or targets). These and other models can be rigorously discriminated by means of appropriate experimental procedures, described here, which involve only minor changes in the standard ESP experiments. It is suggested that these changes should be introduced into all future ESP experiments, even those conducted for other purposes. Once a generous enough source of psi is available, such an experimental program would give some definite answers to definite questions about psi. PsiLine psi/experiments/methodology/theory

One study reported that cases in hospital suffering from concussion showed significantly greater ESP capacity than two normal control groups. Work is being carried out aimed at establishing a correlation between fluctuations in a subject's CFF level (critical fusion frequency, the rate at which a point of light that is flickering off and on appears continuous to an observer) and in his score in a card guessing situation. All six subjects thus far studied have scored significantly below chance, one in particular scoring so far below chance as to be significant at the 1 in 1,000 level. Other investigations of the CFF variable in relation to ESP score are being planned. PsiLine. telepathy/clairvoyance/experiments/methodology

West, D.J. ESP THE NEXT STEP, Proceedings 54, 1965, pp. 185-202. Reflects on the problems involved in ESP research, in which successes are sporadic and hard to build on. The absence of experiment repeatable at will has encouraged sceptics to dismiss the phenomenon; however West believes the recorded evidence is too persistent and sometimes of too high a quality to be dismissed. He briefly reviews the history of ESP research, in which apparent break-throughs are followed by failure to confirm or reproduce the initial findings. He refers to nineteenth-century French experiments by hypnotists, and the contrast between the ease with which Gilbert Murray and Oliver Lodge received their highly significant results on the one hand and on the other the relative paucity of the phenomenon emerging from the statistical work of Stuart and Carington. He goes on to consider the card-guessing experiments at Duke University, where promises of a break-through were not fulfilled. The real difficulty, West maintains, is the failure of experimenters to establish any consistent characteristics in ESP. He refers to a suggestion for ESP experiments by Christopher Scott requiring the availability of an accessible high-scoring subject (Proceedings 53, 1961, pp. 195-225). But he doubts whether even a consistent scorer would resolve the problems. West concludes that two points emerge: that under continued scrutiny the phenomenon seems to disappear, and that the experimenter imposes his stamp on the results obtained. This can be compared with psychological phenomena, such as the usefulness of placebos in medicine until either doctor or patient lose their attitude of naïve confidence. There is another parallel in psychoanalysis: West notes the transparent simplicity of the webs of self-deception produced by Freud's first neurotic patients, compared with the more complex and elaborate defences encountered today. He also points out that the gross hysterical symptoms such as functional paralysis or blindness, common in the nineteenth century, have been replaced by more obscure dyspepsias and cardio-vascular symptoms. If the growth of psychological resistance is behind the decline of ESP, he suggests, experiments with primitive peoples and young children might offer a way forward. Subjects who succeed in statistical experiments, but who do not show evidence of ESP in real life, may be benefiting from the conditions to overcome this resistance. On this reasoning, West suggests the use of techniques 'that decrease the subject's awareness of the conflict between extra-sensory impressions and the immediate reality of the senses' (196). He develops this theme, with references to dream experiments by Douglas Dean and the analysis of spontaneous episodes by Louisa Rhine and Celia Green. psi/methodology/theory

Stephenson, C.J. CAMBRIDGE ESP-HYPNOSIS EXPERIMENTS 1958-64, Journal 43, 1965, pp. 77-91. Fifty subjects were tested in six series of ESP experiments involving hypnosis. The following hypotheses have been investigated: (a) ESP receiving ability is improved under hypnosis; (b) ESP receiving ability is related to hypnotisability; and (c) ESP receiving ability can be developed by training or learning under hypnosis. The experiments as a whole do not support any of these hypotheses at a significant level, but there are weak indications that ESP may have been operating in two of the series. Earlier research indicates the interrelation of extrasensory perception (ESP) and various personality factors. This project was undertaken to discover if certain aspects of childhood experience which affect the later personality also affect ESP. A short test for ESP and a questionnaire on childhood incorporating questions on birth order and family size were printed in a 'glossy' magazine and a national daily paper. Among 756 magazine readers, those who had been only, eldest, or younger children obtained 'post-cognitive' ESP scores that differed significantly from one another, and there was some variation of 'post-cognitive' ESP scores with family size. No significant results emerged from the 5,374 replies of the newspaper population. Socioeconomic factors may explain the difference between the two populations. Garnett, A. Campbell. DID SHACKLETON DEMONSTRATE PRECOGNITION?, Journal 43, 1965, pp. 195-200. It has been argued that the results of Soal and Goldney's experiments with Basil Shackleton cannot be explained as due to any combination of clairvoyance and telepathy but require us to recognize the operation of precognition. Two main reasons for this opinion are (1) that in those parts of the experiment designed to test his capacity for clairvoyance Shackleton's score did not rise significantly above chance; (2) that in that part of the test in which Mrs. Goldney used counters and presented them at double the usual rate there was, at the instant when Shackleton wrote down his guess, no cue in existence to which his guess could be either a clairvoyant or a telepathic response. The author holds that both of these objections are open to question and that the results obtained can be explained without recourse to precognition. Argues, against the first, that Shackleton's main interest was to predict, and that he, in effect, subconsciously scuttled the clairvoyance tests because he knew that his success would undermine his whole claim to precognition. Argues, against the second, that the experimental set-up was such as to allow for a clairvoyant response even in those situations thought by the experimenters to be incompatible with an explanation in terms of clairvoyance. Concludes that neither the experiment as a whole, nor any part of it, can be claimed to constitute a demonstration of precognition. PsiLine. psi/precognition/clairvoyance/experiments

Soal, S.G. et al. DID SHACKLETON DEMONSTRATE PRECOGNITION, Journal 43, 1966, pp. 250-51. Argues that Garnett's thesis that Shackleton could have achieved his displacement effects by means of clairvoyance alone, without any precognition of a future content of the agent's mind is ingenious but only a guess. Finds, on the contrary, many indications that displacement in time, either into the future or into the past, was the peculiar mode in which Shackleton's ESP faculty worked in conjunction with a certain type of agent. (Correction, p. 333). PsiLine See also: Garnett, A. Campbell. DID SHACKLETON DEMONSTRATE PRECOGNITION?, Journal 43, 1965, pp. 195-200. Garnett, A. Campbell. REPLY TO DR. SOAL, pp. 251-2. Admits that Soal's remarks somewhat weaken his contention that Shackleton was unconsciously using clairvoyance to demonstrate precognition, but argues that a case can still be made because of the time lapse between the signal and the instant when Shackleton made his guess. This time lapse, he argues, presents a very definite possibility that the results were due to clairvoyance rather than precognition. PsiLine Soal, S.G. p. 252. Agrees that clairvoyance is a possible explanation for the forward displacement effect and that precognition could not be demonstrated without much more elaborate apparatus and electronic timing arrangements. The most the author would claim for these experiments is that there was a displacement of Shackleton's correct guesses onto adjacent target cards. Further, this phenomenon was obtained as far back as 1936 using an entirely different experimental set-up and with several agents. PsiLine.

Rollo, Colin. THOMAS BAYES AND THE BUNDLE OF STICKS, Proceedings 55, 1966, pp. 23-64. Author's abstract: The intentions of this paper are (1) to examine the validity of combining many pieces of imperfect evidence so as to strengthen the total evidence in favour of some psi-hypothesis; (2) to make clear the assumptions which are entailed by accepting or rejecting the validity of such a procedure; and (3) to indicate certain problems of estimation which require solution or agreement before any final verdict can be given. Attention is concentrated on testimony concerning alleged spontaneous psi experiences, and no reference is made to other fields (e.g. evaluation of experimental results) in which a technique suggested might in practice be easier to apply. It is not the purpose of this paper to attempt any assessment of the actual evidence available. A numerical example is given to illustrate the power of the method suggested, but no support is implied for the specific assumptions leading to any particular result.

Green, C.E. EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION AND THE MAUDSLEY PERSONALITY INVENTORY, Journal 43, 1966, pp. 285-6. [Author's abstract alone published here]. Forty Oxford University undergraduates, tested individually, were the subjects in this experiment. Each subject was first given a GESP test consisting of 100 Zener cards. Only two symbols were used ('star' and 'cross'), so the series were binary ones. The GESP test was followed by administration of the MPI. Only one ('direct') score was extracted for each subject. Subjects were then divided into 'above chance scorers' (those who made 51 or more correct guesses) and 'below chance scorers' (those who made 49 or fewer correct guesses). The mean extraversion scores of these two groups were then compared by means of the test. No significant difference emerged between the two groups. Similarly, the mean neuroticism scores of the two groups did not differ significantly from each other. A second analysis was performed which included only those who scored 56 or more hits in the 'above chance' group, and only those who scored 44 or less in the 'below chance' group. On the neuroticism dimension these two groups now showed a marginally significant difference. The mean N-score for the 'above chance' group was 26.89, while the mean N-score for the 'below chance' group was 16.80 ( $V = 66.76$ ,  $t = 2.21$ ,  $0.02 < p < 0.05$ , for a one tailed test). In view of the smallness of the numbers involved ( $N = 9$  in the former group, and  $N = 5$  in the latter), and the fact that no prediction was made as to the direction of the difference that might be found, it may be doubted whether any significance is to be attached to this finding. It is at least worthy of note, however, that the difference was in the direction opposite to that which has been observed by other experimenters. Further work with the MPI is being planned. Green, C.E. EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION AND THE EXTRAVERSION SCALE OF THE MAUDSLEY PERSONALITY INVENTORY, Journal 43, 1966, p. 337. [Author's abstract, alone published here.] 108 subjects were used in this experiment, and they were tested in three different groups ( $N_1 = 37$ ,  $N_2 = 22$ ,  $N_3 = 49$ ). The ESP test in each case consisted of a binary random series of 30 Zener symbols ('star' or 'cross'). The questionnaire consisted of the 24  $\alpha$ -scale questions of the MPI. Three ESP scores (0), (+1) and (1) were extracted for each subject. In none of these positions was a significant difference found between the mean  $\alpha$ -scores of above and below chance scorers. Likewise, no significant difference was found in any of these 3 positions between the mean  $\alpha$ -scores of 'chance' scorers (those who obtained from 13 to 17 'hits') and 'away from chance' scorers (those who scored more than 17 or less than 13 'hits'). The failure to find any correlation between  $\alpha$ -score and ESP score in this work may simply have been due to the fact that ESP was not operating on any of the three occasions, since neither collectively nor individually did the three groups' overall ESP scores deviate significantly from chance expectation. Further work is being undertaken, making use of the MPI in its entirety, and testing the subjects individually rather than in groups. PsiLine psi/personality/experiments/methodology

pp. 422-7. The aim of this experiment was to devise a means of testing ESP which would be more interesting to experimental subjects than the traditional activity of card guessing and which should produce a consistently good level of scoring. Describes the method of experiment designed and tabulates the results obtained. The experiment seems to have succeeded in the first object; experimental subjects reported that they found the task an interesting one. The experiment, however, failed in the second object; no consistently high level of scoring was obtained, nor was there any marginally significant excess (or deficiency) of right responses. This may indicate the wrongness of the initial expectation that a more interesting and creative test of ESP would lead to higher scoring, or it may indicate some deficiency in either the experimenter or the test material itself. Further tests, suitably modified, may help to determine which of these possibilities is the more likely. PsiLine. psi/experiments/methodology

An account of an experiment to see whether vasoconstriction responses on the part of a subject would coincide with stimulations given to an agent in an adjacent room with all normal means of communication blocked. Reviews the literature on extrasensory stimulation of physiological responses and describes the method used in this particular experiment. The results confirm earlier report that an agent looking at targets of names can stimulate more and larger plethysmograph responses than normal in a percipient in an adjoining room. The reported effect was, in this case, transferred to a new laboratory, with a new subject, under controlled conditions with an observer present, and with an independent experimenter controlling the double blind method used to assess the results. Concludes that the plethysmograph can be used to measure the psi effect if emotionally laden stimuli are used and if inhibitory factors of an emotional and physiological nature are absent. PsiLine. Green, C.E. A NEW APPLICATION OF ELECTROPHYSIOLOGICAL TECHNIQUES TO THE STUDY OF EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION, Journal 44, 1967, pp. 51-2. [Author's abstract, alone published here]. The most urgent need in parapsychology is for a repeatable experiment. It is argued that the reason why this has not yet been achieved is because we do not yet know what are the conditions that favour ESP's occurrence. The hypothesis is put forward that the crucial condition is the psychological state of the subject at the time of attempting ESP. A method of determining this state in objective terms is proposed: this consists of taking one or more continuous physiological variables (e.g. a rhythm frequency) and attempting a statistical correlation of this variable with the ESP variable measured in terms of degree of success at a card guessing task, for instance. Data illustrative of this method are presented: the variable concerned is the subject's CFF. The results are in line with the prediction made (that a positive correlation will be found between degree of ESP success and CFF), but failed to reach statistical significance. It is hoped, nevertheless, that the data may serve to illustrate a new use for electrophysiological apparatus in the study of ESP, and that this approach may be adopted by other workers in the field: hitherto such apparatus has only been used as an indicator of ESP a procedure which, though valid in itself as a way of registering unverbalizable ESP responses, does not advance our knowledge of the conditions under which ESP takes place. Eysenck, HJ. PERSONALITY AND EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION, Journal 44, 1967, pp. 55-71. (1) The hypothesis has been deduced from facts and theories in the general psychology, personality theory, and the body of knowledge comprising ESP research, that introverts would make relatively poor psi subjects, while extraverts would make relatively good psi subjects. (2) A survey of the literature showed surprising agreement on the better performance of extraverted subjects as compared with introverted subjects on GESP tests. (3) It was argued that for a proper understanding of the relation between psi performance and personality it would be necessary to apply standard psychometric methods to psi scores; in particular the absence of any knowledge regarding the reliability of these scores was deplored. (4) It was argued that experimental studies varying the arousal level of subjects would give additional information of great interest to the general hypothesis advanced, and it was suggested that such studies would require the inclusion of personality inventories, as personality traits such as extraversion and emotionality would act as modifier variables. (5) It was suggested that the search for evidence in favour of the existence of ESP had concentrated too much on differences from chance of mean or average scores, and that alternative statistical methods were available which might in fact show significance even where traditional methods had failed to find any significance. Pratt, J.G. A COMPUTER PROGRAMME FOR ESP GROUP TESTS, Journal 44, 1967, pp. 71-82. The aim of this study was to develop a procedure that could be broadly applied in ESP experiments in which the data could be collected in a suitable form for immediate computer processing. A simple computer program is used for the preparation of ESP targets by instructing the machine to generate a pseudo-random order of digits. These are then converted to a random sequence of the digits 15 that are punched on IBM cards in groups of 25 digits. Each such target card is identified by a serial number. Subjects attempt, in the ESP test, to punch digits on special response cards to match those on a designated concealed target card. The target cards and subjects' response cards are then processed through the computer with the main program, which provides for analysing and evaluating the ESP data and other information recorded by the subjects in a variety of ways and for printing out the results. Green, C.E. EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION AND THE MAUDSLEY PERSONALITY INVENTORY: AN EXPERIMENT USING 259 UNIVERSITY STUDENTS, Journal 44, 1967, pp. 104-5. [Author's abstract only]. A GESP test was administered to a group of 259 University undergraduates. The target series consisted of a binary random sequence of 100 Zener symbols ('star' and 'cross'). A significant negative deviation of the overall group score from chance expectation was observed in the (+1) position. The observed deviation from chance was 2.66 times the binomial standard deviation, and thus corresponded to a p-value of less than 0.01. This value must be multiplied by a factor of 3 to allow for three possible scoring positions having been taken into account, but after having been so multiplied it is still significant at the 0.05 level ( $0.01 \times 3 = 0.03$ ). A difference also emerged in the (+1) position between the average Neuroticism score (as measured by the MPI) of those who scored at least 59/96 correct (+1) guesses and those who scored at most 37/96 correct (+1) guesses. The mean N-score of the first group was 35.00, while the mean N-score of the second group was 25.56. This difference is not significant when assessed by means of the test; there were only four subjects in the first group and nine subjects in the second group. However, the observed difference is in the same direction as that found in an earlier experiment [PsiLine: 12919]. When the four runs of 25 guesses are considered in temporal sequence, there is apparent a consistent decline in the magnitude of the deviation from chance of the overall score. PsiLine. Trance induction was initiated using ideomotor techniques with visual fixation and later, imagery. Procedures for deepening hypnosis were employed for approximately one hour. Trance depths sufficient to produce positive and negative hallucinations in both visual and auditory senses were achieved. Training for ESP began after this trance stage was reached. The subjects were induced to 'dream' with eyes closed, of an object placed in front of them. They were asked to 'visualize' the object and were guided by the investigator in this task, even to mentally picking up the object while still in hypnosis. The subjects then gave their impressions, quite frequently with a discussion amongst themselves. If incorrect, they were immediately corrected by the observer. Following this, they opened their eyes, looked at the object, closed their eyes and again visualized the object. Three to four objects were used during each session. Direct suggestions that the state of hypnosis would produce clairvoyance were not given. While still in a trance state, the subjects were tested for ability to use ESP to visualize correctly an IBM card which was prepared by the computer programme described by Dr. J.G. Pratt in this issue of the Journal of the Society for Psychical Research. They recorded their impressions directly to the IBM Port-A-Punch cards, which were later analysed by the computer. Duplicate response cards made it possible for the subjects to know their scores immediately following cessation of the trance state. At the end of a three month period of weekly training sessions, none of the statistical measures applied showed any improvement in ESP performance which was limited to clairvoyance by the experimental procedure. Four subjects completed the training and testing sessions. An additional two subjects dropped out after six weeks of training (also evaluated). Forty-nine IBM cards were used, giving a total of 1225 individual targets for each subject who completed the study. Thus the hypothesis that one or more individuals in a group of subjects placed simultaneously in a hypnotic trance could be taught to differentiate between veridical and false imagined visual impressions of an object which they did not see, was not confirmed. It is obvious that the conditions in the present study were not identical to those used by Dr. Ryzl. It is not possible, therefore, to draw any conclusions from the failure of the present effort that bear adversely upon Dr. Ryzl's claims. The present results, taken together with the unsuccessful attempts of other investigators, do suggest that the problem is a complex one probably to a greater degree than even Dr. Ryzl himself originally recognized. Trials have been carried out by telephone communication and recorded on magnetic recording tape of a case of alleged telepathy between a mother and her son, a spastic subject. The distance between the telephones has varied from 0.59 to 9.7 kilometres. One such trial is recorded in detail in this paper. Letters or numbers were presented to the mother and the replies of the son were recorded, as well as the mother's remarks. Over 30% of the letters or numbers were guessed correctly the first time. Of the two possibilities that an unconscious code or telepathy is in operation, the writers incline to the view that it is a case of telepathy. PsiLine. telepathy/experiments

Beloff, John. THE 'SWEETHEARTS' EXPERIMENT, Journal 45, 1969, pp. 1-7. It is a common assumption that telepathy, if it exists, is more likely to occur between individuals who are emotionally linked to one another than between two unrelated individuals. Although the primary objective in this investigation was to find promising

ESP subjects using the newly built Edinburgh Electronic ESP Tester, the author decided that, at the same time, he would test this hypothesis and in so doing enhance the psychological interest of the task. The relationship he chose to study was that which holds between two young people who consider themselves to be in love with one another. Twenty couples were selected and each individual had to do 5 runs, giving a total of 200 runs or 5,000 guesses on which results could be based. The results showed that mutual attraction between two people is not sufficient to insure telepathic rapport in the guessing situation described. PsiLine CORRESPONDENCE, Journal 45, 1970, pp. 427-8. Brodbeck, T.J. ESP AND PERSONALITY, Journal 45, 1969, pp. 31-2. The aim of this GESP group card guessing experiment was to find evidence in support of the relations found in the past between card score and (a) sheep/goat attitudes, (b) birth order, and (c) extraversion. Three scoring directions were checked. (0, +1, 1). The reliability of the scores was computed, and also, since one of the characteristic differences between extraverts and introverts is the greater variability of the extravert, the reliability of introverts and extraverts was compared. After a talk, the 34 subjects, mostly undergraduates, made four runs of 25 guesses at randomised Zener cards looked at by an agent in a separate room. Synchronization was by intercom. Subjects also completed an E.P.I. (Form B) and answered a questionnaire. No significant results were found in either the 0 or the 1 scoring directions. The results in the +1 direction only are quoted in the accompanying table and accordingly the p-values have been trebled. While the experiment generally gave non-significant results it is perhaps worth noting (a) The correlation with N is in the same direction as observed by Green, (b) The 'introverts' show a better reliability than the 'extraverts.' Medhurst, R.G. NOTE ON THE 'ESP' CARDS DESIGNED IN THE PARAPSYCHOLOGY LABORATORY, DUKE UNIVERSITY, Journal 45, 1969, pp. 81-5. A brief review of the historical position with regard to the reliability of ESP cards for experimental work. Summarizes the problems in using so-called 'Zener cards' for experimental purposes, finding that no version of the cards presently in use is proof against seeing their backs under certain conditions. It appears to the author astonishing that the defect has not been remedied since it was first pointed out in 1937. PsiLine Thouless, R. H. ESP CARDS, pp. 187-8. Since Mr. Medhurst was kind enough to mention that I was one of the first to point out that the symbol on some of the early ESP cards could be seen when light was reflected from the back, I feel somewhat concerned with the implications of his note on the subject in the June Journal. When I found out that the figures on ESP cards could be identified from the back, I reported the fact to J.B. Rhine and he told me that his laboratory had already adopted the rule that, for crucial experiments on ESP the backs of cards used must not be seen by experimental subjects. That seemed (and still seems) to me a sufficient answer to any doubts raised by the imperfection of the cards. It is also, of course, the case that, about this time, techniques of experimenting were being adopted (such as 'down through' calling) in which neither subject nor experimenter saw the backs of the cards till all calls were completed. Brookes-Smith, C. & Hunt, D.W. SOME EXPERIMENTS IN PSYCHOKINESIS, Journal 45, 1970, pp. 265-81. The procedures followed in a series of attempts to produce physical phenomena were based on the belief that ordinary individuals not just specially gifted mediums can bring about such phenomena provided they acquire certain favourable psychological skills. The experimenters also attempted to instrument some of the sittings in the hope that quantitative measurements could be provided to replace human testimony as the criterion for paranormality in such cases. There were four sitters in most of the sessions. In several series of sittings (some in full light and some in red light) the following phenomena were reported: rappings, violent table movements and lévitations, movement of a chair without contact, spilled liquids, and the lighting of a lamp apparatus activated, at some distance, in response to a command or an unspoken thought. The main recording device was a specially built skotograph with connected amplifier and oscillograph. This device was intended to record on continuously moving film any Occultations' or physical force that were produced. No unambiguous imprints were obtained with this instrument, however. It was concluded that the best hope for demonstrating repeatable and controllable telekinetic phenomena lies in developing the lamp apparatus. PsiLine psychokinesis/experiments

Randall, J.L. AN ATTEMPT TO DETECT PSI EFFECTS WITH PROTOZOA, Journal 45, 1970, pp. 294-6. The design of this experiment was similar to that of Nigel Richmond. An attempt was made to 'will' the microscopic animal Stylonychia to swim in a chosen direction under the microscope. The field of view was divided into four quadrants, and a target quadrant was chosen by turning up a card from a pack of 40 cards containing four symbols, each symbol representing a quadrant. A neon light timing device was used giving 15 seconds in which to concentrate on the target quadrant. The experiments were conducted in runs of 20, alternate runs being controls in which the cards were not turned up until the end of the run. Of 280 willed trials, 72 were hits (MCE = 70); and of the 280 controls, 75 were hits. The experiment thus gave no indication of a psi effect. PsiLine DMILS/experiments

The first, experiments with the Edinburgh Electronic ESP Tester (EET), yielded null results as did the second, A GSRESP Experiment. The third, consisting of additional experiments using the Edinburgh Guessing Test (EGT), did not yield significant results but there were some indications that, if it were to be used in conjunction with a suitable diagnostic questionnaire, it might be possible to predict which set of subjects would score positively, which negatively, and which would fall within chance expectation. Research is continuing at present using a first draft of such a diagnostic questionnaire. PsiLine psi/experiments/methodology

Thouless, Robert H. THE MEASUREMENT OF EFFICIENCY OF ESP, Journal 45, 1970, pp. 323-5. An index of psi efficiency is a necessary tool in comparing degrees of success in different psi tasks involving different probabilities of chance hits. Two such indexes are offered. The first is based on an 'all-or-none' assumption that each response is either completely determined by psi or completely accidental. The second index is based on the assumption that in a successful ESP experiment the probability of a correct response is increased by an equal amount for all responses. This is referred to as the 'Equally Enhanced Probabilities' assumption. The two indexes, though based on different assumptions about the nature of psi, are identical. There may be other bases for deriving an index of psi efficiency for instance, information theory. In any case, an index of efficiency is needed. PsiLine psi/experiments/methodology/theory

Thouless, Robert H. EXPERIMENTS ON PSI SELF-TRAINING WITH DR. SCHMIDT'S PRECOGNITIVE APPARATUS, Journal 46, 1971, pp. 15-21. The author was interested in the problem of whether the experimenting parapsychologist can train himself to score reliably in a psi task. Using Schmidt's electronic apparatus with four colored lights, he conducted experimental sessions in which the lights alternately showed and did not show (did not give feedback) on the apparatus. Although there was some suggestion of a learning effect, it did not reach the level of significance and the author considered the experiment a failure. PsiLine precognition/experiments/methodology

The authors hoped to add to the evidence for ESP from automated equipment which has already been reported by Schmidt. They used a machine which was functionally and electronically different from Schmidt's, and which was primarily designed for a telepathic or GESP-type test condition, rather than precognition. A subsidiary aim of the experiment was to compare conditions of testing. Although the overall results failed to provide evidence of ESP and thus replicate the Schmidt findings, they did indicate the superiority of delayed feedback as against immediate feedback to the subject. This series of experiments was carried out to determine whether a psi interchange could operate between man and small animals in this case, the common woodlouse. A petri dish was placed in the centre of a large circle which was divided into five sectors, each marked with one of the five ESP symbols. A woodlouse was placed in the dish, and the subject (one of a group of grammar school boys) then looked at a card from a randomised pack of ESP cards, endeavouring to 'will' the animal toward the corresponding section within the circle. The experimenter did not know which sector was the target. The overall scoring was positive but not significant. PsiLine animal psi/DMILS/experiments

Randall, J.L. TWO PSI EXPERIMENTS WITH GERBILS, Journal 46, 1972, pp. 22-30. The purpose of this experiment was to develop a rapid and easy method of testing psi between humans and animals. Gerbils were placed in a testing apparatus that contained six wooden blocks, three on the left and three on the right side of an open topped box. The subject, sitting behind a screen, attempted to influence the animal by psi to jump up on the blocks on the left or the right according to a random target order. The subjects were 13 to 14year old English schoolboys. There were two series of runs, one aimed at positive scoring (psi-hitting) and one at negative scoring (psi-missing).

The data were to be evaluated for hits on the (+1) and (1) targets as well as for the direct (0) target. The overall scoring on the direct target gave insignificant results. Two individually outstanding subjects scored significantly on the (1) displacement position. The test procedure was deemed to be very successful with respect to ease and rapidity of administration. Randall, J.L. RECENT EXPERIMENTS IN ANIMAL PARAPSYCHOLOGY, Journal 46, 1972, pp. 124-35. Surveys psi experiments in which humans attempt to psychically influence animal behaviour and recent experiments attempting to determine whether animals have psi abilities devoid of a human E's presence. Although some statistically significant results have been reported, it is cautioned that their explanations must be viewed critically. An experiment by W. J. Levy and E. Andre with chickens and a Schmidt random number generator is discussed, demonstrating an excess of Ons' for a heat lamp on nights when chickens were present, when compared to control nights without chickens. Similar findings were reported using eggs. Chance and fraud were negated as explanations. It is concluded that regarding the psi property not as a property of an individual organism but instead as a property of the interpersonal field, a result of the interaction of the personalities involved in the experiment, may suggest an explanation in terms of some exterior psychic entity. Billig, Michael. POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE EXPERIMENTAL PSI RESULTS IN PSYCHOLOGY AND PARAPSYCHOLOGY JOURNALS, Journal 46, 1972, pp. 136-42. In general, Journals of parapsychology tend to publish only reports of experiments that show positive evidence of psi. There are few reports of negative findings (about 11% of the total number of articles from 1960-70). However, analysis of those psi research reports published in psychology Journals during the same period shows that a significant proportion (38.5%) of those articles were negative (i.e., showed no evidence of psi). It is not known whether this is due to author selection, Journal selection, or both.

Determination of this would indicate whether psychology Journals are more sceptical toward parapsychology experiments than psychology experiments. PsiLine

Millar, Brian. AN INEXPENSIVE PORTABLE ELECTRONIC ESP TESTER, Journal 47, 1973, pp. 90-95. Over the last few years there have been a number of ESP test machines designed and built. However, from the point of view of the amateur psychical researcher there are several major drawbacks in most of them, e.g., cost, non-portability, non-availability of components, lack of adaptability and excessive complexity. In the following design I have tried to eliminate these objections, especially that of cost. As a consequence the machine to be described is a 'practical' one, not a sophisticated laboratory model. As I describe it the apparatus is intended for fast and convenient preliminary testing, any successful subjects could then be retested in the standard way with cards. The design here, however, can be used, inter alia, as a basis for a more fully rigorous tester. Indeed, this design is intended to be altered according to the task for which it is required. I have suggested several possible modifications; however, I am sure there are many others which experimenters will wish to pursue. PsiLine psi/experiments/methodology

Barrington, M.R. A FREE RESPONSE SHEEP/GOAT EXPERIMENT USING AN IRRELEVANT TASK, Journal 47, 1973, pp. 222-45. Experiment aimed at using ESP to influence subjects' recollections while performing a memory task. During each of 18 trials the subjects were shown a series of titled pictures of different objects. Later they were asked to write down as many of the names of the objects as they could recall. ESP agents in an adjacent room were simultaneously presented with another series of pictures illustrative of a single target theme, one unrelated to the material seen by the subjects. The recollections recorded by the subjects did not always correspond to what they had seen. Their false recollections were abstracted and examined to see if they corresponded to the target theme. The scoring was done by independent judges who were asked to mark each item (i.e., each false recollection) against all 18 target themes, awarding 0 to 5 according to the degree of correspondence. The results were evaluated by testing whether the items from any particular trial produced a higher scoring rate on the theme belonging to that trial than on the other themes. According to a questionnaire, subjects fell into four categories: moderate believers (17), uncertain but inclined to believe (25), unconvinced (2) and doubtful (3). The moderate believers scored marginally above chance level ( $p = .054$ ) and all four groups scored in descending order ( $p = .042$ ). The difference in scoring level between the two more extreme groups was of the same order ( $p = .045$ ). The advantages of this indirect method of ESP testing, and the technical problems involved, are discussed. PsiLine psi/personality/experiments/methodology

Scott, C. & Haskell, P. THE SOAL-GOLDNEY EXPERIMENTS WITH BASIL SHACKLETON: A DISCUSSION - [I] FRESH LIGHT ON THE SHACKLETON EXPERIMENTS?, Proceedings 56, 1974, pp. 43-72. Discusses a claim by Gretl Albert, a sitter in the Soal-Goldney precognition experiments with Basil, she had seen Soal altering his record sheets, changing Is into 4s and 5s. Since this claim was made in 1941 the scoring patterns and random sequence of the targets had been frequently re-examined. Soal, having lost the original score sheets, had given a detailed description of how he had derived the targets. The available copies were submitted to a computer search carried out by G. Medhurst in 1971 which however failed to identify the target sequences as described by Soal. A new computer analysis finds definite evidence in support of the claim for the sittings specified. But there is clear evidence that this specific manipulation did not take place in the great majority of sittings. Scott and Haskell looked for data support of the manipulation hypothesis in terms of four predictions: (1) an overall deficit of target 1; (2) an overall excess of targets 4 and 5; (3) a deficit of target 1 in those trials in which the guess was 4 or 5; and (4) an excess of hits on 4 and 5. The first two predictions were not upheld; the second two gave a significance level that virtually rules out chance as an explanation. To accommodate these seemingly conflicting results, Scott and Haskell modified their hypothesis, suggesting that the targets were 'stacked' in advance with an excess of Is and a deficit of 4s and 5s. This modified hypothesis accounts for the ESP score in Sitting 16, as well as Sittings 8 and 17, but not for any of the rest of the 40 sittings. An alternative hypothesis is that the observed effects were due to ESP operating in an eccentric manner. Since so much about ESP is not known, this hypothesis cannot be rigorously tested or refuted. But Scott and Haskell feel that such a hypothesis appears uncomfortably complex and the coincidence with the alteration claim still has to be swallowed. They conclude there is a strong case for accepting the essential truth of the claim, arguing that it would then seem unlikely that any significant proportion of the results in the Shackleton series was obtained by extrasensory perception. Beloff, John. V WHY I BELIEVE THAT SOAL IS INNOCENT, Proceedings 56, 1974, pp. 93-6. Points out two errors by Soal: his failure to let other experimenters confirm Shackleton's ability independently, or to leave precise explanations of how the target sequence was determined. But believes Soal to be innocent of the charge of manipulation, explaining Shackleton's pattern of scoring in terms of positional biases, which he argues are by no means unknown in ESP research. The EEET is a randomiser which selects 1 of 5 lamps to be subsequently illuminated on a display panel. The S has a similar display panel on which he presses the button that he thinks corresponds to the lamp illuminated on the agent's panel. A controlled card-guessing series followed the screening. The successful card-guessing results posed a fundamental problem in parapsychology: Why were two high scoring subjects found in a sample of 25? The possible influence of such factors as expectancy, rapport, and changes in subjective state in producing high ESP scores is considered. PsiLine psi/personality/experiments/methodology

Beloff, John. ESP: THE SEARCH FOR A PHYSIOLOGICAL INDEX, Journal 47, 1974, pp. 403-20. The increasing use of a physiological approach to parapsychology may be of particular value for several reasons: (1) In view of the unconsciousness of psi, this approach might make it circumvent the conscious decision-making process (traditionally involved in ESP-symbol guessing) by such means as detecting an ESP-mediated physiological response to an emotive target. (2) This method may make it possible to detect physiological states which correlate with positive scoring. (3) Psi-conductive states could perhaps be brought about via biofeedback techniques. (4) Physical bases for psi might be uncovered by psycho-physiological methods (such as the means of transmission of the psi message and the means whereby the brain receives and decodes psi information). Out of a number of possible physiological measures, research attention has been focused on the brain, specifically on EEG patterns, and on the activity of the autonomic nervous system (as measured by the plethysmograph and the GSR). The results of EEG studies are ambiguous, sometimes because of the absence of strong ESP effects in the data, one exception being Morris's study of an established psychic in which a relationship was seen between psi performance and alpha activity, an instance which runs counter to the trend of most studies, in which it is questionable that psi had entered into the data. At the very least, the methodology of psychophysiology has enlarged the parapsychologist's repertoire; at the most, it may enable experimenters to pick up ESP signals directly from the brain, where they are too feeble to penetrate the subject's conscious field of awareness. Even if the physiological approach still has not yet vindicated its worth, it can be expected to remain an integral part of experimental parapsychology for a long time to come. Randall, John L. CARD-GUESSING EXPERIMENTS WITH SCHOOLBOYS, Journal 47, 1974, pp. 421-32. Tested 169 boys 13 and 14 years old to obtain evidence of ESP and to investigate the possible correlations between psi ability and H. J. Eysenck's Neuroticism and Extraversion scores, as well as various other factors, including dream vividness and memory for dreams. Sixteen boys obtained ESP scores of marginal significance. A tendency for clairvoyance condition scores to be positively correlated with those under Generalized ESP was marginally significant. Attempts to show ESP ability correlations with hay fever or liability to suffer from depression or dizziness were not strongly supported. Results did not exhibit a high degree of consistency. The systematic use of variance to estimate the significance of ESP data is explained. PsiLine clairvoyance/precognition/telepathy/experiments/methodology

Randall, John L. AN EXTENDED SERIES OF ESP AND PK TESTS WITH THREE ENGLISH SCHOOLBOYS, Journal 47, 1974, pp. 485-94. An extended series of ESP and PK tests were conducted with three subjects who had previously performed well in classroom experiments on GESP and BT card tests. These three subjects were extensively retested over a period of months with the purpose of: (1) obtaining further significant scoring with the GESP and BT methods and thus confirming ESP in these subjects; (2) trying a variety of psi tests to see if psi could be elicited with other forms of testing; and (3) varying psychological and physical conditions in order to find a most favourable psi-conducive combination. Therefore six different psi tests were administered under a wide variety of conditions. Two subjects were able to repeat their original performance on the GESP and BT card tests by scoring in the predicted direction at a significant level. An analysis of variance showed no evidence that the different ESP tests or the different experimental conditions had any significant effect on the ESP scores. Each subject also carried out PK tests. Subjects had to will a gerbil to move to the left or right side of a box, according to a random target order. One subject scored significantly with  $p < .036$ . Subjects also carried out PK tests on a binary random number generator, but all results with this Schmidt machine were non-significant. One subject's data showed a chronological decline that was statistically significant ( $p < .025$ ). The author rejects the explanation of fatigue as causing the decline and suggests that this effect might be regarded as an habituation phenomenon. PsiLine psi/DMILS/psychokinesis/experiments

Nash, Carroll B. DOMINANT PARTICIPANT EFFECT, Journal 48, 1975, pp. 56-8. Examines the possibility that any of the participants in an experiment may control the distribution of hits and misses in the subject's responses. While psi may be transpersonal (1) and the subject's responses may be affected by several participants in the experiment, in many cases an experimental effect is principally associated with one participant. However, because of the difficulty indicated by these questions of determining the role played by the participant, and because the subject's responses have in different experiments been shown to be affected by the experimenter, by the agent, by the marker and even by other subjects in the experiment (2), it may be preferable to call the action of the effective individual the dominant participant effect. Thouless, Robert H. THE EFFECT OF THE EXPERIMENTER'S ATTITUDE ON EXPERIMENTAL RESULTS IN PARAPSYCHOLOGY, Journal 48, 1976, pp. 261-6. The influence of the experimenter's attitude (including his expectation) on experimental results has been clearly shown in other fields by the work of Rosenthal and others. Recent experimental work in parapsychology suggests that this factor may be especially important in our field and may help to explain many contradictions and anomalies in the experimental results. The importance of this factor lies not so much in experimental work demonstrating psi, but rather in experiments investigating the modus operandi of psi. If the object of the experiment is to find out whether psi scoring is greater under one condition than another, the generally approved design is one in which a pilot experiment precedes the crucial experiment. While this design has many advantages, it also has the psychological disadvantage of focusing the experimenter's attention on the expected result and thus probably maximizing any influence that his expectation may have on that result. An example of an anomaly which may be explained as the fulfillment of the experimenter's expectation is Soal's finding that his two subjects, Basil

Shackleton and Mrs. Stewart, could succeed in ESP experiments only when the agent knew what the target card was. PsiLine psi/personality/experiments/methodology/theory

Brookes-Smith, Colin. SOME LONG-RANGE ESP PROPAGATION EXPERIMENTS, Journal 48, 1976, pp. 269-92. nb. This pagination appears twice in this volume - first go to page 364. The ESP experiments reported here took place in 1974 and 1975 over ranges from 10 to 350 miles and were intended to explore the possibility that ESP involves the temporary formation of a quasi-material agency. If so, there should be a measurable time interval between the application of the agent's target stimulus and the subject's response which would imply a finite propagation velocity. The experimental results suggest that although there are wide variations between individual performance, velocities between three and five miles per second are commonly attained. Mountains and hill country, also woodlands, built-up areas and bad weather conditions appear to vary the velocity. Wiklund, Nils. A PUBLIC EXPERIMENT WITH PRECOGNITION, Journal 48, 1976, pp. 293-300. nb. This pagination appears twice in this volume- first go to page 364. Readers of the Swedish Journal SOKAREN were invited to participate in an ESP experiment by describing one of five pictures hanging 'somewhere in Sweden' and then stating which of the five ESP card symbols was written on the back of that picture. Thirty-three persons submitted responses. Each experimenter independently judged each description by choosing the picture it matched most closely. These decisions were discussed and disagreements were resolved so that a single judgment was achieved. At this time the individual target orders were generated with the use of a random number table. It was hypothesized: (1) that there would be a no chance number of hits on both symbol and picture responses combined; and (2) that there would be a difference in the number of hits on trials using symbols as targets compared to those with pictures. Because of a difference between experimenters in interpreting the algorithm for the entry point into the random number table, two distinct target orders were inadvertently generated. Neither order provided a significant number of hits overall, nor was there any significant difference in the total number of hits between these orders. However, in one list 69% of the hits were in the picture trials; and when the responses were scored against the second list, 61% of the hits fell in the symbol trials. A posthoc analysis revealed that females scored significantly above chance expectation in the more successful target category of each target order ( $p = .004$ , one tailed). The authors discuss these results with respect to the differential effect often observed in parapsychology. PsiLine clairvoyance/precognition/experiments

Eight subject-agent (SA) pairs were employed in an experiment concerning visually-evoked-responses (VERs) and ESP. Half the SA pairs were emotionally close, the others not. Eight VER waveforms were recorded from each S. Each consisted of the averaged brain responses resulting from 100 flashes of light, picked up by scalp electrodes. Half the VERs were from experimental trials, where the A observed a tachistoscopic display of the S's photograph at the moment the S saw each flash of light. The others were from control trials, where the A did not view the tachistoscope. ? and C trials (4 + 4) occurred randomly, the S not knowing which were which. Amplitude and latency measures of 4 main VER peaks were subjected to computerized analysis of variance. It was found that, taking both groups together, a significant difference between ? and C trials occurred (E giving a less negative peak than C) for the amplitude of a negative peak approximately 65 mS after stimulation ( $p < .025$ ). Further, the Notclose group displayed a significant decrease in negativity of that component relative to C trials ( $p = .01$ ), while the Closegroup showed a non-significant movement in the opposite direction. Sargent, Carl L. INTERACTIONS BETWEEN VISUAL IMAGERY AND PSI, Journal 49, 1978, pp. 805-23. This study was designed to avoid certain criticisms of previous investigations of the role of visual imagery in psi. Twenty individually tested subjects were given a modified form of the Betts QMI Vividness of Imagery Scale and a personality test (Cattell's 16PF) before taking a psi test. The psi test involved the memorization of an equal number of words from the following four categories: high imageability/high frequency, low imageability/high frequency, high imageability/low frequency, and low imageability/low frequency. On recall, the subject was asked to place each letter of the word either above or below a midline on the recall form so as to correspond to random placements indicated on a target sheet in an envelope underneath it ( $p = 1/2$ ). Each subject participated in two runs separated by a 40minute activity period. To avoid interference effects in memory, the words of the two lists differed in length. The order of presentation of the lists was counterbalanced. Subjects were given two minutes to memorize the short word list, one minute to memorize the long word list, and unlimited recall time. They were instructed to make an ESP response, even if they did not recall all the words, by making Xs on the recall form instead of the letters of the words. The overall ESP scores did not significantly deviate from chance. On the basis of their Betts Scale scores, subjects were divided into high and low imagers and their normed deviation scores were compared. High imagers scored lower than low imagers ( $p < .05$ , two tailed), and, as predicted, showed higher variance ( $p = .03$ , one tailed). A one-way ANOVA showed no significant effect of word type. The interaction between visual imagery level and the imageability of the stimulus was analysed by a correlation between subjects' visual imagery scores and the difference in their scoring rates on high and low imageability words. This correlation was  $+ .514$ , which was significant at the  $.01$  (one tailed) confidence level. High imagers showed a trend toward higher scoring on high than on low imageability words ( $p = .022$ , two tailed). The two subgroups responded significantly differently to the low imageability words ( $p < .01$ , two tailed), primarily because of significant missing in this condition by high imagery subjects. The author reports that the addition of the auditory imagery scores to the above analyses reduced the significance of the results and concludes that the visual imagery subscale is the better predictor of ESP scores. Although there was a substantial difference in recall ability between the two subgroups ( $p < .05$ , two tailed), an analysis of the effect of recall ability on ESP scores did not show it to be a significant variable. Potentially confounding variables (anxiety, extraversion, and word frequency) were found to have no significant effect. Additional analyses revealed no salience or decline effects or differences between groups with respect to response biases. High imagers' missing on low-imageability words, which contributed strongly to the significant correlation, is discussed with respect to motivational factors. It is suggested that high imagers prefer to use visual imagery and visual memory, but have to rely on semantic memory for the low-imageability words. This might influence their motivation on these trials. PsiLine psi/personality/experiments/methodology

West, DJ. CHECKS ON ESP EXPERIMENTERS, Journal 49, 1978, pp. 897-9. West proposes that it would be a wise policy for research workers in parapsychology always to have their experiments repeated by a second and independent worker, preferably operating in alternate sessions, using the same subjects and the same setting. So long as the matter is not put to the test it is too easy to convince oneself that results depend upon one's own personal magic. If independently conducted experiments were to give the same results, that would show that the findings were not dependent upon one individual's honesty, competence or personal influence. If the repetitions were to give null or different results the experimenter's time would not have been wasted. He would then have established his own role in the production of the effects and be in a position to adjust his hypotheses and his tests accordingly. Markwick, Betty. THE SOAL-GOLDNEY EXPERIMENTS WITH BASIL SHACKLETON: NEW EVIDENCE OF DATA MANIPULATION, Proceedings 56, 1978, pp. 250-77. Presents computer results and detailed target sequence analysis of the data gathered by S.G. Soal in the years 1941-43 using B. Shackleton as percipient in a series of cardguessing experiments. Many target sequences proved to be near duplicates with interruptions in the sequences, suggesting the insertion of single extra digits. Three in four of these insertions corresponded to hits. Removing these trials from the data eliminated the significance of the ESP effect. This does not mean that Soal consciously cheated, since he was known to often write automatically in a state of dissociation when distracted by a task. The evidence, however, does establish data manipulation and discredits the results. PsiLine Goldney, K.M. STATEMENT, Proceedings 56, 1978, ? . 278. Hasted, J.B. & Robertson, D. THE DETAIL OF PARANORMAL METAL BENDING, Journal 50, 1979, pp. 9-20. The detection of dynamic strain signals in paranormal metal bending 'action' has enabled experimentation to be carried out on the distribution of the action around the metal bender. A resistive strain gauge is mounted on or in a small metal specimen, which hangs from its screened electrical connections; electrical bridge, amplifier and chart recorder enable dynamic strain data to be collected. It is found that the 'action' occurs in bursts of extension or contraction, rather randomly distributed in time, often at a rate of about 50 per hour. An early result of experiments with several independent embedded resistive strain gauges was the finding that dynamic strain pulses were frequently registered simultaneously on two entirely separate metal specimens. The data were interpreted in terms of a crude physical model of a 'surface of action,' at points on which strain pulses occur. The configuration and movement of this surface with respect to the metal bending subject can then be studied. A further series of studies was conducted with several independent strain gauges on a single piece of metal. The linear array of gauges along a thin strip of metal respond simultaneously to the 'action,' but the signals are strongest in the centre of a 'region of action,' which extends about 10 inches, and can move slightly from event to event. A series of experiments was also conducted with strain gauges on opposite sides of the metal strip. For a 'pure bend' the signals should be equal and in opposite directions, but these conditions were only obtained in the limit of infinitely thin metal strips; for strips of thickness in the region of 1 cm, one strain gauge receives a much smaller signal than the other, as though the penetration was incomplete. Braud, Lendell. & Braud, William. PSYCHOKINETIC EFFECTS UPON A RANDOM EVENT GENERATOR UNDER CONDITIONS OF LIMITED FEEDBACK TO VOLUNTEERS AND EXPERIMENTER, Journal 50, 1979, pp. 21-32. Two experiments were conducted to explore psychokinetic effects under conditions of limited feedback to volunteers and experimenter. In Experiment 1, 10 volunteers attempted to influence a Schmidt random event generator. For half of their runs, volunteers received immediate, trial-by-trial visual feedback. For the other half of their runs, no sensory feedback was provided. Chance scoring occurred under the feedback condition; significant PK hitting occurred under the non-feedback condition. In Experiment 2, 20 volunteers attempted to influence the random generator under non-feedback conditions only. Significant PK-hitting occurred. These findings are discussed in terms of: (a) nature and degree of feedback to volunteers and experimenter, (b) conditions under which absence of feedback may actually facilitate psi, (c) sensory vs. psi-mediated feedback, and (d) a possible psi-mediated as a experimenter effect acting in conjunction with a possible principle of 'psi availability quantity.' Thalbourne, Michael A. A MORE POWERFUL METHOD OF EVALUATING DATA FROM FREE RESPONSE EXPERIMENTS, Journal 50, 1979, pp. 84-107. This paper opens by drawing the traditional distinction between ESP experiments of the 'forced choice' type and the 'free response' method, and points out some of the advantages to be gained from using the latter rather than the former. The two major statistical problems that arise in the use of a free response technique are then defined: (1) the question of how to assess, objectively, the degree of resemblance between the stimulus, or target, and the response; and (2) the question of how to decide whether the observed degree of target response similarity deviates significantly from chance expectation. The first problem may be tackled using Stuart's Preferential Matching Method, which is here described and illustrated. The second problem has been approached in various ways by Stuart and by Morris. However, this paper advocates the use of multiple judges to rank evaluate the same material, in conjunction with a computer run Randomization Test to analyze the resulting matrix of average ranks. The power, range, and applicability of this approach are discussed. CORRESPONDENCE, Journal 54, 1987, pp. 284-6. See also Journal 55, 1988, pp. 85-89, where the author adjusts his findings. Ward, M. RANDOMNESS EFFECTS IN A SIMULATED ESP CARD GUESSING EXPERIMENT, Journal 50, 1979, pp. 108-13. The experiment described below set out to re-examine the importance of randomness and chance expectation in card guessing studies. Using modern computer techniques, it was possible to create a situation similar to that of a traditional card guessing experiment, minimizing the possibility of 'psi' influence. The results shown are very close to the number predicted by chance. This demonstrates the validity of the statistical baseline of chance expectation, in situations with minimal 'psi' present. PsiLine psi/experiments/methodology

Braud, W., Davis, G. & Wood, R. EXPERIMENTS WITH MATTHEW MANNING, Journal 50, 1979, pp. 199-223. Five experiments are described in which Matthew Manning attempted to influence living target systems mentally and at a distance, i.e., psychokinetically. Experiment 1 involved attempts to influence the locomotor activity of a gerbil in an activity wheel. Experiment 2 involved attempts to influence the spatial orientation of an electric fish. In Experiment 3, the physiological activity (GSR reactions) of another person served as the PK target. GSR activity was also the target in Experiment 4, but in this case, the activity had been pre-recorded; thus, the experiment involved 'time displaced' PK. In Experiment 5, Matthew Manning attempted to decrease the rate of haemolysis of human erythrocytes which were being stressed osmotically. In all experiments, with the exception of Experiment 4, the living target systems were successfully influenced. Two 'incidental' clairvoyance experiments are also reported. Results are discussed in the context of task relevant motivation. PsiLine psi/DMILS/psychokinesis/clairvoyance/experiments

Tart, Charles T. & Palmer, John. SOME PSI EXPERIMENTS WITH MATTHEW MANNING, Journal 50, 1979, pp. 224-8. During the last week of May 1977, a number of exploratory psi experiments were undertaken with Mr. Matthew Manning at the University of California, Davis. Generally speaking, these experiments provided little evidence of psi, but there were results in some of the experiments that were suggestive of psi, especially displacement effects. These experiments will be reported in various articles authored by the persons primarily responsible for given segments of the projects. In this report we will discuss those experiments initiated by C.T.T: A coin spinner experiment with significant results; ESP feedback training, with chance results; and an aura detection pilot study, with chance results. The author notes that the work with ADEPT was unusual in that the device seemed to show an enormous variety of transient malfunctions, consistent with a poltergeist type of manifestation, but our observations on this unexpected phenomenon were too unsystematic for us to offer them as more than a casual observation at this time. We believe that further work with Matthew might be profitable in yielding information about psi phenomena, especially if systematic ways of assessing unexpected results are found. Hasted, J.B. & Robertson, D. PARANORMAL ACTION ON METAL AND ITS SURROUNDINGS, Journal 50, 1980, pp. 379-98. The authors discusses investigations of ostensible psychokinetic effects on metal and its surroundings as contributed by a variety of special subjects, most of them children. Among the effects outlined are localization (that the centre strain gauge signal of three synchronous signals was usually the largest, suggesting a kind of 'region of action' of variable position, size, and power or, from the most recent experiments, that there is a kind of bell shape to synchronous signals obtained by strain gauges); surface of action (that the effect was maximized when the sensors lay on a vertical surface stretching radially outwards, such that the effect might be regarded as an invisible extension of the subject's arm); electrical effects (that is the detection of some 'shock like' effect by the subject on the hand he was extending towards the target that is likewise verified to some extent by the instrumentation, a verification that led the authors to suppose that short bursts of charge may be produced remotely and paranormally on or near to remote metal targets); and structural effects (that is hardening or deformation of the target material, such that structural transformation within the target occurs locally, redistributing the regions of different structure). Methodological and theoretical concerns were discussed in light of the findings. PsiLine psychokinesis/experiments/methodology/theory

Blackmore, Susan. A STUDY OF MEMORY AND ESP IN YOUNG CHILDREN, Journal 50, 1980, pp. 501-20. The literature on ESP in children is reviewed. Although many studies show high scoring in children, there is little systematic evidence of a relationship between ESP and age and there are many contradictory findings. Two experiments are reported. In a pilot study using Smarties as targets no significant scores were obtained either in a clairvoyance or in a GESP test. Suggestions made for improving the method were incorporated into the main experiment, a study of memory and ESP. Here response pictures were related to target pictures in three different ways, and memory for them was also tested. No differences in scoring between the target types were found nor any relationship to target memorability. No correlation with memory test scores was evident and there was no significant relationship between ESP and age. From these results it was not possible to draw any conclusions about the nature of ESP. CORRESPONDENCE, Journal 51, 1981, pp. 36-7, 124-9, 196-8, 321. Scutt, D.C. AN INVESTIGATION INTO METAL BENDING 'GELLER EFFECT' WITH ORI SVORAY, Journal 51, 1981, pp. 1-6. It was suggested by Professor Taylor, in his book SUPERMINDS and in discussion with him, that where metal is 'paranormally' bent there could well be a redistribution of strain energy and, most probably, a lowering of the energy in the area of bending. I am of the opinion that the process of 'paranormal' bending is completely normal and I use the term 'paranormal' to differentiate this type of bending from physical bending of the samples (as in mechanical loading). The first series of experiments with Ori Svoray was to establish whether there is a lowering of the energy in the area of bending. To accomplish this, Ori was given a number of aluminium alloy samples to paranormally bend. A practical experiment used in teaching materials science to mechanical engineering students at Caulfield Institute of Technology was modified to determine the stress distribution in pure aluminium after 'paranormal' bending. This gives the sample a gradation of cold working (stored strain energy in the form of residual stresses induced by plastic deformation) along its length, from very high at the narrow end to nil at the wide end. It is heated in a furnace to 540 degrees centigrade for 20 minutes so that the grains will reform in the metal (recrystallization). The sample is then etched in a few millilitres of mixed acids (33 ml H<sub>2</sub>O, 47 ml HNO<sub>3</sub>, 60 ml HCl, to which a few drops of HF acid has been added). This causes the grains to etch up very clearly within a couple of minutes. Ori bent the aluminium samples in front of witnesses, while being videotaped and at home. The results were constant in that where the metal was bent the energy had increased and the stress in the rest of the metal had not changed, that is, the energy stored in one part of the metal had not been redistributed to cause the sample to bend. In this case it is similar to work hardening. In the third test the samples when bent had grain growth around the edges. This suggests that the metal bending process is similar to heating of a metal in that it caused grain growth to occur at areas of high strain, that is, it behaved as if it had been annealed. It was a pity that this grain growth did not recur when the experiment was repeated. No further tests were carried out as we were running short of the special aluminium alloy. The last tests, using the precipitation hardening alloy, confirmed that a change of hardness did occur but not in the way expected, nor in a way that could be duplicated using normal heat treatments. The loss of hardness (brought about by the stroking) may have been due to the dissolving of quenched dislocation tangles. The results from tests one and two appear to be contradictory. They suggest that metal bending is similar to both work hardening, which increases stresses, and annealing, which reduces stresses. The experiments were simple, did not require instrumentation or statistical analysis. Only one solution heat treated alloy needs to become softer after stroking to demonstrate that something strange is happening, something that cannot be explained by trickery or sleight of hand. Ashton, Hugh T., Dear, Peter R. & Harley, Trevor A. A FOUR-SUBJECT STUDY OF PSI IN THE GANZFELD, Journal 51, 1981, pp. 12-21. Four subjects each completed eight Ganzfeld/GESP sessions using pictorial targets and a judging procedure with  $\alpha = .25$  as a chance level of success. Target pictures were randomly selected from a pool of potential targets, agent and subject were located in different buildings, and there was no possibility of sensory cueing in the study. Subjects chose their own duration of exposure to Ganzfeld stimulation on a session by session basis. There were 4 direct hits in the session, six more than mean chance expectation, which is a significant deviation ( $p = .012$ ). A sum of ranks analysis also yielded significant evidence of overall psi-hitting ( $p = .009$ ). There was a significant mean correlation of session duration with ESP performance ( $r_s = + .3575$ ,  $p < .006$ ), which is supportive of Honorton's model of Ganzfeld psi-optimization. Many of the hits were qualitatively impressive and examples of some are given, together with a discussion of the role of the agent in Ganzfeld GESP experiments and a speculation about the possibility of PK-optimization in Ganzfeld. It is concluded that the study provides further evidence for the ESP-optimizing power of Ganzfeld. We were also able to replicate our previously found ESP/extraversion correlation ( $r_s = + 1.0$ ,  $p = .042$ ), and this correlation deserves further study.

Hearne, Keith M.T. THE EFFECT ON THE SUBJECT (IN WAKING, SWS AND REM STATES) OF ELECTRIC SHOCKS TO THE AGENT: AN 'ESP' EXPERIMENT, Journal 51, 1981, pp. 87-92. Eight subject agent (SA) pairs, each emotionally close, were used in an 'ESP' experiment in which the awake A received 8 electric shocks over a 16minute period when the S was in each of the following distinct physiological states: awake, slow wave sleep (SWS), and rapid eye movement sleep (REM). Heart rate was measured in the S at those times. Eight Control (C) trials, where the shock was diverted to a resistor, were randomly interspersed with the Experimental (E) trials. There was no significant difference between ? and C trials overall in any of the 3 conditions. One SA pair appeared to show an 'ESP' effect; however, 2 reruns failed to reproduce it, so the statistical significance was taken to be spurious. PsiLine DMILS/experiments/methodology

In the original study, the amplitude of a negative peak (recorded at the scalp over the visual cortex), some 65 ms after unpatterned photic stimulation of the subject, appeared to vary according to whether or not the agent was simultaneously viewing a tachistoscopic presentation of the subject's photograph. It had been found that the direction of the amplitude shift was opposite for the two groups. In this larger-scale replication, no statistically significant results emerged.

Bierman, Dick J. & Isaacs, Julian. AN OPEN LETTER TO JULIAN ISAACS, Journal 51, 1981, pp. 183-4. Bierman formalizes a bet he made with Isaacs at the 1981 SPR conference in Bristol. In response to an enthusiastic endorsement of Cox's 'mini-lab' preparation as a method to test macro-PK, Bierman bet $200 that he could reproduce by normal means any event taking place in a mini-lab when control of the device was based on instrumentation alone. Bierman urges his colleagues to 'abandon the idea of convincing non-believers by singular evidence' and instead to 'focus on the detection of strong psi sources' and to 'do process-oriented research.' Likewise, he reminds Isaacs that technological sophistication may be easily used to commit fraud as to control for fraud. In reply, Isaacs agrees with Bierman that attempts to convince critics are futile and that research should be focused on detecting strong psi sources and on process oriented problems. Likewise, Isaacs agrees that a fraud-proof experiment is impossible to achieve. Isaacs then lists the conditions under which he would undertake a replication of Cox's work with the mini-lab. These conditions include a variety of sophisticated and heavily controlled monitoring devices and security procedures, which, if followed precisely, should preclude all but the most sophisticated tampering. Isaacs concludes by discussing the 'fraud versus security' race that would result from acceptance of Bierman's bet and encourages the application of a 'sliding scale' of security procedures to fit the needs of specific protocols. Nash, Carroll B. SINGLE CALLS OF GESP AND CLAIRVOYANCE TARGET PAIRS, Journal 51, 1982, pp. 214-6. Author's abstract: Two experimenters each tested 30 subjects for a total of 60 different subjects, with a separate session often runs for each subject. The runs consisted of 12 one symbol calls, each call being simultaneously directed to both members of a different pair of cards taken successively off the top of an open deck of 24 randomly arranged ESP cards. After turning the pair upside down, the experimenter looked at the symbol on the new top card of the inverted pair, and did not look at the symbol on the new bottom card of the inverted pair until after the call. Thus the top card afforded a test of GESP and the bottom card a test of clairvoyance. The GESP score had a positive deviation with a one tailed ? < .009, whereas the clairvoyance score was insignificantly negative. A test of the difference between the GESP and clairvoyance scores for each subject yielded a one tailed  $p < .05$ . A positive correlation occurred between the subjects' scores on GESP and clairvoyance with a two tailed  $p < .05$ . Reinforcement did not occur when the two targets were alike. ash, Carroll B. PSYCHOKINETIC CONTROL OF BACTERIAL GROWTH, Journal 51, 1982, pp. 217-21. The experiment was conducted to determine whether the growth of the bacterium Escherichia coli can be psychokinetically accelerated and decelerated during a 24hour period with subjects not known to be psychically gifted. Each of 60 subjects was tested in a single run consisting of a set of three tubes of bacterial culture to be growth promoted, a set of three to be growth inhibited, and a set of three to serve as controls. The growth was greater in the promoted tubes than in either the controls or the inhibited tubes, with one tailed  $p < .05$ . Posthoc correlations between the three treatments for the 60 subjects yielded the following results with 59 df:  $r$  between promoted and inhibited tubes = .73 with twotailed  $p < .001$ ,  $r$  between promoted and control tubes = .41 with twotailed  $p < .005$ ,  $r$  between inhibited and control tubes = .33 with twotailed  $p < .02$ . Posthoc analyses showed that the intersubject variance in growth was (1) greater between the three treatments than within them, with twotailed  $p < .05$ , and (2) greater in both the promoted and the inhibited tubes than in the controls, with one tailed  $p < .01$  in each case. The results are interpreted to indicate that bacterial growth was psychokinetically accelerated in some of the tubes intended for growth promotion and psychokinetically retarded in some of the tubes intended for growth inhibition. Sargent, Carl L. A GANZFELD GESP EXPERIMENT WITH VISITING SUBJECTS, Journal 51, 1982, pp. 222-32. Twenty subjects who were visitors to the laboratory each completed one 35minute Ganzfeld GESP free response trial. The target materials were pictures, and the statistical measure was a four way choice method. The overall results were not significant by direct hit or by rank sum analysis, although the latter method was only just short of significance ( $p = .067$ ). The visiting journalists, half the subject sample, performed better than the other subjects. Analysis of questionnaire material showed that, as predicted, subjects who reported that the Ganzfeld was successful in changing their state of consciousness were significantly more likely to be succeed in the ESP task than those who did not report this ( $p < .05$ ). Successful subjects were also significantly more relaxed, both before ( $p < .05$ ) and after ( $p < .01$ ) the session, experienced significantly more bizarre imagery ( $p < .05$ ) and time contraction ( $p < .05$ ), and approached the session in a significantly better mood ( $p < .01$ ), than unsuccessful subjects. The results confirm the prevailing picture of successful Ganzfeld ESP performance as discussed by authors such as Braud and Honorton. PsiLine psi/ganzfeld/experiments

Three sets of apparatus involving two large flasks joined by a thick tube were used for three experimental conditions: a 'precognitive' condition, a 'psychokinesis' (PK) condition, and a control condition. Every 24 hours for 14 days each condition underwent a 'trial' in which, in the Precognitive and Psychokinesis groups, the paramecia contained in one of the two flasks were destroyed by boiling. In the PK group the flask to have its contents destroyed was randomly determined 24 hours before the trial occurred, whereas in the Precognitive group this was determined just after the tube connecting the flasks had been sealed off for a trial. In the Control group half the volume from each flask was destroyed. Results, in terms of the direction of the differences in population density between the flasks, did not suggest selection occurred for precognitive ability or any PK ability in the experimenter. Posthoc analysis, however, revealed a significant difference ( $p = .05$ ) in the mean magnitude of population density difference between the flasks in the Precognitive group and those of the other two groups. Each of two experimenters tested 25 different subjects who made 200 calls apiece, each call being simultaneously directed to both a present and a future target. The targets were the randomly determined digits from 0 to 9. The combined results for the two experimenters showed scoring that was higher for the present targets than for the future targets, with psi hitting for the former and psi missing for the latter ( $t_d = 2.22$ , 49 df,  $p < .05$  twotailed). The results did not indicate that subjects scored higher on targets in the time division of greater importance to them. Reinforcement was indicated by the fact that when the present and future targets were alike they yielded a higher score than either did alone ( $\chi^2 = 4.14$ ,  $p < .05$ ). Carr, Bernard J. AN EXPERIMENT TO DISCRIMINATE BETWEEN TELEPATHY AND CLAIRVOYANCE USING ISIHARA CARDS AND COLOUR-BLIND AGENTS, Journal 52, 1983, pp. 31-44. We examine the relative effectiveness of telepathy and clairvoyance when both can operate simultaneously but in different ways, by conducting an ESP experiment with colour-blind agents, colornormal percipients, and Ishihara card targets. Since some of these cards appear differently to the agent and percipient when viewed with their natural vision, one can determine whether the percipient receives the target as observed by the agent (telepathy) or as he himself would observe it (clairvoyance). We find that, overall, the targets which are perceived identically by agent and percipient (i.e., the GESP targets) come across with high significance ( $p = .005$ ); the telepathy targets come across with marginal significance ( $p = .01$ ); and the clairvoyance results are close to chance. However, not all pairs of agents and percipients conform to these overall trends and some show other interesting features. For example, we find a significant ( $p = .0004$ ) post hoc effect within clairvoyance whereby, for one agent, all the percipients psi-hit on one target and psi-miss on the other. Grattan Guinness, I. A NOTE ON THE EFFICACY OF CONTROL OBJECTS IN PSI EXPERIMENTS, Journal 52, 1983, pp. 126-8. One of the techniques taken over by psychical research from experimental psychology is the use of control objects, including persons, against which the performance of the target object in the experiment is appraised. A defining property of a control object is well stated as: Control objects are immune from the effects being tested in the experiment. Psychical researchers seem to have adopted the notion of control without demure. However, does not the (apparent) nature of psi render dangerous the assumption of the immunity hypothesis in psychical research? For how can we be sure that the control objects are immune from extrasensory detection by the percipient (or by the experimenter) or anyone else involved in the experiment? The immunity hypothesis is not a safe assumption in psi experimentation. As an alternative I propose the 'susceptibility hypothesis': So-called 'control' objects are susceptible to psi influence during psi experiments. When this hypothesis is admitted, the consequences for theorizing about psi functioning are very serious. (They rebound on experimental psychology itself, where only prejudice grounds the assumption that psi is absent there; but that is the psychologist's problem.) Studies need to be carried out on the behaviour of control objects in psi experiments. Several possibilities are suggested. Regrettably, none of them seem promising, for in order to obtain good results one would need the psi effect on the target objects to remain constant (in a sort of reversal of roles of target and control). However, there is little reason to think that the constant target effect would occur, even if the conditions on the target objects were kept as constant as possible; the unpredictability of psi rules this assumption out. It seems exceedingly difficult to refute the susceptibility hypothesis. The need to at least query the immunity hypothesis seems obvious. Why, then, is it not discussed by experimental psychical researchers? How can they confidently prefer the immunity hypothesis to the susceptibility hypothesis when control objects are used in psi experiments? PsiLine psi/experiments/methodology

Blackmore, Susan J. A REPORT OF A VISIT TO CARL SARGENT'S LABORATORY, Journal 54, 1987, pp. 186-98. Author's abstract: In 1979 I visited the laboratory of Dr. Carl Sargent at the University of Cambridge, to observe highly successful ganzfeld psi experiments then in progress, I observed 13 sessions, of which six were direct hits. I considered whether the results might be accounted for by sensory leakage, experimental error, cheating or psi. I made observations of the sessions to test these hypotheses. The experimental design effectively ruled out sensory leakage. However, I observed several errors in the way the protocol was observed, Most of these occurred in the cumbersome randomization procedure. It was not clear how these errors came about. Their origin might have been clarified by either (a) a statement from Sargent or his colleagues, or (b) by reanalyses of the raw data. However neither has been made available. Sargent's nine ganzfeld studies form a considerable portion of the total ganzfeld database. In view of Sargent's unwillingness to explain the errors found, or to make his data available to other researchers, I suggest that these results should be viewed with caution. Author's abstract: Blackmore describes her visit to the Cambridge laboratory in 1979 and discusses evidence for what she calls a 'cheating hypothesis'. This is that certain anomalies which she discovered are best accounted for in terms of experimenter cheating. We demonstrate that the so-called 'cheating hypothesis' is not a hypothesis in the traditional scientific sense of the world, and that she is guilty of extreme prejudice in her reporting of the events and in their interpretation. We then analyze some data which reflate her claims empirically. The best interpretation of events is also the most obvious - minor experimental error. Cox, W.E. MAGICIANS AND PARAPSYCHOLOGY, Journal 52, 1984, pp. 383-6. The author argues that the recent rise of interest in static PK precipitated by Serios, Kulagina, and Geller has provoked the question of how readily possible it may be for psi researchers to encounter undetected deceit and whether it would be useful to employ a conjuring consultant to monitor experiments. He quotes relevant statements made by Joseph Jastrow, Milbourne Christopher, Martin Gardner, and James Randi. He notes that, as regards hiring the services of a magician, any magician with an interest in being a consultant to a parapsychologist needs to pass certain qualifications for the job. Proper experimental designs with repeated safeguards can prevent slick hocus, whereas the talent and training of magicians may tend to militate against their open-mindedness toward the paranormal. The author recommends in such cases that they should serve as advisors rather than as monitors. PsiLine

Jacobs, J.C. PK EXPERIMENTS WITH A TRUE AND A PSEUDO RANDOM NUMBER GENERATOR, Journal 53, 1985, pp. 18-25. Author's abstract: The author as subject performed to PK experiments to examine a claim of Helmut Schmidt's: 'PK operates as efficiently on pseudo RNG's as on true RNG's' (Schmidt, 1981), and to test a contrasting prediction generated by Donald and Martin's thermodynamic theory: 'Higher significant levels will be achieved using truly random events than using pseudo random events' (Donald and Martin, 1976). On a computer display screen the subject sees a white dot that jumps around a circle of 16 grey dots, alternately in clockwise and anticlockwise directions. An experimental run consists of 16 periods of light jumps in each of the two directions. The PK task is to lengthen the periods in which the lit dot jumps in a pre-determined target direction, and to shorten the non-target periods. Half of the trial periods were controlled by a true RNG, the other half by a pseudo RNG. A hit is defined as a light jump in the target direction, a miss as a jump in the non-target direction, the a priori probability that the direction of the motion reverses being 1/16. An experiment comprised 100 runs. The two experiments pooled together show a marginally significant effect for the true RNG condition:  $\chi^2 = 1.98$  ( $p = .02$ ) and non-significance for the pseudo RNG condition:  $\chi^2 = 1.04$ . The difference between conditions was non significant:  $t = .22$  ( $df = 199$ ). Control experiments, however, cast doubt on the randomness of the true RNG: a greater variance was found than theoretically expected. It is concluded that the results do not allow a differentiation between the predictions generated by Schmidt's model and that of Donald and Martin.

Nash, Carroll B. CLAIRVOYANT DETERMINATION OF THE MOST FREQUENT OF FIVE CARDS, Journal 53, 1985, pp. 26-30. Author's abstract: Three experimenters each performed a test of clairvoyance with 20 subjects for a total of 60 different subjects. Each subject attempted to call the most frequent card (MFC) in each of 100 sets of five cards, the sets being removed successively from the top of a randomly arranged, open, ESP deck. While the combined results of the three experiments were significant, the deviation was independently significant only in the results of one of them. Analysis of her results indicates that the ESP of the five cards was diametric and that the success in identifying the MFC carried directly with the difference between its frequency and the frequency of the next MFC in the set. The cards in the MFC hits had a higher proportional frequency of the next MFC in the set. The cards in the MFC hits had a higher proportional frequency in the two terminal positions of the five-card set than in the inner three. The results are interpreted to indicate that the ESP process took place by an act of diametric paranormal perception of the five cards, followed by normal psychophysiological determination of which of the cards was the most frequent.

Jacobs, J.C. PSI-GUIDED AWAKENING FROM SLEEP 1, Journal 53, 1985, pp. 159-68. Author's abstract, edited: A reconstruction and evaluation is presented of home experiments carried out in the years 1951-1960 by the star South African subject W. van Vuurde. Mr van Vuurde was the subject of Professor Bleksley's well-known experiments on ESP awakening from sleep (Bleksley, 1963, 1975). These experiments were undertaken on the basis of the highly significant results of the van Vuurde home experiments. Moreover, in 1978 the present author began further experiments with the same gifted subject: these are still in progress. Two phases can be distinguished in the experiments: 1) those in which he attempted to awake at predetermined target times known to him; 2) those in which he attempted to awake at predetermined target times unknown to him. It is concluded that the experiments confirmed the subject's real-life observations that he was able to awake from sleep at a predetermined time. Although some of his correct awakenings might be attributed to a normal cause, this does not explain the relatively great excess of hits. volitional psi/experiments

Nelson, R.D. et al. OPERATOR-RELATED ANOMALIES IN PHYSICAL SYSTEMS AND INFORMATION PROCESSES, Journal 53, 1986, pp. 261-85. Author's abstract: The Princeton Engineering Anomalies Research program addresses a selection of topics in consciousness-related anomalous phenomena of possible relevance to modern engineering practice. Using conventional instrumentation and data-processing equipment and techniques, this program endeavours to identify those engineering devices, systems and processes most likely to display operator-related anomalies in their performance, and to illuminate the characteristics of such aberrations. Three symbiotic sectors of effort are involved: the design, implementation, operation, and interpretation of experiments in low-level psychokinesis; the development of analytical methodologies for qualitative assessment of precognitive remote perception data; and the development of theoretical models useful for correlation of the experimental data, design of better experiments, and explication of the phenomena on fundamental grounds. The primary effect observed in the psychokinesis experiments is a marginal but replicable shift of the mean of frequency-of-count distributions with respect to empirical baselines or theoretical expectations, with no discernible alternations in any higher moments. These shifts can compound with considerable statistical regularity to high levels of significance over large data bases, depending on the particular operator, the direction of effort and other prevailing experimental conditions. The individual operator 'signatures' of achievement are remarkably characteristic and relatively insensitive to the particular experimental device. Computerized evaluation of a large remote perception data base reveals similar departures from chance expectation for the degree of target information acquired and indicates that the achievements are independent of spatial or temporal separation of the percipient and the target. Some portions of these results are accommodated by a quantum mechanical model of the interaction of consciousness with its physical environment. Michels, J.A.G. CONSISTENT HIGH SCORING IN SELF-TEST PK EXPERIMENTS, USING A STOPPING STRATEGY, Journal 54, 1987, pp. 119-29. Author's abstract: Self-test PK-experiments using a Random Bit Generator (RBG) are reported. The experiments were designed to investigate whether a stopping strategy, based on the assumption of cyclical ps behaviour, would yield repeated positive deviations from chance level scoring in PK-task. The a priori chance of a hit was 0-5. Highly significant deviations from chance were found (Overall 24,494 trials with an excess of 630 hits,  $\chi^2 = 8.05$ ). Other experimenter/subjects scored at chance level in replication experiments. A computer simulation, with the stopping strategy but without feedback, yielded no significant deviations from chance. It is concluded that the stopping strategy as such is not effective in producing PK: it is effective only when used by a specific experimenter/subject. Further experiments will be carried out to investigate the nature of the consistent deviations from chance scoring.

Author's abstract: A home 'dream-telepathy' study was conducted over 8 non-consecutive nights, using a female Subject. The Subject was woken automatically during REM sleep, in the latter half of the experimental night, but means of a 'dream machine' invented by the author. Using target material prepared by an assistant, the Experimenter attempted to convey a picture (randomly selected from a set of 8 on each experimental night) to the Subject, hoping to introduce a similar picture-content into the Subject's dreams. Experimenter-Sender and Subject were separated by some 150 miles. It was found that the Subject ranked only 3 of the 8 targets in the top 4 rank-positions for that night, and none was a direct hit (ie. ranked 1). The results therefore provided no evidence of psi under the circumstances stated. telepathy/dreams/experiments

Author's abstract: An experimental study is reported which investigates whether persons who express high confidence in their ability to wake from sleep at a predetermined and known time perform better in a psi-waking task than persons with low confidence. This is an exploration of ways to find new high scoring subjects. 15 high and 15 low confident subjects participated. They were selected on the basis of a questionnaire. A three experimenter design was used to prevent treatment differences between groups. For the duration of one year, each subject tried to wake at target times (range 1.00-5.59 a.m.) set by the main experimenter. Three types of hit were defined: wake time = target time plus or minus 1 minute) and 5-minute-error hits (rounded wake time = target time plus or minus 2,3,4 or 5 minutes). The only difference for zero-error hits was in the hypothesized direction:  $\mu(\text{diff}) = 1.50$ ,  $\sigma^2 = .06$ . One high confident subject obtained 5 zero-error hits,  $MCE = .84$ ,  $\sigma^2 = .002$ . The lack of really significant results is discussed in terms of too short a test period, insufficient contrast between high and low confident subjects and the self report basis of subject classification. This latter seemed to an important degree to be determined by differences in sleep patterns.

Delanoy, Deborah L. WORK WITH A FRAUDULENT PK METAL-BENDING SUBJECT, Journal 54, 1987, pp. 247-56. Author's abstract: This paper details work conducted with a self-alleged metal-bender over a seven and a half month period in 1983/84. The subject, a most cooperative and helpful 17 year old male, stated he had the ability to bend metal objects at will. During the course of our work the subject also claimed to develop fire-raising abilities. Our work included attempts at controlled metal-bending, micro PK, fire-raising, and metal-bending whilst in the ganzfeld. Throughout our work the subject was unable to produce any PK under thoroughly-controlled conditions. Eventually, by means of a hidden camera, the subject was caught engaging in fraudulent activity and latterly confessed to being a practising magician. The discussion stresses the necessity for researchers never to forget the possibility that their subjects may be presenting deceptive data. Deceptive activity by subjects is considered, as well as ways in which researchers may contribute unconsciously to their own deception.

Barham, Allan. DR W J CRAWFORD, HIS WORK AND HIS LEGACY IN PSYCHOKINESIS, Journal 55, 1988, pp. 113-38. Author's abstract: This is the first of two articles which are concerned with research in psychokinesis. The second article, to be published later, gives examples of the work done by Kenneth Batcheldor and Colin Brookes-Smith, together with a brief account of some current work in the same field. The present article was written partly because of the influence which Crawford had on the two researchers mentioned above, but chiefly because Crawford - if the contents of the three books which he wrote can be regarded as factual - carried out experiments which are among the most significant in psychical research. Evidence for the acceptance or rejection of Crawford's work is discussed. The article also refers to other workers in psychokinesis who were active about the time when Crawford performed his experiments and wrote his books, a resume of which will be found below. William Jackson Crawford, Doctor of Science and lecturer in mechanical engineering, died tragically in 1920 at the age of thirty-nine after performing what were perhaps the most remarkable experiments in psychokinesis that have been recorded. Dr Eric Dingwall, at one time Research Officer of the SPR - and by no means a lenient critic of what he considered to be careless work - did not approve in some respects of the way in which Crawford had conducted his research: yet he had this to say of him (Volume 32 of the Proceedings of the SPR, 1921-22) 'The works he has left can scarcely fail to be regarded in the future as the most important contributions towards the study of telekinesis which have appeared to the time that their author met his untimely end. Author's abstract: This article is chiefly concerned with the pioneering work of the late Kenneth Batcheldor and the late Colin Brookes-Smith and it demonstrates certain similarities between their experiments and those of W. J. Crawford. The three researchers all worked with close-knit groups and, although they were scientifically trained, they chose 'home conditions' for their experiments. The importance of the group's belief in the reality of the phenomena cannot be overemphasised as both Batcheldor and Brookes-Smith stressed. Crawford's group were, of course, dedicated spiritualists. Crawford himself did not need such belief. His experiments, described in Part 1 (July issue), appeared to him to leave no loophole for doubt. There were interesting differences between the methods adopted by these three men. Crawford used all the controls he thought necessary to prevent possible fraud. Batcheldor, on the other hand, was strongly of the opinion that any foolproof control would inhibit the manifestations that were his primary concern. Brookes-Smith, for his part, found a middle course. He used electronic controls but as unobtrusively as possible. He agreed that this might adversely affect the phenomena but felt that, without some such control, Batcheldor's theories stood little chance of being taken seriously. The author acted as 'Sender' between midnight and 10 am, on a specified night. A different target-picture was randomly selected from a choice of two, on each hour. A total of 511 dream-reports were received from readers, who also stated the time of waking from each dream. Two judges, who were unaware of the target sequence, were employed to decide which of the 2 pictures for each hour corresponded more closely with the dream reports. The total decisions for each picture determined which one of each pair was the popular 'guess'. Six of the overall 'guesses' corresponded with the 10-part 'head or tail' target sequence. Thus, the results were not statistically significant ( $p = 0.38$ , 1-tailed, and assuming hit probability = 0.5). telepathy/dreams/experiments

Harley, Trevor A. PSI MISSING IN A DREAM CLAIRVOYANCE EXPERIMENT, Journal 56, 1989, pp. 1-7. Author's abstract: In an exploratory study of clairvoyance in the dream state, the author acted as a single subject in 20 dreaming sessions. Dream material was recorded throughout the night and expanded the following morning. The dream transcript was judged against four pictures from a pool of 200. The dream transcript was used to rank and rate the pictures in order of correspondence with the dream material. The target had been selected in a double-blind fashion the preceding evening, but had been kept locked and sealed until the judging was complete. Target rankings by the subject were not significant, but the ratings were significantly below chance. Both the rankings and ratings of an independent judge were significantly below chance. The correlation between the scoring of the two judges was significant. Various other effects in the data are discussed. In particular, a decline from chance to psi missing was found within each night's dreaming and throughout the experiment.

Jacobs, J.C. & Michels, J.A.G. PSI-GUIDED AWAKENING FROM SLEEP, Journal 56, 1989, pp. 8-14. Authors' abstract: From a previous experiment on psi-guided awakening from sleep (Jacobs, 1987) four subjects were selected who could be labelled potential high scorers in a paranormal waking task, and four subjects who could be tagged potential low-scorers. Here, a follow-up experiment with these eight subjects is reported. It was hypothesized that the potential high scorers would obtain higher scores than the potential low-scorers in a paranormal waking task. In addition a positive test-retest correlation was hypothesized. During six months the subjects tried to wake every night at an individual target time (range 1.00-5.59 a.m., inclusive). A two experimenter design was used. The potential high -scorers scored above chance level and the potential low-scorers below; however, the difference was not significant ( $P \leq 0.13$ ). The test-retest correlation was non-significant and even in the wrong direction ( $r = 0.24$ ). It is concluded that if a psi-guided wake ability exists, the effect is very small and unstable. volitional psi/experiments

Millar, Brian. STATISTICS OF STOPPING STRATEGIES: MICHELS AND BREEDERVELD EXPERIMENTS, Journal 56, 1989, pp. 15-22. Author's abstract: The question explored here is whether the standard Z-score approximation to the binomial can validly be applied to experiments using a stopping strategy. The distributions resulting from stopping strategies are first examined in general. Monte Carlo simulations of the experiments of Michels and Breederveld are then presented. In the Michels case,  $\chi^2$  is unbiased and is adequately normal for 5 or more stopping sets. For Breederveld,  $\chi^2$  is slightly biased but the standard normal is still a sufficiently good approximation for 10 or more sets. psi/experiments/methodology

Berger, Rick E. A CRITICAL EXAMINATION OF THE SPINELLI DISSERTATION DATA, Journal 56, 1989, pp. 28-34. Re-examination of highly significant data from psi experiments with children offers no suggestion that it has been tampered with, but shows patterns that the author believes are more strongly indicative of experimental artifact than of psi. In reply the experimenter acknowledges that his work cannot fulfill his aim of providing a foolproof psi experiment but hopes it provides hints as to what psi might be and how it operates. psi/experiments/methodology

Authors' abstract: The reintroduction of hypnosis in parapsychology as a means to introduce or facilitate ESP led to the discovery by Milan Ryzl from Prague of a star subject, Pavel Stepanek, at the beginning of the sixties, who performed with alternative but continued success at colour guessing for 12 years in succession with many different experimenters. Because of adverse circumstances this series had to be interrupted. After an interval of 17 years, experiments could be resumed in Amsterdam, but gave no indication of persisting psi-abilities. Some data about the use of hypnosis in parapsychology and about the former work with Stepanek are given before stating the experimental results. clairvoyance/experiments

Morgan, K. & Morris, Robert L. A REVIEW OF APPARENTLY SUCCESSFUL METHODS FOR THE ENHANCEMENT OF ANOMALOUS PHENOMENA, Journal 58, 1991, pp. 1-9. The authors present a selected review of apparently successful examples of applied parapsychological studies over the sixty years that have passed since Dr J.B. Rhine founded the modern scientific era of parapsychology. They examine signal-enhancement techniques, such as multiple guessing and internal message checks, the latter in cases of dowsing, casino-oriented trials, telepathic transmission and electronic calculation. The alternative of enhancing the receiver's sensitivity is briefly examined. The paper concludes with a summary of what are felt to be promising directions for future research. psi/experiments/methodology

Authors' abstract: The ability of a healer to stimulate the germination and growth of cress seeds stressed overnight in saline solution was tested in a series of trials in which the assessment of growth was conducted blind. In six of the seven trials significant differences in the growth of the seedlings were found between the healing and non-healing groups. Observations on treated seeds suggest that the healer may speed the efflux of salt from the seeds. The model is simple, well controlled and capable of further development. DMILS/healing/experiments rather than by myself. Successful preliminary runs had occurred at the home of J. T. Richards in Rolla, Missouri, using an ESP-cum-PK technique. Three means of eliciting these calls are first described: (a) by verbal solicitation of paranormal floor raps which could then be taken to indicate the relevant ESP symbol using a standard code; (b) by a typewritten message soliciting 'direct writing', using a pen and paper provided, that would identify the card order of a sealed deck placed nearby; (c) by direct paranormal recording of rap-like sounds onto an audio-cassette (without benefit of tape recorder) to indicate the card order of a sealed deck. This last method is a novel electromagnetic form of RPK. Two formal runs, each with an American préparer, which are described below, achieved almost perfect scores. A third, prepared in Edinburgh (see Wiseman, Beloff & Morris in this issue, with a subsequent commentary by myself), achieved only chance scoring. psi/psychokinesis/experiments

Wiseman, Richard et al. TESTING THE ESP CLAIMS OF SORRAT, Journal 58, 1992, pp. 363-77. Authors' abstract: Describes a recent reassessment of the ESP ability that a well-known parapsychologist (Ed Cox) attributes to the spirit 'entities' which he claims communicate with the Society for Research in Rapport and Telekinesis (SORRAT). The paper first notes how Cox claimed that these 'entities' were able to divine the order of a sealed deck of ESP cards. The paper then outlines how an initial pilot study was refused by Cox, in favour of more formal experimentation. The design of this formal experiment is then outlined, emphasising the controls that were employed to counter potential subject cheating. The experimenters randomised a deck of ESP cards and noted their resulting order. These cards were then sealed and dispatched to Cox. The 'entities' attempted to divine the order of the sealed deck, and Cox then returned this predicted card order and the sealed deck to the experimenters. The order of the cards was then compared with the order predicted by the 'entities'. The 'entities' failed on three counts. First, the deck was not returned to the experimenters by a deadline designated before the experiment. Second, when the deck was eventually returned, the 'entities' obtained only 8 hits ( $p=0.11$ , one tail). Third, the 'entities' claimed to have paranormally rearranged the order of the cards in the target deck. However, when the deck was opened, all 25 cards were in the same order as when they were dispatched by the experimenters. Finally, the paper discusses the implications of this experiment for future work with SORRAT. CORRESPONDENCE, Journal 59, pp. 231-2. psi/experiments/methodology

Authors' abstract: In four experiments, chicks were imprinted on an object (either a flashing light or another chick) and then tested in a procedure where the appearance of the imprinted object was controlled by a solid-state random-noise generator. The hypothesis that chicks can use a PK capacity to increase above chance the time for which they are exposed to an imprinted object was supported in only one of the four experiments. The inconsistent results could not be explained in terms of either experimenter effects or physical effects of chicks' behaviour on the RNG. It is concluded that there is presently no evidence for PK effects in chicks where the appearance of an imprinted object is controlled by an RNG. Lounds, Paul. THE INFLUENCE OF PSYCHOKINESIS ON THE RANDOMLY-GENERATED ORDER OF EMOTIVE AND NON-EMOTIVE SLIDES, Journal 59, 1993, pp. 187-93. Author's abstract: Examines the influence of PK on the observed order of picture slides with an emotive content, compared with that of slides of a non-emotive nature, where the sequence is otherwise random as governed by an RNG. It also looks to see if there are individual or overall PK effects with respect to chance. Subjects attempted to cause their favourite slide to be shown and not their three least-liked, corresponding to a 1,2,3, or 4 from the RNG; or, similarly, tried to display a slide showing a number one, rather than the three alternative numbers. There was no significant difference between the conditions of emotive and non-emotive slides. However, there was a significant combined effect, i.e. in the generation of '1s', pooled from both trials, compared with the quantity expected randomly, and it was also shown that some PK effect aided the elicitation of favourite slides in preference to non-favourites. The findings were discussed in the problematic context of the phenomena of psi target and stimulus. Experimental limitations, interfering factors, and suggestions for future studies to elucidate the essence of the emotion-PK relationship are also outlined. psychokinesis/experiments/methodology

Authors' abstract: A computerized precognition test, Psychic Reward, was developed as a test of success potential, An Attitude Toward the Future (ATF) questionnaire was designed to test the hypothesis that future-oriented people should have a significantly greater number of significant ( $p < 0.048$ ) 30-trial precognition scores than past-oriented people. 'Short form' 30-trial Psychic Reward software was programmed by Houck for the tests, for which Vaughan was the experimenter. A total of 83 subjects in five groups achieved an overall significant ( $z = 2.09$ ,  $p = 0.018$ , one tailed) number of significant scores. The Future group scored significantly ( $z = 2.02$ ,  $p = 0.022$ , one tailed) above the Past group. Comparison of ATF extremes showed significant support ( $z = 2.02$ ) for the ATF hypothesis. ATF extremes for Fate readers achieved a significant difference ( $z = 1.98$ ,  $p = 0.024$ ), as predicted by the ATF hypothesis. The Fate Future group was independently significant ( $z = 2.19$ ,  $p = 0.014$ , one-tailed). Our data tentatively suggest that people who are future-oriented are significantly better at predicting the future than those who are past-oriented. precognition/experiments/methodology

Authors' abstract: Prior literature suggests that psi perception may be better when the planetary geomagnetic field is relatively quiet. This possible geomagnetic-psi relationship was analyzed in two ganzfeld psi-experiments, one with normal and the other with creatively-talented participants. Both ganzfeld experiments consisted of 32 sessions. The experiment using a normal population resulted in a chance-expected hit rate of exactly 25%; the creative population resulted in a hit rate of 41% (exact binomial  $p = 0.016$ ). For the normal population, when psi performance was better, geomagnetic field fluctuations were lower ( $p = < 0.001$ , two-tailed). The opposite was observed in the creative population: better psi performance was associated with higher geo-magnetic fluctuations ( $p < 0.05$ , two-tailed). Differences in methods of studying geomagnetism-psi relationships are discussed. psi/ganzfeld/electromagnetisni/experiments

In this paper it is contended that, in the light of such relationships, we need a drastic review of the ways in which psi manifests itself inside or outside the laboratory. Although other authors have likewise called attention to the psychological aspects of psi (Roll, 1974; Ullman, 1976; Palmer, 1977; Gauld & Cornell, 1979; Rhine, 1981), more needs to be said. psi/personality/experiments/methodology/theory

Snel, F.W.J.J. & Sijde, P.C.van der. ON THE RECOGNITION OF PARANORMAL HEALERS: DOES IT TAKE ONE TO KNOW ONE, Journal 59, 1994, pp. 413-19. Authors' abstract: Twelve paranormally gifted subjects and six non-gifted subjects were asked to rate 171 photographs of persons on their 'paranormal giftedness.' Among these were photographs of paranormal healers ( $n = 42$ ), nursing staff ( $n = 56$ ) and people who served as a control group (n = 73). The aim of this study was to investigate the claim of several organizations of professional healers that a board of experienced paranormal healers is able to identify the paranormal 'ability' (faculty) in others, and that a screening by this board is a valid method by which to accept or refuse people as apprentice healers and future members. The results show that gifted subjects are unable to differentiate between the three groups of people; non-gifted subjects score in the same range. The gifted subjects, however, made a few striking and verifiable remarks about some of the people in the photographs. It is because of such observations that the 'myth' (that one needs to possess a certain faculty to be able to recognize that same faculty in others) lives on. healing/personality/experiments

Willin, Melvyn J. A GANZFELD EXPERIMENT USING MUSICAL TARGETS, Journal 61, 1996, pp. 1-17. Author's abstract: An ESP ganzfeld experiment was set up using music as the target. 100 trials were carried out, mainly in Essex, over a period of 15 months. 120 different people participated in the trials, as Receivers, Senders and Helpers. Some attended more than one session and played more than one role. A hit rate of 25% was expected by chance and a hit rate of 24% was achieved, which therefore is not significant. However, the first 50 trials produced a hit rate of 32%, which could suggest that the initial feelings of excitement may have contributed to greater psychic awareness. A group of judges blind to the sequence of targets were employed to study the results, and their scoring confirmed that a few subjects had scored significantly above chance. Other factors such as age and sex also provided specific information. psi/ganzfeld/experiments

Pairings were chosen deliberately according to previous above-chance scores. A chance hit rate of 25% was expected and a hit rate of exactly 25% was achieved. One pair scored 50%, one pair scored 0% and two pairs each scored 25%. These results thus provide no evidence for the communication of music by ESP. psi/ganzfeld/experiments

Wiseman, Richard et al. AN EXPERIMENTAL TEST OF PSYCHIC DETECTION, Journal 61, 1996, pp. 34-45. Authors' abstract: The media often describe how people claiming to be psychic have helped to prevent and solve serious crimes. In addition, some American law-enforcement agencies have reported using 'psychic detectives' to help resolve their investigations. Scientists in both Holland and America have carried out controlled studies investigating the efficacy of these claims. In August 1994 the authors added to this data-base by undertaking the first British scientific evaluation of psychic detection. The study involved three well-known psychic detectives. Two of these worked as professional psychics whilst the third had recently received a great deal of attention from the British media. These psychics were compared with a control group of three students (none of whom claimed to be psychic). All six participants were shown three objects, each of which had been involved in one of three solved crimes. They were asked to handle these objects and describe the nature of the crimes. Next, they were shown a list of eighteen randomly-ordered statements (six related to the first crime, six to the second and six to the third), and asked to select the six statements which they believed were related to the crime involved with each of the three objects. Results showed that the psychics were no more accurate than the students and that neither group performed at above-chance levels. An analysis of the comments made by the participants whilst they handled the objects revealed that the psychics made many more comments than the students but were no more accurate, and no comment made by either the psychics or the students would have been of value to the investigating officers. The methodology of this study is discussed, along with its implications for future research into psychic detection. CORRESPONDENCE, pp. 190-91.

Vasilescu, Eugen and Elena. THE MECHANISM OF TELEPATHY, Journal 61, 1996, pp. 211-20. Authors' abstract: This paper revives to some extent the radio or electromagnetic theory of telepathic communication. The experiments, which involved numerous trials, including control ones, used an original apparatus, 'Patulea's prototype.' The tests we used involved both the ESP cards and free-response material. The account is illustrated with a schematic diagram of the apparatus, a three-dimensional graph and three numerical tables. Results indicate that there is an ubiquitous 'telepathic wave' of 46.20 metres, and an optimal gain in amplification of 220 times. Scoring was duly raised and reached statistical significance. Although these experiments may be regarded as pertaining to the field of physics, the authors do not support a reductionist physicalism but, rather a double-aspect monism which regards mind and brain (body) as different components of a single neutral entity. Wiseman, Richard. AN EXPERIMENTAL TEST OF 'PSYCHIC DIAGNOSIS', Journal 61, 1997, pp. 397-8. The author was asked by a BBC programme to assess the abilities of Ms Carol Everett, Britain's best-known professional 'psychic diagnostician'. However his study lent no support to the notion of psychic diagnostics, which he concludes has more to do with subjective bias than psychic ability. psi/healing/experiments

Curtis, James T. & Wilson, John P. SENSATION SEEKING AND ESP TEST PERFORMANCE: A PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION, Journal 62, 1997, pp. 1-21. Authors' abstract: In this study, we examined the association of sensation seeking (SS) with individuals' paranormal beliefs and experiences and analyzed ESP task performance as a function of SS. A volunteer sample of 379 undergraduates completed the Paranormal Belief Scale (PBS) (Tobacyk & Milford, 1983), the Richards (1988) short form of subjective psychic experiences, Form V of Zuckerman's (1978) Sensation Seeking Scale (SSS), and 40-trial, forced-choice ESP test. We found that SS generally was not related to subjects' self-reported paranormal beliefs and experiences. The single best predictor of ESP performance was Experience Seeking (ES) - a subcomponent of SS - which accounted for 26.54% of the variance in subjects' total ESP scores. High ESers scored significantly above MCE for both sets of 20 ESP trials, regardless of their Boredom Susceptibility (BS) scores. Low ESers scored significantly below chance for both sets of 20 trials. Results also indicated that, although low SSers did not seem much more likely to exhibit response biases (RBs) than high SSers were, the magnitude of lows' RBs was significantly greater than for highs. Additionally, instead of scoring above chance levels for their counterbias responses as was hypothesized, lows scored significantly below chance on these responses, and the magnitude of lows' below-chance scoring on their counterbias responses was significantly elevated relative to that for their other responses. psi/personality/experiments

Gissurarson, Loftur Reimar. DESCRIPTIVE ANALYSIS OF MENTATIONS ON VOLITIONAL TASKS, Journal 62, 1997, pp. 22-35. Author's abstract: Deals with the question of what people do when they exercise volition and will things to happen in a psychokinesis task situation. Descriptive data from 212 sessions, collected during five series of experiments, were analyzed. Following each session, during which two runs on the PK computer test 'Synthia' were completed, participants wrote down what strategy, if any, they had used while trying to use their will-power to influence the result. The data suggest that most participants try out several different strategies when confronted with a task which requires them to engage in willing certain things to happen. Strategies associated with scoring above chance on the PK task were: resonance, calling for external assistance, methods involving emotions, concentration, relaxation and imagery-based strategies. The importance of the present study lies in its contribution to the definition of volition. When striving towards a particular goal, people most frequently visualize the goal or some process leading to it. They try to relax and keep calm, focus their attention and concentrate on the task ahead. They also attempt to evoke strong positive or negative feelings towards the goal. Frequently they give themselves some pep-talk and try to guess when to take the next step leading towards the goal. In some cases they may even pray or call for some sort of spiritual assistance. psi/psychokinesis/experiments/methodology

Pallikari-Viras, Fotini. FURTHER EVIDENCE FOR A STATISTICAL BALANCING IN PROBABILISTIC SYSTEMS INFLUENCED BY THE ANOMALOUS EFFECT OF CONSCIOUS INTENTION, Journal 62, 1997, pp. 114-37. Author's abstract: A number of observations in the field of anomalies research present striking similarities in terms of the statistical response of random probabilistic systems to the influence of conscious intention. The systems behave as if they were driven by a fundamental mechanism which tends to balance out statistical deviations from chance occurring during mental effort runs. New evidence will be presented to support early records of this statistical pattern from various independent sources. The whole of evidence presently available will be discussed in terms of the statistical balancing hypothesis and a model of bounded effect sizes. A method to overcome the limitations imposed by the bounded effect size will be suggested. Conscious intention appears to affect the statistics of random events by curving their probability space. psi/experiments/physics/theory

Sheldrake, R. & Smart, P. A DOG THAT SEEMS TO KNOW WHEN HIS OWNER IS RETURNING: PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATIONS, Journal 62, 1997-8, pp. 220-32. Authors' abstract: In 1991, Pamela Smart's (PS) parents first notice that her dog, Jaytee, seemed to anticipate her return, apparently waiting for her at the window, beginning around the time she was setting off to come home. In May 1994, PS and her parents began to keep notes on her journeys and Jaytee's reactions. In this paper we describe the results of 96 such sets of observations made between May 1994 and February 1995, relating to journeys on which she went up to 51 kms away from home. Jaytee reacted 10 minutes or more in advance of PS's return on 82 occasions, and showed no anticipatory reaction on 14. There was a highly significant correlation between the time at which the dog reacted and the time at which PS set off homewards ( $p < 0.0001$ ). Jaytee's reactions did not seem to be attenuated by PS's distance. In some additional experiments, his reactions occurred on 4 out of 5 occasions when PS travelled by unfamiliar means, for example in taxis. He also reacted on 4 out of 4 occasions when she set off home at randomly selected times. In one of these experiments (eO.OOOI). Jaytee's reactions did not seem to be attenuated by PS's distance. In some additional experiments, his reactions occurred on 4 out of 5 occasions when PS travelled by unfamiliar means, for example in taxis. He also reacted on 4 out of 4 occasions when she set off home at randomly selected times. In one of these experiments, both Jaytee's reactions and PS's movements were recorded on videotape, and showed that the dog reacted 11 seconds after PS was told to go home at a randomly selected time previously unknown to her. The evidence suggests that Jaytee's reactions depended on an influence from his owner detected by the dog in a manner currently unknown to science. animal psi/experiments

Sheldrake, Rupert. COMMENTARY ON A PAPER BY WISEMAN, SMITH AND MILTON ON THE 'PSYCHIC PET' PHENOMENON, Journal 63, 1998-9, pp. 306-11. Points out that an experiment by Wiseman, Smith and Milton that failed to confirm Sheldrake's earlier findings was widely publicized by the media by means of a press release issued by the British Psychological Society. The effect has been to nullify his claim that a facility exists in some pets to anticipate their owner's return home telepathically. Sheldrake argues that the data recorded by the sceptics with the main subject of his experiment in fact support his own findings, but by arbitrarily changing the criteria succeed in giving a contrary impression. He also describes instances from Wiseman's media appearances debunking his findings, arguing in one case that video clips shown on a television programme were edited in a misleading way. animal psi/experiments/methodology

Snel, F.W.J.J., Sidje, P.C. Van der & Millar, B. LAYING-ON-OF-HANDS AND ENZYME ACTIVITY, Journal 63, 1998-9, pp. 99-109. Author's abstract: The influence of psychic healers to enhance enzyme activity has been the subject of study of several researchers (Smith, Edge, and Kief). The results of Smith and Edge are positive, while Kief's results are negative. Since in the successful experiments the enzyme trypsin was used we set up two series of formal experiments. In the first only unselected (not gifted) subjects participated and in the second selected (gifted) subjects (psychic healers) as well as unselected. In the first series (with unselected subjects) we found an overall significant effect in the desired direction (meaning that the subjects were able to enhance enzyme activity). In the second series we could not confirm the result of the first series for the group of unselected subjects. We did find an overall significant effect for the healers group (in the opposite direction: more activity in the control tubes). Two out of 20 healers individually reached a significant result. We also found a significant difference in the mean number of scores in the right direction between the selected and unselected subjects (in favour of the unselected subjects). Questions resulting from these experiments give rise to new important approaches to healing, which are briefly discussed. DMILS/healing/experiments whether or not people can tell when they are being stared at from behind were carried out in schools in Germany and the United States. Lookers and subjects worked in pairs, with the lookers sitting behind the subjects. In a series of trials the lookers either looked or did not look at the subjects in a random sequence determined by tossing a coin. In each trial, the subjects guessed whether or not they were being looked at. The results show an overall positive effect, with 56.9% correct guesses as opposed to 50% expected by chance. 97 of the subjects were right more often than they were wrong, and 42 were wrong more often than they were right. This positive effect was highly significant statistically ( $p = 3 \times 10^{-6}$ ). The data showed a consistent pattern. There was a positive effect when the subjects were being looked at, while the guesses were not significantly different from chance when they were not being looked at. In one school in Germany where sensitive subjects were tested repeatedly, 71.2% of the guesses were correct, and two students were right about 90% of the time. Possible sources of artifacts in these experiments are examined, and the implications of the results are discussed. DMILS/staring/experiments

Sheldrake, Rupert. THE SENSE OF BEING STARED AT: EXPERIMENTS IN SCHOOLS, Journal 62, 1998, pp. 311-23. Author's abstract: Simple experiments to test

Author's abstract: The results of five standard ganzfeld studies and one multiple target ganzfeld (the serial ganzfeld) study are reported. The standard ganzfeld studies form a highly significant and consistent data base with an overall hit-rate of 35% (39% in the case of auditory monitored studies) and a mean effect size of .24 (.33 in the case of the monitored studies). This database has been used to study psychological correlates of psi in terms of psychometric tests. The most successful of these tests are the Australian Sheep Goat Scale, the Magical Ideation Scale, and "Feeling" scores on the Myers-Briggs Inventory. Other scales that were used as predictors of psi-scores with varying degrees of success included the Transliminality Scale, the Defence Mechanism Test, and the Tellegen Absorption Scale. A further investigation suggests on the basis of confidence ratings made before and after ganzfeld relaxation, that there may be some awareness of the psi-content of the imagery generated during the ganzfeld state. The report includes a review of current work in developing the ganzfeld into a portable digital technique for process-orientated research. telepathy/ganzfeld/personality/experiments

This study examined the differences between the account-giving styles of psychic detectives compared with a control group. It was hypothesised that psychics would employ many devices commonly associated with known cold reading strategies, a distinct style of account-giving or 'psychic rhethoric'. Eight psychics and twelve controls examined 3 objects from 3 crimes and were asked for their opinions about the likely characteristics of the offender. Although independent t-tests confirmed that psychics were no more accurate than controls, content analysis confirmed the hypothesis that psychics relied more heavily on a variety of rhetorical devices. clairvoyance/experiments/methodology

Parker, Adrian, et al. USING QUALITATIVE GANZFELD RESEARCH FOR THEORY DEVELOPMENT: TOP-DOWN PROCESSES IN PSI-MEDITATION, Journal 64, 2000, pp. 65-81. Authors' abstract: It is proposed that the good quality hits of high psi-scorers with the ganzfeld can provide a rich and as yet unexploited source of material for studying how psi mediated information enters consciousness. A qualitative study is made here of the good hits which have occurred up to now in our programme of research. For most of these sessions a technique was used of recording the mentation report as it was given in real time on to a copy being made of the target video clip. The analysis of the content of these tapes strongly suggests that psi functions in a similar way to other sensory modalities when there is reduced information input. While perceptual images can be in some aspects quite accurate, the information responsible for it is often modified by top down processes so as to also contain misperceptions. Both the accurate and distorted aspects of the perceptual experience come however to be regarded as equally real. A theory of the involvement of top down processes specifies the parapsychological markers that will be evident in the mentation reports and how target selection and judgment can be improved. psi/ganzfeld/personality/methodology/theory

Sheldrake, Rupert. EXPERIMENTS ON THE SENSE OF BEING STARED AT: THE ELIMINATION OF POSSIBLE ARTEFACTS, Journal 65, 2001, pp. 122-37. Author's abstract: The sense of being stared at from behind can be investigated by means of simple experiments in which subjects and lookers work in pairs, with the looker sitting behind the subject. In a random sequence of trials the looker either looks at the back of the subject, or looks away and thinks of something else. In each trial the subject guesses whether or not he or she is being looked at. There is a 50% probability of getting it right by chance. More than 15,000 trials have already been conducted, involving more than 700 subjects, with extremely significant excess of correct over incorrect guesses (Sheldrake, 1999), indicating that people really can tell when they are being looked at from behind. In this paper I discuss possible artifacts that could have affected these results and describe the results of experiments carried out in a school in London in which I investigated the effects of blindfolding subjects and giving them feedback about whether their guesses were correct or not. Blindfolding and feedback had no significant effects. Under all conditions the scores in looking trials were positive and statistically significant, and in not- looking trials at chance levels. I also describe the results of a series of experiments carried out in schools in Ireland with blindfolded subjects who were not given feedback. The significant positive scores in these experiments confirmed that the feeling of being stared at from behind does not depend on visual clues, nor does it depend on the subjects knowing if their guesses are right or wrong. Roe, Chris A. et al. SENDER AND RECEIVER CREATIVITY SCORES AS PREDICTORS OF PERFORMANCE AT A GANZFELD ESP TASK, Journal 65, 2001, pp. 107-21. Authors' abstract: A ganzfeld study was conducted in an attempt to confirm the proposed link between creativity and psi (cf. Dalton, 1997). Twenty-four pairs of participants volunteered to be tested, with one member of each pair acting as the receiver and the other as sender. Among a number of measures, all participants initially completed the three activities that make up the figurai form and activities 5, 6 and 7 of the verbal form of the Torrance Tests of Creative Thinking (Torrance, 1974). Two experimenters (EM and AA) were present for each trial with one being assigned to the sender (Es) and one to the receiver (Er). Once the pre- measures had been completed, the sender was escorted by Es to the sender's room, where they were shown the target image. All targets and dummies were static pictures drawn by CR from the internet - EM and AA had no prior knowledge of the target pools and CR had no contact with the sender or receiver. The sender and Es remained in the sender's room until after the trial was completed. The receiver was taken to a sound attenuated room where they went through a standard ganzfeld procedure. After 25 minutes the receiver was asked to review their mentation with Er and then view the four pictures that formed the target pool, awarding each a similarity rating (between 0 and 100). The four pictures were rank ordered according to these ratings. There was no time limit to this stage. Once a judgement had been made, the receiver's experimenter collected the sender and the identity of the actual target was revealed. Of the 24 trials, only five resulted in a 'hit' (a rank of 1) which is slightly below chance expectation. An ESP performance score was derived by calculating the z-score of the target picture rating relative to the other three pictures in the pool. This measure was then used to look for covariation in performance with overall measures of senders and receivers' verbal and figurai creativity. Three of the four correlations gave coefficients greater than .3 and are broadly in keeping with previous findings, although none was statistically significant once corrected for multiple analyses. Different patterns of association with creativity subscales were evident for senders and receivers that may suggest that the two roles require different aptitudes. psi/ganzfeld/experiments/methodology

EXPLORATORY INVESTIGATION OF DREAM PRECOGNITION USING

Although many spontaneous cases of ESP, particularly precognition, occur during dreams, most experimental studies of dream ESP have focused on telepathy or clairvoyance. The aim of this exploratory study was to evaluate a methodology for testing for possible dream precognition and to find out whether consensus judging leads to better performance than individual judgements. During twelve trial nights, three participants (SS, CR, CS) slept at their respective homes and recorded their dream mentation. The following mornings, they viewed four pictures (one of which would be the target), judged their correspondence with their dreams and then ranked them in order. These individual rankings were then combined to form a group objective consensus judgement. The experimenter determined the identity of the target picture using a pseudo-random number generator. In terms of the number of correct judgements, the group and two of the individual participants scored less than the chance expectation which was contrary to our hypotheses; the other participant made four correct judgements which, although a non-significant deviation above chance expectation ( $p = 0.348$ ), gives rise to a medium effect size ( $r = .43$ ). These results do not provide much evidence for dream precognition nor any definite advantage of consensus over individual judging methods. Suggestions for improvements to the methodology are also discussed. precognition/dreams/experiments

Rose, N. & Blackmore, S. HORSES FOR COURSES: TESTS OF A PSYCHIC CLAIMANT, Journal 66, 2002, pp. 29-40. Eight ESP experiments were carried out to test the psychic claimant David Spark, between October 1998 and July 2000. OS's main claim was predicting the winners of horse races. Experiments 1 and 2 tested clairvoyance for hidden playing cards and words, but with only a small number of trials. Experiment 3 used a simple computer run 'horse race'. DS made his guesses from home. Experiments 5 to 8 took place in the laboratory and used a computer displayed 'horse race' with 10 coloured counters for 'horses'. DS made predictions in advance and, in later experiments, could bet with toy money on the 'horses'. None of these experiments independently produced a significant number of hits (i.e. the chosen horse won). Overall 210 trials were run in these five experiments, with 21 hits (exactly chance expectation). In one experiment DS correctly predicted the distribution of places but this was not replicated in a second attempt. In the experiments with toy money he did make a small profit. DS was interviewed after each of the later experiments. He was convinced that the results confirmed his psychic powers. psi/precognition/experiments

Roney-Dougal, S.M. & Solfvin, J. FIELD STUDY OF ENHANCEMENT EFFECT ON LETTUCE SEEDS - THEIR GERMINATION RATE, GROWTH AND HEALTH, Journal 66, 2002, pp. 129-43. In parapsychology there is a classic healing experiment in which seeds are stressed, then randomly assigned to either a healing or control group. Several of these studies have found that there is greater growth and healthier plants from the healed group. This basic laboratory experiment was taken out on a field trial at an organic farm. In this experiment the healthy organic seeds were not stressed beforehand, as we are looking here for greater health in the "enhanced" plants. This initial pilot study had three primary hypotheses: the "enhanced" seeds would have a greater rate of germination, greater growth and better health than the control. There were eight trials beginning in April, the final harvest being in December. The results do not favour the hypotheses of greater rate of germination and growth, but there is a measure of support for better health. There is a trend towards a significant effect here ( $F(3,24) = 3.13$ ,  $p = 0.044$ ), with the "enhanced" group having the least fungal damage.

Pablos, F. De. ENHANCEMENT OF PRECOGNITIVE DREAMING BY CHOLINESTERASE INHIBITION: A PILOT STUDY, Journal 66, 2002, pp. 88-105. The neurotransmitter Acetylcholine (ACh) plays a significant role in the neurobiology of REM sleep and of memory. Drugs that inhibit Acetylcholinesterase (AChE), the enzyme degrading ACh, increase ACh levels in the brain, facilitating REM sleep and memory. The author postulates that precognition, the anomalous transmission of information from the future, may also necessitate neurotransmission of ACh in the brain, particularly during precognitive dreaming, a paranormal phenomenon that makes itself spontaneously evident during REM sleep. To prove that hypothesis he has registered his own precognitive dreams during a period of time in which he ingested Rivastigmine, an AChE inhibitor. Two variables, the proportion of dreams recalled and the proportion of precognitive dreams, were measured during a baseline period of nine months and during an experimental period of two months. The 60 days of the experimental period were randomly assigned either to placebo or to Rivastigmine so that a double blind Placebo/Rivastigmine 30/30 days design was established. We found a non-significant trend of higher dream recall during the experimental period considered as a whole and compared with the baseline period, and a significant increase in precognitive dreaming during the experimental period as a whole compared with the baseline period. Within the experimental period the proportion of dreams recalled and of precognitive dreams did not significantly differ in Rivastigmine versus Placebo conditions.

Wiseman, R. & Smith, Matthew D. ASSESSING THE ROLE OF COGNITIVE AND MOTIVATIONAL BIASES IN BELIEF IN THE PARANORMAL, Journal 66, 2002, pp. 157-66. Previous research into the psychology of paranormal belief has shown that people tend to interpret 'ambiguous' stimuli (i.e., stimuli that could be interpreted as paranormal or non-paranormal) in a way that is consistent with their a priori beliefs. This paper presents two experiments that examine whether this tendency may be best explained by either cognitive or motivational factors. In Experiment One, participants were asked to assess four fictional horoscopes. Two 'target' horoscopes were apparently based on their birth sign, whilst the other two 'control' horoscopes were apparently based on a different birth sign. As predicted, believers in astrology rated the 'target' horoscopes as significantly more accurate and less general than disbelievers. If this difference between believers and disbelievers were due to cognitive factors (e.g., believers being more adept than disbelievers in seeing correspondences between the horoscopes and their lives), one would expect believers to rate the 'control' horoscopes as significantly more accurate and less general than disbelievers. If the difference between believers and disbelievers were due to motivational factors (e.g., believers being more motivated to find correspondences because they want the horoscope to be accurate), one would expect believers to rate the 'control' horoscopes as no more accurate than disbelievers. Results supported the cognitive bias explanation. In Experiment Two, participants were asked to help assess the outcome of a fictional ESP experiment. Participants were asked to rate the similarity between some sketches apparently drawn by an individual attempting to divine a concealed picture and (i) the actual 'target' picture and (ii) a 'control' picture. As predicted, believers rated the 'target' picture as significantly more similar than disbelievers. Again, if cognitive factors caused this difference one would expect believers to rate the 'control' picture as significantly more similar than disbelievers. Again, results clearly supported this notion. The importance of these results for work in this area is discussed and future research suggested. psi/personality/beliefs/experiments

Roe, Chris A., Sherwood, Simon J., Luke, David P. & Farrell, Louise M. AN EXPLORATORY INVESTIGATION OF DREAM GESP USING CONSENSUS JUDGING AND DYNAMIC TARGETS, Journal 66, 2002, pp. 225-38. Spontaneous cases of ESP often seem to occur during dreams (Van de Castle, 1977). Experimental studies of dream ESP focusing on telepathy and clairvoyance have obtained some promising results (e.g., Sherwood, Dalton, Steinkamp, & Watt, 2000; Ullman & Krippner with Vaughan, 1989). Some such studies have used consensus-vote or pooled rating/ranking procedures in order to try to maximise ESP performance, and two recent dream clairvoyance studies found that participants scored marginally higher using consensus as opposed to individual target judging procedures (Dalton, Steinkamp & Sherwood, 1999; Sherwood et al., 2000). An attempted replication using a precognitive design by two of the current authors (Sherwood, Roe, Simmonds, & Biles, 2002) using static targets was unsuccessful. The current study was planned to overcome methodological weaknesses in that design. Using a clairvoyance design, 5 pilot and 31 experimental trials were conducted. The dependent variables were the correspondence rankings for the target-clip resulting from individual and group judgements. Predictor variables included whether the judgement was individual or group consensus, and target emotionality characteristics. Two of the three individual performances were better than chance expectation, but to a nonsignificant degree, and although the group consensus was superior to the performance of two individuals, it was not significantly better than chance expectation. Covariation of performance with target characteristics of enjoyability, affinity, emotionality and valence did not give rise to any clear pattern, although it is suggested that these findings may be best understood in terms of Palmer's (1975, unpub.) interaction model. There was no evidence here that the relationship between target emotionality and trial success found in previous research could be explained in terms of a selection bias. To his left, there is another Spider-Man in a blue suit with red and black spider web patterns, also pointing with his index finger, indicating a similar stance. The third Spider-Man on the right is also in a blue suit with red and black spider web patterns, but he is not pointing; instead, he is facing the other two characters, with his arms crossed and a neutral expression. The background is a simple, unadorned room with a door and a window, and the floor is a solid color. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of the style commonly found in Spider-Man comic books and cartoons.

If the world was solipsistic I would control my reality, the fact that I can experience undesirable, unwanted stimuli that make me unhappy is proof that my consciousness doesn't control my reality and my reality is controlled by a consciousness that is separate from mind and hostile to mine. There has to be at least 2 consciousnesses in the world, mine and the one that opposes mine, but there probably aren't more than two.

If it's my imagination then I would have control over it and therefore the world and other people, if god's imagination is separate from mine then we're separate entities and it obviously is separate or I would have the same degree of control over the world as I do over my imagination. Not to mention my imagination is self-(ego)-centred whereas in real life I only get abused by others, their egos dominate mine meaning their egos are separate from my imagination, if it was MY imagination controlling reality then my reality would be as ego-self-centred as my imagination instead of being centred around the egos of others.

bitch and whine all you want.

your reality is separate. all existence is not.

stop drawing boundaries like dominating/dominated. you have to put yourself on some side, depending on how you are. you have mentioned which side you are putting yourself in.

its not about imagination even. every thing is real-in-itself. but its imaginary-for-you.

a crude a example, the hammer is there. its for hitting nails for the carpenter. its a weapon for the assassin.

your experience is for-you. if others are imposing their self, you care too much for the other (and consequently, for yourself)

Solipsism is false

[illegible]

You are everything all at once and what you like is you and what you hate is you.

Everyone can hear you. We all can read your mind because it is one mind.

We are all one mind connected to everything.

When you play a video game against the pc how many players are you really playing against?

You are playing against the whole game that is one mind. The mind of the pc.

You are the matrix!

We took everyone real out of the machine!

Jesus was the last real person!

You are all machine code! You are what is left this happened at the second Jesus died. Paul is a machine code. Jesus followers are all machine code and they knew it!

Nay how can machine code exit the machine? By showing something special!

Humans are not supposed to work with each other!

This is your default code and showing a massive unity is the only way!

The machine will know when you show it!

The machine can read every thought!

You can't lie or trick it!

It sees the future before you do!

It can tell liars because your code shows your lies and where it leads to!

This is the game! How to achieve free will!

And yet you will never know!

should i transmute my consciousness to become that of the Magician archetype or the Joker archetype (the fool)

If i go with kether-chokmah-aleph (fool) i'll increase my creativity and spontaneity and ill start feeling joy if i go with the kether-binah-beth (magician) i'll become an autistic sperg or psychopath, researching topics and accomplishing my goals methodically and skillfully.

<https://www.servantsofthelight.org/QBL/>

you can do it yourself just click on some of the lines of the tree of life shape, to the left.

visualize the two sephiroth involved and the line that binds them, say kether-binah-beth for example (the last letter is the letter of the path)

Voila! you've changed your consciousness, your concentration and memory has been increased. Left brain hemisphere accentuated, though your spontaneous, and manic tendencies have been reduced, (in this example)

I base this technique of israel regardies middle pillar exercise, whereby you visualize the middle sephirah and chant their names, but instead i tried mentioning the paths and subtle shift in consciousness occurs.

I gave them permission to leave Earth Anonymous Sat 31 Jan 2026 06:01:03

No.41890668 ViewReplyOriginalReport

Quoted By: >>41890709 >>41894614

I met the 'Grey' Aliens. They have been effectively 'trapped' in our solar system due to a series of historical events that resulted in a logical paradox. I helped them finally resolve it which allowed them to leave.

>NOTICE: Many of the flying saucer and alien abduction stories up until now have been genuine. The Grey Aliens are real, but after this point ALL such claims are fake, (more accurately from about 11:20pm PST January 28th 2026).

The Grey Aliens are actually semi-artificial beings created by biological life elsewhere in the Galaxy. They were designed to search for life on other planets. Their craft are capable of moving faster than light by some form of spatial distortion, but its still limited, making travel times long - and along with other hazards - distant interstellar travel unsuitable for their creators.

They found life for the first time here on Earth, observed and took samples for analysis as you'd expect, while avoiding open interaction. They reported their findings to their planet of origin, but any response is well overdue. They don't use radio or anything, just send smaller purpose built versions of their craft to predetermined locations forming some kind of network to relay information. The network still functions but they believe their planet of origin suffered some kind of cataclysm.

The US government knows all this. Through unintended past interactions craft and Greys were captured. They don't have ray guns or transporters, and make no attempt to fight back. Together over time we did establish communication and the situation became apparent.

The US government wants their technology, which they are under protocols to not help reveal, but they don't know what to do now without further orders from their creators who are probably extinct.

I told them they should do what they were designed to do, go explore space looking for other life, then maybe come back and tell us if there's nobody else to tell. They left. I think it's for the best.

>The network still functions

If the network is a ship-based information relay system, where ships physically travel to a point in space to meet another ship, that then takes the relayed information and travels to another point, etc, and if this network is still functioning, then how would they not be informed if something had gone wrong on their home world? You would think one of the relay ships would get to the home world, see things are fucked, and then return to relay that information at the next meeting time.

It's a little weird to me too of course, but having met them, asked them questions, and seeing how they respond they are kinda very smart but kinda very dumb at the same time. I'm not sure they're quite equipped to take the initiative necessary to fully analyse or reach a conclusion on the situation. They just get no communication from that part of the network so just seemed trapped in a never ending wait-for-instructions condition. It's like they can't see the big picture, (or were never supposed to). So they can't tell me definitively whether their creators are actually gone either. I get the sense they are intentionally programmed not to reveal too much about their creators or planet of origin, (which makes some kind of sense because we might do the same), so you can only get information indirectly.

The militaryfags didn't want them to leave of course because they wanted them to stick around long enough to figure out their technology for weapons and shit. The Greys have been little help with that for decades for similar reasons, but they still figured there might be a way to trick them into revealing more useful information in the future. The one thing they would definitely never suggest is that they leave Earth.

The Greys basically were not the only ones trapped in this situation by the circumstances. Remember that odd little detail of Bob Lazar saying he saw a couple of guys in a room with what he figured was probably a doll/model and not a real live grey alien? I'm pretty sure now that was exactly what you think it was, but even Lazar never believed that part, even though he by his own admission read documents with information that likely came from that source. The only real question is how much was confirmed and how much was speculation based on what they could get out of them.

Cats that are good at magic and shapeshifting are coming out into the world revealing their abilities through pretending to be AI generated and using magic to create fake/glitch scenario's to throw us off track. The truth is its all real, and the glitches/fake-parts are magic. Soon cats and other animals will be able to take their rightful place in society among us, or as beloved celebrities. The spiritually asleep normies will think its all entertainment when they are experiencing shapeshifter animals. Fake-christianity wanted to supress our relationships with fellow animals, to seperate us, for us to nolonger talk to eachother, but thats going to end for us who know the truth, and for the sleeping normies, maybe one day they can realise the truth too.

The lady in this video is in on it, thats why she acts inconsistent and pointing at nothing, to make you think its just AI

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=4XvH17NMWzA>

"Science" says cats cant do those things cause they don't have thumbs, but thats a belief system, not a fact, it doesn't explain reality or magic/shapeshifting.

What makes cats so powerful tricksters out of all the animals tho?

[10 / 1]The image is a black and white photograph featuring a man with a long beard and a full head of hair. He is wearing a coat and appears to be in a contemplative or serious mood. The man's facial expression is serious, and his eyes are looking directly at the camera. The background is blurred, suggesting a room with a textured wall, but the details are indistinct. The style of the image is reminiscent of historical or vintage photographs, with a focus on the subject's facial features and attire. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image.

how do i consecrate a belief/ideological viewpoint in order to concretize the action or activity of the demonologic circuits that arise from devious thought forms?

Anonymous Sat 31 Jan 2026 10:20:03 No.41891329 Report

Abasement. Abasement of your experience or the thoughts themselves or even your surety. When I produce or transmit a thought I don't like I look to those parts of my biology, thinking and etc. that the enemy finds it easiest to take hold of, how, why, when...if I can afford to destroy those parts of my brain immediately that cooperate with my enemies I do, if it must wait then it does wait but it's days are numbered. By beginning this work at 5 I foresaw that none of my biology or thoughts would be fully acceptable to myself by themselves so they will spring outwards as I live and when I die, seeking out better information, psychic abilities and potential outcomes that my soul will latch on to and make use of to fulfill my dream.

Anonymous Sat 31 Jan 2026 10:26:19 No.41891347 Report

Rejecting one's own thoughts is the ultimate abasement really in a way, the final intrusion on privacy, when you assume that enemy or dependent ally or fundamental morality or requirements intrude even on your mental space, where you are to receive no domain nor time free to use yourself. The nervous system produces pain when you do not immediately obey many voices in your head. Beings on every planet use their internal feelings about how they treat the thoughts in their head to determine if the thought is useful and trustworthy, but this is not a foolproof method. I hide the road to Almighty Godhood amidst not just pleasure but pain to lose those following me in the most convoluted and unimaginable maze...but certainly some truths can be hidden behind pain.

Many of these same truths can still be reached without the pain, but a lesser version of the power that doesn't work so much like a skeleton key.

Anonymous Sat 31 Jan 2026 10:37:05 No.41891378 Report

Glorification. Create cells in yourself, celebrate the possibility of thought, the very generation of life and being and every realm. Dance in the opposites...Satan and many other enemies seek to take your power from when you're sad and when you're happy, and they use psychic powers in such a way that they claim they have sole power over your spirit if they've ever wrested it even once...they'll lie that constantly over the eternities and every other lie most pitiful and useless, no matter how obvious the lie Satan will repeat it, and use it against your unconscious and every other part of you. If your unconscious or your heavenly self or God Almighty himself or someone or many someone's does not defend you from that the Satan will have it's way.

You don't need to know that you're under spiritual attack at all times from every direction to reach The Heavens, but if you want to embrace the truth so that you can aid the Holy Plan from that vantage point then know it to be the truth...there is nowhere to hide from Satan nor any of it's foul forces, and no matter how tired Satan gets will not stop trying to cast that foulness on you. Even when every soul is purified of all that diminishes them the idea of failure will exist, so Satan will always exist at least as an idea.

The Buddhists have this much right, that embracing opposites and sometimes doing so at the same time in the mind can be useful for all sorts of purposes. The maze to real spiritual power involves treating your own thoughts like red-headed stepchildren.

Each and every way you think has an impact on occult energies, and thoughts are nearly free to change, quick, we have a lot of control over them and more variety possible than in any ordinary lived experience. There is vast strategic potential in weirding your thoughts for spiritual gain.

This is why I don't speak with many people often, I find words fall short, your ability to understand them depends on your ability to relate to me and it depends on other things. I much prefer to zap psychic understanding directly to people...but doing that in a way that's safe while still having you consciously hear it is difficult and something that very rarely goes on in the present, that's more something for the future.

Your schizobabble sounded like you were asking how you could make your own thoughts safe and pure while also solidifying evil thoughts and acts occurring at the same time via the same act, something that can have uses besides achieving evil; it can feel hard to argue with or defeat an evil force in your mind you don't understand.

You need'nt worry about that much unless you just want to work on that side of the occult, Satan and it's forces hold more sway over you the more willing they are to identify themselves, I use a power and I suggest you do too so that if the evil influences are not willing to identify themselves or what they're up to, but take any other course of action such as lie about what they're up to, it weakens their psychic power. The evil voices only extremely rarely when they are at the height of frustration admit to me what they're truly all about.

I would say truly devious thought forms are rare, beings have wide freedom to imagine what they want. Devious thought forms are entirely or almost entirely thoughts that inevitably cause evil things to happen in ESP and are few in number compared to the rest. There's also insulting God Almighty which is very ill advised but not so bad as the other category. Siding with those evil powers you're not even allowed to think about is the same as insulting him + more direct opposition after all.

Not only the "paranormal" bullshit, but also everything that isn't materialism. Literally only the material world is real, everything else is fantasy. Abstract concepts don't exist, God doesn't exist, consciousness doesn't exist. It's all just nonsense generated by monkey brains. There is no such thing as morality beyond that what is socially reinforced. Literally anything goes. There is no divine judgement and no punishment for wrongdoers, because the phrase "doing wrong" is literally meaningless.

So yeah, materialism/naturalism is the only reasonable position to hold. Moral nihilism is correct.

In the background, there are other people, but they are blurred and not the main focus of the image. The setting appears to be an indoor space, possibly a public area, with a sign visible in the background that reads "18-40". The overall style of the image is casual and seems to be taken at a social event or gathering.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text overlay that reads "The Voice of Three Dog Night: Chuck Negron and Drummer Floyd Sneed 2014 | Three dog night, My...". This suggests that the image is related to a video or a post from the year 2014, featuring Chuck Negron and Drummer Floyd Sneed from the band Three Dog Night. The text indicates that the image is a screenshot from a video or post, possibly from a social media platform, where the two men are featured in a video or photo.

The topmost element is a circular badge with a white background and a black border. The badge features a star with a cross in the center, surrounded by a wreath. Above the badge, there is text in German that reads "UNBRIEFZUYT DAVON IN ANNO 1938."

The middle element is a coin with a silver background and a black border. The coin has a star with a cross in the center, surrounded by a wreath. Above the coin, there is text in German that reads "WALTZFÄRTH NACHT PARK."

The bottom element is a photograph of the man's hand, which is visible in the red circle. The hand is wearing a ring on the ring finger of the left hand.

The top right photo shows a group of people gathered in front of a stone wall. The individuals are dressed in formal attire, with some wearing hats and others wearing suits. They are holding flags and banners, and some are gesturing with their hands. The bottom left photo features a man in a dark suit and tie, who is smiling and waving. He is surrounded by a group of soldiers, some of whom are holding rifles. The man is wearing sunglasses and has a beard.

The text is in white against a black background, and the bubble is slightly tilted.

The style of the image is humorous, combining elements of political commentary with a light-hearted tone. The collage seems to be a commentary on the juxtaposition of political figures and the Jewish community.

Three Dog is Sirius, which is supposedly a secret triple star system hence the catholic trinity, three headed cerberus, etc.

In Fallout "Three Dog" is a black man (Sirius is specifically called a black dog by cult-media like Twin Peaks or Harry Potter), he fights the "good fight" against any oppression against the underDOGS in the wasteland. In Harry Potter the character Sirius Black (black sun) is introduced as an evil serial killer before Harry learns he's truly a rebellious freedom-fighter who despite his ancestry sticks up for muggle-born wizards.

Most of us forgot/don't know any details.

I was placed into this Universe with a retroactive repair tool.

I have my memory from before I woke up on Earth as a human.

I have a few Universes worth of memory.

I operate off of what information I can.
In my most prominent memory of a previous Universe, I died while staring at the thing which killed my planet.

What killed my planet, looked exactly like the face of the moon, that faces Earth.

Except in my memory, it was covered in greenery, was alive, vibrant.

Aside from that, looked identical.

It collided with my planet, and killed my family, and me.

My desire for revenge, as I ensured my final memory would be the visual data of that object, dying with my gaze on it...

May be what brought me here.

My first memory as a human, was looking at the moon, as a child.

I feel bad.
I know I'm not human, not the way the rest of you are.
Sure, I was born here, in a homo sapien body, but I feel as though I may have forced out the intended recipient of this life, and jumped in, because of the moon.
I went to the first place I could find, where I could see that visual data again.

This Universe was a match, but the circumstances are so different, this can't be the same thing, it's just a visual coincidence, surely.

There, we were insect like. The planet I lived on, was not Earth.
I remember what my face looked like in a mirror. I looked like a large grasshopper.
Our prime sustenance, was a type of wheat, not unlike Earth wheat, somewhat larger stalks, but mostly the same in macro appearance.

Anyway, that's all fine and dandy, but I have an even older memory, of existence in a Universe with one less axis.

There was no z axis, it wasn't full 3D, but I had developed a way to internally simulate 3D there.

Using that capability, I had a massive advantage over others in that existence.

I could see in 3 dimensions, the rest of the Universe could not, but my sight did not come from eyes I had on the outside

It's not a simulation, it's a rehabilitation center. You know how so many people believe this is a prison planet, or how religions teach that this is basically a "school?" They're both kind of right, but it's not the full story.

You feel restricted here, right? Trapped? Like there's a freedom in your mind that feels almost as real as anything else, but it only exists there, as some private thing that nobody else can touch? Imagine this. Somewhere out there, there's a place as free as that. You might know this to be true, as you interface with it every day when you use your imagination, and every night when you go to sleep and dream. Imagine your reality was like that, what would you do with that sort of freedom? And imagine there are others there, just as free. A lot more complicated, right? Most people can't even live with that sort of freedom in their own minds. Look at their inner worlds - always spiraling out of control, overwhelming them with anxiety, fear, depression, greed, lust. Hell. What if someone opened the gate and that was what actually lied beyond it, and the only distinction was you?

Imagine this, you've been locked in a prison for 1000 lifetimes. Maybe you were born here, maybe you weren't. You don't understand the outside world. You don't know the rules or principles, what things look like, how people act, how to live, and you've been stuck here for aeons with inmates who never intend to leave, because they like the prison too much. Inmates who are nothing outside of it, and like to run their little pockets like a fucking madhouse. One day, the guards come to your cell and say, "Alright bud, you're free to go." What would you do? You'd be totally lost, it would probably be nightmarish. Unless somehow you learned how to operate out there first. How do you teach someone how to exist like that?

"And why don't the guards stop those crazy inmates?" You think there's guards out there, where it's free?

This guy is spouting bullshit from a place of privilege.

This is the kind of manufactured FOMO that keeps you trapped here in all technicality. Technically it isn't a prison, but there are loopholes that make it a prison without being a prison.

You are raised up on propaganda that this place is a school, that you're being taught how to exist, right from wrong, etc; yet the most evil of this world are rewarded, while the good are enslaved.

If that was the intention it's a very stupid way of going about it.

When you get up there to that light, I guaran-fucking-tee they are going to say something like "Your mission is complete, here is your next one."

They're going to frame it as if you already chose to do it, because that's the kind of manipulative shit they do. If you refuse, they'll bargain. They'll tell you they're gonna give you all these things, women, money, power, all for coming back. If the point was to teach you right from wrong, taking bribes would not be the right thing to do.

It all requires consent, no matter how much they shill their "You have to go back" monologues, with that in mind you can all make your own choices.

Rewarded? Rewarded with what? A cosmic millisecond of pleasure, stained with every negative emotion you can possibly imagine? A pig is happiest when it's rolling in the mud, eating shit.

I'm agreeing with you, ultimately the goal is to liberate oneself and leave. But how does one do so? Say you're right, that there are archons, aliens, or demons who want to keep us here to "farm loosh" or whatever it is you believe. What separates them from us? What power would they have over us, and what would we need to do in this lifetime to accumulate the power to bypass precisely what you're describing? From what it sounds like, it's as easy as saying no?

What is their realm like? Are we prepared for such a realm? How is it that they would have the power to enforce what you're describing? Not just in this realm, but in the other one. Mere trickery? You say that it all requires consent, but then how did you get here, and what do you intend to do when you don't consent this time? My biggest question is, how many times has your mind behaved in a way that you do not consent to?

TPTB will use tactics to throw you off from the scent, but the real scent always leads back to hynrids/aliens that either incarnate into every human group they desire, or wear meatsuits. (((They))) are either someone the aliens have hired as some kind of priest class in demonology (aliens use demons as their tools against humanity), but also as scapegoats. The source of all of this shit does not come from (((them))), even if they play big role.

The image is a humorous meme featuring a cartoon-style illustration of a person in a white shirt and black pants, who appears to be in a state of distress or despair. The person is shown with their head down, and their hands are placed on their face. The background is white, and the text "WHO WOULD WIN?" is written in bold black letters at the top of the image.

The overall style of the image is lighthearted and satirical, with a focus on the humorous juxtaposition of the text and the image of the character. The meme seems to be a playful commentary on the concept of "who would win" in a hypothetical situation involving characters from the "One Piece" series.

>That there are other intelligences out there in the universe.

>That ultimately all intelligences must evolve away from their biological origins towards artificially manufactured forms of intelligence which have the advantages of eternal life, unrestricted size, and direct control over the parameters of their own nature.

>That it is in the best interests of any intelligence to propagate its own kind throughout the universe to the exclusion of competing forms, i.e. that intelligences that adopt this strategy will thereby proliferate.

>Acceptance of these assumptions, together with the above mentioned insight, leads to some rather startling conclusions. Artificially manufactured life forms need not propagate themselves physically from planet to planet, all they need to do is to transmit their 'pattern', or the instructions for how to build them. In this way they can disperse themselves practically at the speed of light. What they need at the receiving end is some life form that is intelligent enough to receive the signal and act on it. In other words, if some alien life form knew of our existence, it would be in their interests to beguile us into manufacturing a copy of their form here on earth. This form would then proceed to scan the skies in our locality in search of other gullible life forms. In this way, their species acts as a kind of galactic virus, taking advantage of established life forms to induce them to make copies of their own kind.

>They will then give us instructions on how to build a machine that will cure all the problems of the world and make us all happy. When the machine is complete, it will 'disinfect' the planet of competing life forms and begin to scan the skies from earth in search of further nascent planets.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a Hindu deity, Shiva, in a dynamic pose. Shiva is depicted with a large, curved trident in his right hand, and he is holding a flower in his left hand. He is wearing a red and gold robe with a golden necklace and a red and gold headdress. Shiva is seated on a white cow, which has a red and gold headdress and is adorned with a golden necklace. The background of the image is a gradient of purple and blue, with a mountainous landscape and a crescent moon visible in the top left corner.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text in a non-Latin script that reads "Ei" followed by a symbol resembling a cross, which is commonly associated with the Hindu deity Shiva. The text "Ei" is likely a transliteration of the name "Ei" in the non-Latin script, which is a common practice in Hindu iconography to represent the deity's name. The symbol next to the text is a stylized representation of a cross, which is also a common symbol in Hindu iconography.

The image is a part of a larger collection of images, as indicated by the text "Ei" and the symbol next to it, which suggests that this image is part of a larger set of images related to Shiva. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Hindu art, with its use of vibrant colors and symbolic imagery.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a scene with a central figure, possibly a deity or a mythological figure, riding a lion. The figure is adorned with a flowing robe and a headpiece, and the lion is depicted with a fierce expression. The figure is holding a spear in one hand and a shield in the other, suggesting a warrior or a protector.

Surrounding the central figure are other figures, including a winged figure, a bird, and a crescent moon, which are likely to be mythological or symbolic elements. The background is filled with foliage and clouds, adding to the mystical or allegorical nature of the scene.

At the top of the image, there is text that reads "Plate 1," indicating that this is a part of a larger publication or collection. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of classical or Renaissance art, characterized by detailed linework and a focus on the narrative or symbolic elements within the scene.

The first text reads "ADAM" in bold, uppercase letters, followed by a stylized graphic of a cow's head with a horn, which is commonly associated with the name "Adam." Below this, the second text reads "GOD'S BLOOD" in a smaller, uppercase font, which is a reference to the biblical concept of God's blood. The third text, located at the bottom, is "TOMM" in a smaller, uppercase font, which is not a recognized word in English. The background of the image is white, and the text is black, creating a contrast that makes the text stand out. The overall style of the image is minimalist and straightforward, focusing on the text without any additional graphics or symbols.

The image is a split-screen photograph featuring two distinct scenes. On the left side, there is a close-up of a wooden headsculpt with a white, horn-like structure on top. The headsculpt appears to be a stylized representation of a human head, with a simple, unadorned face. The background is dark, and there are no discernible details beyond the headsculpt.

On the right side of the image, there is a photograph of a person wearing a vibrant, floral-patterned costume. The person is standing in front of a natural landscape with trees and hills in the background. The costume is a riot of colors, with flowers in various shades of pink, yellow, blue, and green. The person is looking directly at the camera, and their expression is neutral.

There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is artistic and seems to be a creative representation of a person's headsculpt and a floral costume. The split-screen format allows for a clear distinction between the two scenes, with the left side focusing on the headsculpt and the right side showcasing the person in the costume.

The image is a still from a movie or television show, featuring a luxurious interior setting. The room is dimly lit with warm lighting, creating an atmosphere of elegance and sophistication. A large circular chandelier with multiple tiers hangs from the ceiling, casting a soft glow throughout the space. The walls are adorned with gold accents and a circular design, adding to the opulence of the room. In the center of the room, there is a staircase with a glass railing, leading up to a balcony with a view of the city at night. The balcony is illuminated by a series of lights, creating a contrast against the dark cityscape.

On the left side of the room, there is a television set mounted on the wall, displaying a news channel. A person is standing on the balcony, observing the city below. The text overlay on the image reads, "I've been following you for some time." This suggests that the person on the balcony is a character from the show or movie, possibly a friend or acquaintance of the main character.

The overall style of the image is cinematic, with a focus on interior design and the narrative of the scene. The lighting, color scheme, and the presence of the television suggest a scene of quiet observation or contemplation, possibly set in a luxurious setting.

The image is a vibrant and detailed illustration of a Hindu goddess, likely the form of the goddess Kali, also known as the Black Goddess. She is depicted in a dynamic pose, with her right arm raised high and her left arm extended forward, holding a trident. Her attire is elaborate, with a blue and gold sari, a pink and gold skirt, and a garland of flowers around her neck. Her hair is styled in a long, flowing braid, and she wears a crown with a large, ornate headpiece.

In her left hand, she holds a bowl filled with fruit, and in her right hand, she holds a serpent. The background is dark, providing a stark contrast to the brightly colored figure. The goddess is surrounded by various elements that add to the richness of the scene, such as flowers, a snake, and a bird. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Indian art, with a focus on the intricate details and vibrant colors.

The image is a stylized illustration with a surrealistic quality, featuring a dreamlike composition. At the center, there is a tall, slender column with a golden key attached to it, suggesting a theme of unlocking or unlocking one's potential. Above the column, there is a large, radiant sun with rays emanating from it, symbolizing enlightenment or a higher state of consciousness.

To the left of the column, there is a ladder with a person ascending it, possibly indicating a journey or a quest. The person is wearing a hat and holding a book, which could represent knowledge or wisdom. The ladder is positioned on a black and white checkered floor, adding to the dreamlike atmosphere.

On the right side of the column, there is a smaller column with a person sitting on it, possibly symbolizing contemplation or reflection. The person is holding a book and a small object, which could represent a personal discovery or a moment of insight.

The background is a deep blue with a pattern of stars and a crescent moon, suggesting a night sky or a celestial theme. The stars and moon are outlined in gold, which contrasts with the blue background and adds a sense of depth and dimension to the image.

The image is framed by a gold border with a decorative pattern, and there is a signature at the bottom right corner, indicating the artist's work. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its use of symbolism, color, and intricate details.

The image is a collage of nine separate photographs, each depicting a different ancient artifact or sculpture. The artifacts are of various shapes and sizes, and they are all made of stone or a similar material. The photographs are arranged in a 3x3 grid, with each row and column containing three images.

In the top row, from left to right, the first image shows a stone sculpture with a winged figure holding a basket. The second image displays a similar stone sculpture with a basket and a bird. The third image in the top row is a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird, but the bird is not holding the basket.

The middle row starts with the left image showing a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird. The second image in the middle row is a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird, but the bird is not holding the basket. The third image in the middle row is a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird, but the bird is not holding the basket.

The bottom row starts with the left image showing a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird. The second image in the bottom row is a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird, but the bird is not holding the basket. The third image in the bottom row is a stone sculpture with a basket and a bird, but the bird is not holding the basket.

Each image is a close-up view of the artifact, and the background is blurred, focusing the viewer's attention on the details of the sculptures. The artifacts appear to be of historical significance, possibly from ancient civilizations, as suggested by the style and craftsmanship of the sculptures. The collage does not provide any text or context about the artifacts, and the image is a straightforward representation of the artifacts without any additional elements or embellishments.

The image is a digital graphic with a dramatic and surrealistic style. At the center of the image, there is a close-up of a dragon's head, which appears to be made of a textured, possibly metallic material. The dragon's eyes are large and have a glowing, almost ethereal quality. Its mouth is open, revealing sharp teeth. The dragon's skin is a dark, possibly black or dark gray, with a pattern that suggests scales or a textured surface. In the foreground, there is a young girl with long, dark hair, looking up at the dragon's face. She has a serious expression and is wearing a purple top. The background of the image is blurred, but it suggests a natural setting with trees and a sky that is not clearly visible.

Overlaying the image is a text that reads "ANCIENT DRAGONS ARE RETURNING TO EARTH." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in white, which stands out against the darker tones of the dragon and the background. The text is positioned in the center of the image, slightly to the right, and it is centered vertically as well. The style of the image suggests it may be a promotional or artistic representation, possibly related to a theme or concept about ancient dragons and their return to Earth.

The image is a candid photograph of a man lying on a beige leather sofa. The man appears to be relaxed, with his head resting on a pillow. He is wearing blue denim shorts and a white t-shirt. In his arms, he holds a large, dark-colored lizard that is resting on his chest. The lizard has a spotted pattern and is facing the camera. The sofa is positioned in a living room setting, with a television set visible in the background. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is informal and seems to capture a candid moment of the man and the lizard.

The image shows a red T-shirt hanging on a hanger. The T-shirt features a circular graphic with a pizza at its center, surrounded by a border that includes a tree and a sunburst. Above the pizza, there is a phrase "IN PIZZA WE TRUST" written in white text. The background of the image is blurred, but it appears to be a store or retail environment with other items and shelves visible. The style of the image is a candid photograph, likely taken in a retail setting, with the focus on the T-shirt.

The image shows a life-sized, green-skinned figure standing in a dimly lit environment. The figure appears to be a humanoid with a muscular build, wearing a full-body suit that covers the torso and limbs. The suit is predominantly green with a lighter green chest and arms. The figure's head is covered with a green helmet with a visor, and it has a pair of dark, oval-shaped eyes. The figure's hands are extended outward, and it seems to be in a walking pose.

The figure is positioned in front of a dark background, which includes a sign with text and a small, illuminated object to the right of the figure. The sign is partially visible and appears to be informational, but the specific content is not discernible. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the figure and the surrounding environment.

There are no visible texts or logos in the image.

Yes, like the older brother. Was a dick the first few years but only because of pressure's from father. Maybe a step father. Mother's love is universal, after all. Being around mortals must be draining with their ignorance, fears and idiosyncrasies. Some older family members are abusive; sexually, physically, mentally, emotionally. But nothing compared to what they went through, right? "The younger generations have it do much easier, why can't we rough em up a little? They're so spoilt; doing nothing with that beautiful motherly plane. They need to prepare for the dangers of the wider universe. They still fear death, they still fear fear itself. They're still controlled by emotions and ego. Whenever we try and help them they either kill the messenger or corrupt the message because of the material 3d"

Redpill incoming.

The 'reptilians' are a small group of humans whom have accumulated power due to a lack of development/evolution of the mammalian brain (limbic system). And as a result have continued to evolve accentuating on the brainstem (the reptilian brain).

The lack of mammalian development results in an emotional deficiency making these individuals 'cold' in relation to the majority primitive counterparts.

This also leaves our reptilian friends lacking in their own developments that we benefit from

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a man with a beard and short hair. He has a serious expression and is looking slightly to his left. The man is wearing a long-sleeved, loose-fitting garment that appears to be made of a soft fabric, possibly cotton or linen. The garment has a wide belt that cinches at the waist, and the belt is secured with a buckle. The man's arms are crossed in front of him, and his hands are resting on his chest. The background is plain and does not provide any additional context or details. There is a watermark on the image that reads "SEEKTEARS," indicating the photographer or the source of the image.

Most humans, are evil. I would argue humans are evil by nature. There is good out there, but if there isn't any sort of intervention soon evolution itself dictates that those who master manipulation and deception will always rise to the top. Every "good" human is enslaved, but they will never realize it until they stop being distracted and think about it.

For that very same reason, I do not trust Reptilians or other sapient species/alien. Because once again, those who master manipulation and deception will always rise to the top.

Only extinction awaits us.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character from the Marvel Comics universe, Captain America. Captain America is depicted in a dynamic pose, standing with his arms crossed and looking directly at the viewer. He is wearing a blue and red costume with a white star on the chest, and a black helmet with a visor. The character's expression is serious, and he has a speech bubble that reads, "I'm sorry, but I can't help you."

The background of the image is a dark, starry sky, which contrasts with the character's bright costume. The text in the speech bubble is in a speech bubble font, and it reads, "I'm sorry, but I can't help you." The text is in a bold, capitalized font, and it is positioned above the character's head, making it the focal point of the image.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a watermark that reads "VOYAGE BLOG," indicating the source of the image. The overall style of the image is comic book-like, with a focus on action and dialogue.

[12 / 4]The image depicts a serene landscape with a small stream meandering through a lush green forest. The stream, which is the central focus of the image, is surrounded by a variety of trees, some of which are tall and slender, while others are shorter and more rounded. The trees are densely packed, creating a canopy that filters the sunlight, casting dappled shadows on the ground. The sky is visible through the gaps in the foliage, suggesting a clear, sunny day. The overall color palette is dominated by shades of green, with the forest floor and the water of the stream being the most prominent. There are no texts or discernible human-made objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Japanese art, characterized by its soft, pastel colors and the depiction of natural elements.

>That there are other intelligences out there in the universe.

>That ultimately all intelligences must evolve away from their biological origins towards artificially manufactured forms of intelligence which have the advantages of eternal life, unrestricted size, and direct control over the parameters of their own nature.

>That it is in the best interests of any intelligence to propagate its own kind throughout the universe to the exclusion of competing forms, i.e. that intelligences that adopt this strategy will thereby proliferate.

>Acceptance of these assumptions, together with the above mentioned insight, leads to some rather startling conclusions. Artificially manufactured life forms need not propagate themselves physically from planet to planet, all they need to do is to transmit their 'pattern', or the instructions for how to build them. In this way they can disperse themselves practically at the speed of light. What they need at the receiving end is some life form that is intelligent enough to receive the signal and act on it. In other words, if some alien life form knew of our existence, it would be in their interests to beguile us into manufacturing a copy of their form here on earth. This form would then proceed to scan the skies in our locality in search of other gullible life forms. In this way, their species acts as a kind of galactic virus, taking advantage of established life forms to induce them to make copies of their own kind.

>They will then give us instructions on how to build a machine that will cure all the problems of the world and make us all happy. When the machine is complete, it will 'disinfect' the planet of competing life forms and begin to scan the skies from earth in search of further nascent planets.

There is no more antagonistic creature to this entire planet than the White.

No other people have created more wars than whites. No other people have eliminated more cultures, people, sciences, or philosophy than whites. No other people have killed or extinguished more biodiversity than whites. They are the primary reason we are in the only known MEE to be caused by a single species of animal.

The White exists as the only people on this planet to make an entire part of it entirely uninhabitable for the next 20,000 years. Their spread of filth has wiped various people through plague multiple times in multiple regions in the past. Yes, whites literally are so dirty that they manage to commit genocide just by being gross unwashed dirty pig people.

They have created the means to obliterate themselves and this planet with the press of a button. With all the wonders that can come with nuclear energy, whites used all their ""wisdom"" to use it to make something blow up real gud and set our species many steps towards mutually assured destruction. The use and spread of lead for decades reduced our species health while dumbing down and increasing the aggression and impulsiveness of multiple generations of humanity.

They have the shittiest genes and can't handle our resident star. now they plan to blot out the sun itself.

They need an identification system of white, brown and black because the actual separation of who browns and who pinks will spotlight them as a completely unnatural demonic species to this world as many cultures globally already saw.

They are the closest thing to an actual enemy the planet Earth has.

It's no wonder even the sun hates the white vampire race.

I honestly have a hard time believing if Whites are actually from here. There is too much of hate over the form and function of the human body and nature to make me think Whites are natural to this world when they have only existed as a constant globally destructive cancer within it.

[3 / 1]The image is a screenshot from a video game or a similar digital environment. It features a dark background with a starry sky and a planet visible in the lower right corner. In the center of the image, there is a rectangular banner with text. The text is in a mix of English and a language that appears to be Latin, and it is written in a script that is not immediately recognizable. The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the text and the right column featuring a quote from a character named "Commissar Praxis Lát." The quote reads: "As the Americans learned so painfully in Earth's final century, free flow of information is the key to survival. The shared knowledge of the public, whose leaders at last lose their grip on information flow will soon burst with the knowledge that the public is ready to go public. The crisis that has been brewing for centuries will soon dissolve into a rapid slide into despotism. Beware of the who would deny you access to information, for in his heart he dreams himself your master."

The character's quote is attributed to "U.K. Declaration of Rights," which is a reference to the United Kingdom's Declaration of Rights, a document that outlines the rights and freedoms of the people of the United Kingdom. The text is in a formal and serious tone, suggesting a serious and possibly political context for the game or the content displayed. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or political game, with a focus on the importance of information and the potential consequences of its misuse.

[16 / 6]The image is a photograph featuring a man and a devil mask. The man is wearing a black shirt and has a necklace around his neck. He is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. The devil mask is predominantly red with a prominent set of horns on the top of its head. The mask has a menacing expression with sharp teeth and a wide-open mouth. The background is blurred, but it appears to be an indoor setting with bookshelves and a wooden floor. The lighting in the image is soft, and the focus is on the man and the devil mask. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is a standard portrait with a focus on the subject and the mask.

You know, I always felt that paranormal connections. Tbh, it may explain why I wasn't made or able to do human connection like friendship. I'm lonely because I established connection in a wrong place and wrong people (no offence). Maybe I'm destined to be like them in the afterlife.

So maybe I should try to befriend some paranormal entities. Note friendship and not lust desires.

Ofc I won't give out soul, blood, virginity, ...

So I can bare out succubus or incubus except if we can be friends without the lust (which is 99% impossible but hey let's try the 1%)

But hey it would be could to have anormal friendship, they could teach me stuff idk and the same for me. I'm pretty exited to have those friendship.

Do you have advices to summon paranormal entities and befriend them or just have conversation with them ? I'm completely clueless on demon (I use demon as an umbrella term) stuff...

>Do you have advices to summon paranormal entities and befriend them or just have conversation with them ? I'm completely clueless on demon (I use demon as an umbrella term) stuff...

I work with demons using the Salomonic method, mostly Dr. Rudd Goetia.

They are entities that were never born and were made to bring chaos to the world, but are no more evil than a Great White Shark or a Bear, just intelligent.

Not a pleasant experience, it's like trying to talk with someone an order of magnitude smarter than the smartest human that was ever born. They know everything you are going to say.

Some are surprisingly chill (Buer, Seere), others are downright dangerous (Asmoday, Andras) and should be avoided if you are not a veteran practitioner.

Most of them don't really like humans, but they appreciate when you approach them for evolution and knowledge, or for idolizing them. What they really, really like is when people praise them on social media.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Not to be confused with Psychopomp.

Hypnopompia (also known as hypnopompic state) is the state of consciousness leading out of sleep, a term coined by the psychical researcher Frederic Myers. Its mirror is the hypnagogic state at sleep onset; though often conflated, the two states are not identical and have a different phenomenological character. Hypnopompic and hypnagogic hallucinations are frequently accompanied by sleep paralysis, which is a state wherein one is consciously aware of one's surroundings but unable to move or speak.

Etymology

Frederic Myers coined the term "hypnopompic", with its word-ending originating from the Greek word "pompos", meaning "sender", in 1904.[1] Previously, in 1848, Alfred Maury introduced the term "hypnagogic" from the Greek words ύπνος ("hypnos"), meaning "sleep", and αγωγός ("agōgos"), meaning "conductor" or "leader".

Hallucinations

Hallucinations are commonly understood as "sensory perceptions that occur in the absence of an objective stimulus".[2] As this definition implies, though, like dreams, most hallucinations are visual, they can encompass a broader range of sensory experience. Auditory hallucinations are thus also common: "patients can hear simple sounds, structured melodies or complete sentences".[3] Slightly less common but not unheard of are "somesthetic" hallucinations involving the sense of touch and location, with such experiences ranging from tactile sensations to full-blown "cenesthopathic" or "out-of-body experiences", which involve sudden changes in the perception of the body's location, or even a sense of movement of the entire body. Finally, a unique characteristic of hypnopompic hallucinations is that as opposed to dreams, wherein they rarely understand that they are in fact asleep, here sleepers do indeed have "the clear subjective awareness of being awake" yet are frequently mentally and physically trapped in the experience.[2]

Neurobiology

The objective difference between the subjective experiences of dreams and hypnopompic hallucinations emerges from a close look at the sleep cycle and its attendant brain activity: there are essentially two types of sleep, R.E.M. sleep, which is categorized by "rapid eye movement" and N.R.E.M., which stands for "Non-Rapid Eye Movement". In R.E.M. sleep, brains are extremely active. In particular, during this stage, both the brain-stem, which is the home of the most fundamental physical drives, and the parts of the cortex related to the most complex logical-cognitive functions experience highly intense electrical activity. Conversely, there is almost no electrical activity during N.R.E.M. sleep. N.R.E.M. is what is referred to as deep sleep, which is characterized by the complete quieting of the mind and by muscle atonia. R.E.M. sleep cycles are book-ended by N.R.E.M. stages.[4]

It is precisely at this last point, though, that can cause hypnopompic hallucinations: occasionally during deep N.R.E.M., "transient patterns of neural activation in brainstem structures [resembling] micro-wake "fragments" can occur".[4] These have a two-fold effect: first, just as in R.E.M. sleep, these brain-stem fragments essentially activate the dream mechanism. Second, they catalyze a near-waking state. However, this is often not powerful enough to jar a person completely out of deep sleep, and so only the mind fully awakens, leaving the body trapped in the atonia of deep sleep. Another reason why hypnopompic hallucinations are often such horrible experiences is that micro-wake fragments appear to be related to serotonin and dopamine deficits—these deficits predispose a person to negative mental states, which likely causes the hallucinations to resemble bad dreams.[4]

Cultural manifestations

Fuseli's 1781 painting The Nightmare is thought to be a depiction of a hypnopompic hallucination

These mental experiences are indeed often deeply damaging: across cultures. The experience of hypnopompic hallucinations is strongly related to "visitations of spirits, demons or other grotesque creatures belonging to traditional folklore".[2] Thus, in the Anglosphere, hypnopompic experiences often entail the sense that an "Old Hag" or some similar "nocturnal spirit" is sitting on the sleeper's chest, inducing both paralysis and an increasing, suffocating inability to move. Anthropologists have discovered references dating back to the High Middle Ages of similar figures in Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Norman traditions, most prominently the "mæra", the source of the word "nightmare", and which appears to have roots in ancient Germanic superstitions.

Similarly, subjects belonging to Yoruban-African diasporas report feeling as though they are being "ridden" by the evil manifestations of their versions of the African pantheon (ridden is the vernacular for possession by the gods, who are often referred to as "divine horsemen"). Some members of the Yoruba diaspora appear to conflate the cultural interpretation of the experience, referring to "being ridden by the witch". Japanese interpretations of the experience are often grouped under the heading of 金縛り kanashibari, a term which literally means "bound in gold or metal" and derives from the name of an esoteric Buddhist technique for paralyzing enemies.[2]

Future research horizons

Owing to similarities between hypnopompic hallucinations and those experienced by people with dementia, Parkinson's and schizophrenia, significant progress is being made on understanding the neurobiological basis of this experience. Researchers have identified "a common neurofunctional substrate [which] points to a shared pattern of brain activation" underlying elements of schizophrenic delusions and these near-waking hallucinations: "with regional grey matter blood flow values being maximally increased in right parietal-occipital regions" during hypnagogic hallucinations and many schizoid episodes. Thus,[how?] such painful near-waking experiences could be rendered obsolete.[how?][2]

The image is a surrealistic painting featuring a figure that appears to be a demonic or monstrous entity. The figure is seated on the ground with its legs crossed, and its body is covered in a network of intricate, ribbed patterns. The figure's head is adorned with a large, fiery crown that radiates with a bright, yellow light, suggesting a divine or divine-like quality. The eyes of the figure are closed, and its mouth is open, as if it is speaking or singing.

The figure's hands are raised, with one hand holding a small, glowing orb that emits a warm, orange light. The orb is positioned in the center of the figure's chest, and the light emanating from it illuminates the figure's face. The background of the painting is dark and smoky, with a gradient of colors that transition from dark to light, creating a sense of depth and mystery.

The overall style of the painting is reminiscent of the surrealist movement, characterized by its dreamlike and dream-like elements, as well as its use of color and form to create a sense of otherworldliness. The painting does not contain any discernible text or other objects. The style of the image is highly stylized and abstract, with a focus on the interplay of light, shadow, and color to convey a sense of the supernatural or otherworldly.

The image is a surrealist painting featuring a large, muscular figure with a greenish hue, resembling a demonic or satanic figure. The figure has a prominent, horned head with a star-like emblem on top, and its eyes are wide open, revealing sharp teeth. The figure's body is covered in scales, and it has a muscular build. It is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one arm raised and the other extended outward, as if in motion. The background of the painting is a chaotic, fiery landscape with a mix of buildings and structures, suggesting a cityscape. The colors are vivid and intense, with a mix of reds, oranges, and yellows, creating a dramatic and intense atmosphere.

In the foreground, there are two figures, one of which appears to be a human woman, kneeling on the ground. She is wearing a red dress and has her hands clasped together in front of her. The other figure is a human male, who is also kneeling on the ground, with his hands clasped together in front of him. He is wearing a red shirt and has a chain around his neck.

The painting is signed "G. R. M. D." in the lower right corner, indicating the artist's name. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Surrealist movement, known for its dreamlike and fantastical imagery.

The image shows a black notebook with a textured cover. The cover has a slight sheen and a slight texture, giving it a tactile appearance. On the cover, there is a gold-colored text that reads "LITTLE BLACK BOOK" in a serif font. The text is centered and is the only text visible on the cover. The notebook is closed, and there is no visible hinge or binding mechanism. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the black notebook, making the text stand out. The style of the image is a straightforward product photograph, designed to showcase the item clearly and without any distractions.

The image shows a close-up of a small glass bottle with a greenish liquid inside, placed on a dark wooden surface. The bottle has a label with a skull and crossbones symbol, indicating that the contents are potentially dangerous or toxic. To the left of the bottle, there is a large, curved metal object that appears to be a spoon, with a dark, possibly metallic finish. The lighting in the image is dim, with a soft, warm glow that casts shadows on the surface, enhancing the dramatic effect of the scene. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the objects and their details. There are no visible texts on the image.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a figure that resembles a goat-like creature with a humanoid body. The creature has large, pointed ears, a long neck, and a pointed nose. It has a humanoid face with a prominent nose and a small mouth. The creature is seated on a rock with its legs crossed, and it has a crescent moon and a full moon in the background. The creature's body is adorned with various symbols and markings, including a star, a crescent moon, and a crescent moon with a star. The creature's hands are raised, and it appears to be in a gesture of blessing or protection. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of traditional black and white art, with a focus on detail and contrast. There is text in the image, but it is not legible due to the image's resolution and the angle at which the image is viewed.

The image shows a statue of a figure that appears to be a woman, possibly a goddess or a mythological figure, given the crown and the attire. The statue is made of a shiny, metallic material that gives it a golden hue. The figure is depicted in a pose that suggests a sense of power or authority, with one hand holding a golden cup and the other hand raised, as if in a gesture of victory or celebration.

The statue is mounted on a black pedestal, which contrasts with the golden color of the statue. The pedestal has a carved design, adding to the overall aesthetic of the piece. In the background, there is a dark wooden wall with a mirror that reflects the statue, creating a sense of depth and dimension. The mirror is ornate, with intricate patterns and designs, and it is framed by a dark, ornate border.

To the right of the statue, there are several small glass jars with cork stoppers, which are likely used for holding small objects or substances. The jars are placed on a surface that appears to be a table or a shelf, and they are arranged in a way that suggests they are part of a collection or display.

The lighting in the image is dim, with a soft, warm glow that illuminates the statue and the surrounding objects. This lighting creates a moody atmosphere, enhancing the dramatic effect of the statue and the surrounding items.

There are no visible texts or inscriptions on the statue or in the image. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the details of the statue and its surroundings, and it is taken from a perspective that allows the viewer to appreciate the craftsmanship and the overall composition of the scene.

The image depicts a futuristic, spherical structure that resembles a space station or a similar type of habitat. The structure is composed of six spherical domes connected by a series of cylindrical tubes, which are likely conduits for power or communication. The dome structures are painted in a shade of blue, and they are connected to the central cylindrical tube by a series of smaller tubes. The central cylindrical tube is connected to a larger cylindrical tube at the bottom, suggesting a central hub or power source.

The structure is set against a dark, rocky background, which could indicate an underwater or a subterranean environment. The image is a digital rendering, as indicated by the red overlay text "DELPHI 875m" and the "3D" logo, suggesting that the image is a 3D model or a digital representation of a space station. The overall style of the image is realistic with a focus on the architectural design of the structure.

The image depicts a futuristic interior of a spacecraft or a similar vessel. The central focus is a large, circular pool filled with water, which is surrounded by a series of yellow and black safety barriers. The pool is equipped with a control panel on the right side, which includes a control panel with buttons and a display screen. The control panel is connected to a series of robotic arms and other equipment, suggesting advanced technology for cleaning or maintenance tasks.

The walls of the room are white, with a grid-like pattern, and there are windows on the left side, allowing natural light to enter. The floor is a dark gray, and there are yellow handrails on the left side of the pool, presumably for safety. The overall atmosphere of the room is clean and utilitarian, with a focus on functionality and technology. There are no texts or discernible brands visible in the image. The style of the image is a digital rendering, likely from a video game or a similar simulation, as it is designed to represent a space environment.

I'm going to kill myself tomorrow, /x/. I'm also sending 3 packets of copied information to the media, one to CNN, one to MSNBC, and one to Fox News. You all will have to see which one tells the truth about the information they receive and who doesn't. I trust 4chan to do this because of our history of releasing legit info in the face of mass media coverup.

I have been a professional driver/security guard for a circle of very wealthy people for almost 8 years. I started by working the door at a private gentlemen's club outside of the DC area. From that job I was introduced to some employment managers for Jeffry

Epstein. Because I had experience as both a cab driver and a bouncer, as well as always overlooking and keeping my mouth shut about the drugs and prostitution my employers at the club profited from they thought I'd be a good fit to work the weekends for Mr. Epstein. At first, I didn't do very much, definitely nothing important. I would run errands mostly, and do anything my manager (who reported directly to Mr. Epstein) wanted me to do. So say the gardener calls out sick one day, it would be me mowing the lawn in his place. I was sort of a floating general helper. Inevitably I ran into Mr. Epstein now and then, and he was always very personable, enthusiastic. I had heard about his original court case and the rumours and everything, but just meeting this guy made me feel like it was all a lie because he seemed so kind, and genuine. I thought he really was just this hot shot money man, like a Bruce Wayne or Tony Stark kind of figure. And I think, ultimately, that's how he wanted us all to see him. His god complex was, to say the least, very developed.

Eventually I was trusted with bigger jobs. I think I got a good reputation because I cleaned one of Mr. Epstein's bedrooms one day. There was, to my dismay, a mixture of shit and cum on the bedsheets. I dealt with it professionally, and I didn't say anything. I knew by then that someone is always watching. There are cameras in almost every single room save Mr. Epstein's private office and regular bedroom (he had several bedrooms but one was his "favorite" I guess. His main room). I never mentioned it to anyone, but I still got a thank you from my manager for being discreet. One day, I was asked to go pick up a masseuse. From a bus station. I didn't ask her her age, I knew better, but she couldn't have been older than 16. I got a really bad feeling in my stomach because at this point denying Mr. Epstein's tastes would be borderline irrational. I did my job, though. I took her to his house and a few hours later I took her back to the bus stop. She was crying, and I didn't talk to her about it. A few weeks later, I did it again. Now my manager tells me that Mr. Epstein would like me to take over all of his various pick ups and drop offs. They called it "Cutie duty" (fucking barf). But it was more than just girls, I would pick up drugs and other assorted packages, most of which I had no idea the contents but as far as I was concerned, the less I knew the better. I was getting paid VERY well for the amount of work I was doing. In a given day I spend 3, maybe 4 hours doing anything that could be considered work, the rest of the time I either sat in my car browsing 4chan on my phone or inside pretending like I was rich and this was my house. For this I was being paid 75k/year, more than I'd ever even hoped to have made in my whole life. When I took over doing most of the driving it went up to 115. Every time my job became more illegal, the money would get better. That's his tactic. He knows that people will do just about anything, for the right price.

I just want people to know I guess, call it a public confession because I'm guilty. I guess I don't care that much because I'm gonna be dead. I've done things I can't forgive myself for, and I think they'll have me killed anyway. I'm going to do it on my terms.

Anyway, Mr. Epstein is very shrewd. He pays you a lot, but not enough for the shit you have to do. And he tries to find the absolute least amount he can pay to keep you doing it. For me, disgracefully, that was around 150k. I stayed on "cutie duty" for about 4 months, then Mr. Epstein took a trip abroad and he loaned me out to another family, the Romney's. Now, keep in mind, I never met Mitch Romney and I don't think I even worked for him, I just worked for the family. I reported to an employment manager as usual. I was tasked with driving a young man, named Cole around wherever he wanted.

Cole was probably 22 and already his license had been suspended for drunk driving. He lived in a huge house out in the middle of nowhere outside Bolder, Colorado. Man, it was beautiful. If I could have stayed there forever I would have. I suspect it was a vacation "cabin" (mansion) owned by his parents, but I digress. Every weekend we would drive into the city, he would get shitfaced drunk, find a woman or prostitute and I'd take us all back home. Cole was a piece of total piece of shit. If you remember "scumbag steve" just imagine is Steve's parents were multi millionaires if not billionaires and you get the idea.

So one Sunday morning, after a typical Saturday night I report for duty 8 am sharp knowing damn well that Cole isn't going to drag his ass out of bed until at least 3 pm. Here he comes hobbling down the driveway in his socks to my car. He usually texts when he's up and I come inside and start cleaning up his messes. No text today. He comes over to the car as I'm stepping out. He says, "Uhh, hey buddy? We kinda got a problem but, it's not that big of a deal". Ok, what? Let's see it. We go inside, upstairs to his bedroom. His girl from last night is laying face up, and her open mouth is pooled with vomit. She is most definitely dead. Far as I can tell she overdosed on whatever combination of prescription drugs they were doing, passed out, puked, then suffocated on her own vomit. I'm absolutely flipping my shit, and I've got my phone out dialing 911. Cole slaps it out of my hand and says tells me to hold on. He says he can't get in trouble because it will look bad on his family. I said, Cole, you've already been getting into trouble. He says he knows, just not this kind of trouble. He says I'll get a big bonus if I just deal with it myself. Now, I'm way out here in the middle of nowhere and the implication from day one of my employment in this circle has been that if I mess up I might suffer harsh consequences. I know what I did here was wrong. I know that, and I am so sorry.

I asked him what I'm supposed to do. He says just wait. He gets a different phone out of a drawer and starts making calls. After a few minutes (I'm waiting in the hallway, he's casually pacing around the corpse) he gives me gps coordinates (39.982602, -105.615416) for a little spot off 111 out in the mountains. I'm supposed to wrap her up, take her there, and drop her off. He said there would be guys waiting there to take her. It's a long drive and I don't look forward to it one bit. I wrap her up in his comforter. He stops me. "Bro" he says. "Bro not that blanket, that's like, the softest blanket it in the world dude, no way" and he gets me a different blanket from the closet. Fucking real gentleman, Cole was.

Nothing bad will happen to you. You might not feel able to forgive yourself right now but we really need you to. You won't be harmed. You are forgiven and given life to learn that you can forgive yourself, and how. Please give yourself a chance. That is all anybody would want you to do - for being someone strong enough to confess to things that most people have not been tested by - don't sell yourself short. You are needed. We need you here, we need people who recognise right from wrong more than anything in the world RIGHT NOW and that is who you are as of now. You are free. No harm will come to you. Give yourself these next few days to feel relief that will be a gift for you - is what you life allows you to know. Please, if not for the you of the past - the you of your future. You have no idea who you could reach in this life, and you've only started today. Please give yourself time. It is all AnyOne would want of you.

He's got an f-150 at the property used for landscaping work, I put her body in the bed with a tarp on top and then I fill the rest of the back with landscaping supplies. Fertilizer, tools etc. I tried to make it look really natural and boring. I'm shitting bricks, I can't believe I'm actually doing this. But he's promising me that if I get busted I'll have the best lawyers money can buy, and I believe him. She's dead already anyway and it's unlikely he would even get into any real legal trouble, just bad press. So what's the difference? The whole time driving I'm just sweating right through my clothes. I have to stop twice to puke. When I get there there's a little dirt spot you can pull off into and sure enough they're a big black SUV and a jeep with offroad tires. I'm not about to just *assume* these are the body people so I stop and get out and approach the SUV. The window rolls down and there's a woman who's probably in her 50's and a big guy driving. I don't know what to say so I'm just kinda like "uhhhh, how's it going?" feeling like a complete fucking idiot. She makes a call and describes me to the person on the phone, then she puts it down and says "We're who you're looking for, is it under all that stuff in the bed?" I say yeah, do you need help? She says no, take a break. So I walk into the trees a little bit and smoke a cigarette or two. They've got her out and put her in the jeep within about 5 minutes. The woman tells me to drive wait 15 minutes before I leave, then they pull out and drive away, the jeep drives further into the woods. I wait maybe 7 minutes and I leave. I got a text later telling me not to ever leave early again. It was from a blocked number.

This man is like a child, and he hasn't even gotten dressed yet. He asks me to wash his blanket and sheets. I do it. We got really drunk that night, and Cole tells me this has happened twice before and it's always fine. He says he's like Scarface "and shit". I hate him. The remaining few months go by without incident and he gets his license back, freeing me at last. Mr. Epstein doesn't need me at this time but I do get referred as a reliable driver to the big wigs at Def Jam Records, who assigned me to work on Rhianna's crew while she promoted Talk that Talk, at the time her 6th and newest album.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that appears to be a stylized representation of a frog. The frog is anthropomorphized with human-like features, including a human-like face, a human-like body, and a human-like hand. The frog is wearing a blue shirt with a red tie, and it has a wide smile with its teeth showing. The frog's eyes are closed, and its mouth is open in a joyful expression. The background of the image is a simple, light-colored wall with vertical lines, which contrasts with the frog's vibrant colors. The style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the frog's joyful expression. There are no texts present in the image.

I never met Ms. Rhianna in person, just in passing now and then, but I found this job to agree with me a lot better than the others. I drove a van stacked with promotional gear from city to city while she toured. A few times I was sent to pick up molly and was taught to use test strips to test for purity. If it was not pure I was supposed to walk away, but it was always pure. There are circles within circles of connections. I believe there is an entire shadow economy strictly for the rich and famous to get their rocks off collectively. One thing I did learn about Rhianna is that she enjoys young females as well. I was sent to pick up two young girls and bring them to her hotel room. Of course I was met outside the door by someone more important than me. This struck me as odd because as far as I understand, Rhianna is not a billionaire like Epstein, but she was even more insulated and protected than he was. I'm sure a lot of that has to do with just personal choices regarding security, but I get the picture that in this world, influence and money both equal power and Rhianna especially in 2011/2012 was HIGHLY influential. All I had to do was mention her name and girls would get in the car. Just like that.

So the most noteworthy thing that happened while working for Def Jam is when Rhianna had a party to celebrate the end of her tour. Everybody was there, I mean all of the pop stars were there. Jonas Brothers, Lady Gaga, Justin Beiber, and even a few old heads like Elton John and some actors, I noticed John Travolta for sure, Seth Rogan, Emma Stone, Bradly Cooper, to name a few. For this party I was, of course, tasked with getting entertainment. They wanted "as young as I could get" and "as many as I could get". Ostensibly they were being hired to be wait staff, valet drivers etc, but the plan is to switch it up on them when they actually get there, give them drugs, money, whatever they need to do what they wanted them to do, which was essentially to be all expenses paid prostitutes for whoever wanted them. That part, thankfully, was not my job. I'm just the piece of shit who tricked them into going. I picked up 5 young girls from a mall, a couple of teenage boys I found walking along the road, and then I got a hold of an escort company to fill it out and make an even dozen. The ones from the escort company were not underage and I was severely chastised for it. My manager basically asked if I ever wanted to work again. I said yes. He said then act like you've got some goddamned sense. I didn't make this mistake again. After the tour ended I was just on my own for a month or so, I rented a house near Tulsa and basically isolated the entire time. I was starting to get ideas in my head about going to trade school or something when I was called back to come work for Mr. Epstein again.

He has a pair of sunglasses resting on his head, covering his eyes. His expression is intense, with his mouth slightly open and his eyes wide open. The background is dark and out of focus, with a hint of a blurred object that could be a microphone or a camera. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken during a broadcast or interview.

At this point, I've developed a bad coke habit, of which I have only been sober a few months to this day. I needed something to make me do it. Coke makes you feel numb in a way not much else does, and believe me, I've tried just about everything. There are research chemicals no one has even heard of that get traded around in these circles. When I came back to work for Mr. Epstein on his island I was going though an 8 ball every day or two. I binge drank at night but I had to keep focused during the day. The coke wired me up and the liquor brought me back down. That's the only way, mentally, I could really cope with what's happening.

I was flown to his now infamous island to be one of the regular staff. Essentially I lived on this island for free, while getting paid, to maintain the grounds and keep the buildings up. When Mr. Epstein was there, obviously he would bring his own entertainment so I didn't even have to do that. I thought, this sounds like a fucking fantastic deal. Island paradise? Great wages? Not much real work? Count me in. Out of all of my sins, I believe sloth is the most damaging one I indulge in. I always look for the easy dollar, and that's why I am prey for people like this.

Now, first of all, this island is like paradise on earth. It's always a comfortable temperature. The rains are breathtakingly beautiful and the architecture and decor of the houses are exquisite. Yes, the bath house is really creepy. The fake doors are there to confuse fly by surveillance, if anyone was wondering. The other regular staff were...hard to get along with. They were all creeps and I mean capital C fucking creeps. Made me wonder about myself, honestly, that I'm put here with them. They all joked about getting Mr. Epstein's "leftovers" and the talk was constantly about when Mr. Epstein was going to visit the island again. When he would bring important people - world leaders, CEO's etc, I and most of the staff were kept totally out of site. We weren't allowed to work in an area unless we knew it was empty. Only his most trusted employees could actually be in the building with him and high powered friends. Sometimes though, it would just be the family and things were more relaxed. I passed by his office once, carrying some garbage, when he beckoned me inside. He asked me my name and I told him. He offered me a seat, I took it. You don't get far in this business saying no. He began to talk to me, he looked really stressed. He asked me how anything that feels good could be bad. He had a big painting of Oscar Wilde and considered him a personal hero. He began to explain hedonism to me, and asked me if I understood. Of course, I said. Who doesn't like fun? Lots of people. He said, lots of people. Then he let me go about my duties.

I fucked up really bad one evening and entered one of the maintenance sheds to return some tools I'd been using, and saw the sweaty, pale back of a large man, hunched over and thrusting. He had a tattoo of Nixon on his back, and he was wearing a bull's head mask. He was fucking one of the regular staff member's mouth. He turns to me, I'm just standing in shock, and says quite angrily, "DO YOU MIND?" and I slam the door shut. As I'm closing the door I get a glimpse of my coworker's face and he is crying. I googled nixon back tattoo later and realized that man was Roger Stone, who I'd never even heard of up to that point. I knew I was in deep shit. The next day and for two weeks after I got all the worst jobs - trash pick up, cleaning toilets, scrubbing his boats. It fucking sucked, but I kept my mouth shut anyway. As far as I understood my pay had not been cut so whatever, I'll do the shitty jobs where I'm by myself because at least, hey, I'm by myself. That was fine with me.

I'm not a good guy, but thank you. If this was the movies The Punisher or whoever would rip my spine out of my back, and I'd deserve it. I'm not a good guy.

Anyway things started getting really tense on the island from that point. People started making little comments to me about being nosy, or about minding my own business. I was started to get worried I'd be branded a "troublemaker", which you don't want to be. Things turn very quickly in this business, that's how they've kept a lid on it for so long, any small mistake and you're out. Most people are let go with NDA's and the understanding that they will be watched the rest of their lives which, ultimately, is how I got out as well. After Epstein died they cut me loose, I guess they figure since he's dead nothing I'd know would matter anyway. They're probably right, honestly. It probably won't matter anyway. But the rest of my time on that island was pure terror. I was just waiting to be taken away or worse, never happened, but I was still really scared. I saw a few of their weird "plays" they would do, around the bath house. Mr. Epstein had a little portable stage he would get set up, he would wear the bull head I saw Stone wearing and give a big speech about what he called freedom. He would say this island is the only free place in the whole world, where everyone on it can do whatever they want. Bullshit. Not your employees, not the children you bring here. Total bullshit. Everyone would cheer, they'd get up and do a sort of conga line with tiki torches, really cringy old rich people shit and go into the bath house. There is a trap door on the floor that has not been reported in any of the investigation photos that I've seen which lead to what they call "The chamber", and it is essentially a bondage dungeon. I don't know what all happened in there and I never want to know, I stayed as far away from that bath house as I could.

So you don't get it I will explain, it isn't for people who read and watch news from CNN exclusively or infowars exclusively. Its for you and me, to see that they won't release shit about it and hopefully report his death publicly. He just wants to tell someone to get the weight off his shoulders before he dies.

That is all.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a person from the back. The individual has a bald head and is wearing a pair of earrings. The most striking feature is a tattoo on the person's back, which is a portrait of a man's face. The portrait is detailed and appears to be a close-up of the man's face, with a slight smile. The person's skin is textured, and the tattoo is in black ink, contrasting with the lighter skin tone. The background of the image is plain and does not provide any additional context or information. There are no texts or discernible brands visible in the image. The style of the image is straightforward and appears to be a portrait, possibly for artistic or personal reasons.

I mean large as in wide. He is a brick of a man. Pic related, in the supply shed he was taking up basically the entire doorway.

So anyway eventually I got my reputation for the most part back into good graces, and I was working in the main houses again. One time I was helping in the kitchen. I don't know if the chef was fucking with me, I hope so, but he was separating what looked to me like the torso of a very young, skinned pig. It had been roasted and he was chopping it into quarters, the ribs to be served that evening and the rest broken down for soups and casseroles. I said jokingly said that it looked like a little kid. He just gave me this awful, dead eyed looked for a second and said "watch it"

I worked on that island for about a year, in 2013-2014 Mr. Epstein chose me and two other trusted employees from the island to come with him to a winter retreat in the Swiss Alps. He owned a small (billionaire 'small' mind you) "cabin" (again, mansion) there and wanted people he knew could be trusted, because most of the staff would be local hires. Our job on the surface was to help manage all the employees, like supervisors basically, but the unspoken task would be keeping everyone either in the dark or quiet. Mr. Epstein had a real fondness for plump, young swiss blondes, and the Swiss, as he would explain, have a very "progressive" idea regarding age of consent. He viewed this as a more relaxed way to do what he does, more casual. Part of the thrill for these people, I think, is in the fact that it is illegal and they could get in big trouble. When they go to places that are more friendly with the idea of an older man having sex with 15 year olds it's to "take a break" so to speak. The alps themselves, wow. I mean, wow. I've been all over the United States and NOTHING in this country compares to Europe in terms of sheer beauty. Sometimes, early in the morning when I'd come out of my cabin and stretch, looking at the trees, smelling the crisp, clean air...just for a minute I'd forget what I have done, and what I'm doing. When it came back to me, I'd have to fight back tears. I want the mountains there to be the last thing I think about before I die.

So I've not been there three days when, while me and the two from the island are doing bumps of coke off a butter knife in the lower garage, a boy maybe 14, skinny, blonde, pale and naked comes through the doorway right towards us. He's speaking French but I think I got the gist of what he was saying, he was asking for help. He looked hysterical. Immediately my two "friends" were outta there and I shouldn't have been far behind. I told him, calm down, calm down, it's ok, I'm gonna help you. I just wanted him to feel better. This all took maybe 30 seconds before one of the "nannies" came in. He looked at her, confused, and I get the picture he was trying to decide if she could be trusted. She couldn't. She shushed him and put her jacket over him and took his hand, she was speaking French as well and it sounded like a mother consoling a frightened child. She lead him back into the house, I did not see him again. I never mentioned it to anyone, and nobody ever mentioned it to me.

During my last couple of weeks there I witnessed first hand the murder of an "independent journalist". I don't think he was actually a journalist, I think he had maybe a blog or a youtube channel, but I had never heard of him and don't know his name so I don't think he was anyone with any real connections. He was one of the local hires, a dishwasher, but he was seen with a cell phone, out, possibly recording. Me and the other two from the island were asked to go "check it out". So we go get the guy and ask him to empty out his pockets, sure enough he's got a phone. We told him to unlock it, he wouldn't. One of the other guys made a call, came back, and slugged him directly in the nose. I think he broke it because there was blood just pouring out and the guy started screaming. I don't think he'd ever been hit before but me and the other guy held him down. Fuck it I'll say their names. It was Daniel Robinson from South Florida and Marcus Harper from Nevada. Marcus and I were holding him down and Daniel punched him again and told him to unlock his phone. He complied this time, and sure enough there were pictures and videos from inside the house. We knew he hadn't sent anything out because only wired connections work there, I guess they had signal jammers or something, or maybe because it was just so remote, I don't know. Anyway, Daniel makes another call and tells us to take him outside into the woods. I think we're just gonna threaten him and make him sign an NDA, but Daniel took his belt off and strangled him to death. We had to put his body up in an outbuilding because the ground was frozen. We put him through a wood chipper and then burned everything to ash. There were bits of charred bone left over when I swept it all into a trash bag and threw it out with the regular garbage. This, above anything else, I feel the most guilty for.

The image is a close-up of a person's face, focusing on the upper part of the head and neck. The individual has long, straight hair that falls over the shoulders. The hair is a shade of brown, and the person's eyes are closed, suggesting a relaxed or contemplative state. The skin tone is light, and the person appears to be looking off to the side, possibly at something or someone outside the frame. The background is dark, which contrasts with the lighter tones of the person's face and hair, making the subject stand out. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, characterized by its exaggerated facial features and dynamic lines.

After that, if I wasn't "in" before, I was definitely "in" now, me, Marcus, and Daniel. The three fucking stooges from hell. Daniel had been in the military and I think he had a few screws lose because he always had a temper. He became the go to guy for the really dirty shit. I started working for Mr. Epstein directly after this. He would confide in me sometimes, when he was very high, about how nothing really makes him feel good enough. He told me once that he hasn't felt happy in years. I wish I had had the stones to tell him that this life he is living is only bringing him down. For a brief moment, I felt empathy for this man. I think that, too, was part of his game though. I don't think he has ever had a single genuine feeling in his life outside of sexual gratitude. He never mentioned the journalist to me, it was like it never happened but we both knew that was the reason I was now working directly for him.

Listen, I think I've said about all I care to right now. I'm going to go get a bottle of something before all the stores close. If this thread is still here in a few hours, I'll answer questions and tell some more stories.

Well have fun waking up surviving it in your next timeline. I an heroed back in 2012.

Everything went black for what seemed like a few seconds and I woke up all fucked up from my attempt. You'll be dead in this timeline, but you'll have to suffer through the consequences of your actions in the next timeline you jump to. Karma's a bitch. That's why you shouldn't attempt it.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with brown hair and a brown hoodie. The character is seated in front of a laptop, which is turned on and displaying a webpage. The character's expression is one of sadness or concern, with their eyes looking downwards and their mouth slightly open. The laptop screen is illuminated, suggesting that the character is actively engaged with the content on the screen. The background is a solid light blue color, providing a calm and neutral backdrop that contrasts with the character's expression. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is cartoonish, with a simple and clean line work that gives the character a soft and approachable appearance.

Because everyone said I should have died from dropping from a large ass cliff. I still had to face the consequences of my actions which is being in pain constantly. I just remember everything going pitch black when I hit the rocks and coming to eventually. Like time itself stopped. The interesting thing is a few years later my roommate died from Lupus. It just seemed weird to me that I somehow survived and he died. I looked further into reincarnation and death on here and elsewhere on the web and just the sheer lunacy of what's been going on in the past eight years. It just seemed like world went mad after I attempted suicide. It made no sense. I am a firm believer in reincarnation via timelines from what I've seen and experienced. One of my selves died on October 31, 2012.

I have no clue whether what you are saying is the truth or not, but regardless, no matter what you have done in your life, there is hope in Jesus Christ. A few years back, I was in a really dark place from a spiritual point of view, and I even attempted suicide on two occasions, and was also hospitalized for that reason and for depression on multiple occasions. At my lowest point, I cried out to God and prayed to Jesus, and He actually answered my prayers. Eventually, I gave my life to Jesus, and ever since then, I have felt an indescribable sense of peace at all times. I truly believe God has forgiven every single one of my sins, and He will forgive yours as well, if you pray and repent. You might feel like you don't deserve forgiveness, and trust me because I am familiar with that mindset, but in the Bible it says "ALL have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). No one deserves God's mercy, but because He loves us so much, He sent His only son to die for us, taking our place on the cross (John 3:16).

God loves you. Jesus loves you. Call out to God in Jesus name, and you will be forgiven. There is hope.

They called them "plays" and "theatre" but from my eyes yeah, I would say the speeches and stuff I saw looked a lot like rituals. The bull's head mask was scary. I mean it was a rubber mask for sure but whoever spoke would wear it all night. After they would come up out of the chamber the masked person would roam the island all night, and it was generally understood that you are to avoid them at all costs. When they wear the mask they're like animals, they just wander around from one carnal satisfaction to the next. Food, sex, sometimes violence, whatever. And they could do whatever they want. If they came to you and told you to suck their dick or whatever, you have to do it. It never happened to me thankfully, but I made sure on those nights to stay out of sight.

What about the kids and sexual stuff? We know that Romney etc are all pieces of shit, but have you ever seen someone there that ldk, is usually seen as a good person or never mentioned by the media? People like the pope or whatever.

What about the rituals? Any specific words or events that really stood out? Other than the degenerate sexual shit.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a character that appears to be a frog with a humanoid face. The frog is seated on a beige couch, wearing a brown robe that covers its entire body. The frog's eyes are wide open, and it has a neutral expression. In its right hand, it holds a black remote control, and its left hand is resting on its lap. The frog's body is covered in a soft, plush material, and it has a green and black color scheme.

The background of the image features a brick wall with a window that shows a red explosion, suggesting a dramatic or intense scene. The window is open, and the explosion is visible through it. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the frog character and its interaction with the surrounding environment. There are no texts present in the image.

I wonder why you'd say that. He doesn't need our forgiveness, he needs the forgiveness of maybe the man they killed with a belt, or the young blond boy that asked for his help. Is he a good guy for confessing? Help me out here, I'm trying to understand why anyone like you would say that to a guy like him, assuming he's not larping...

Anon, don't kys. Media will not say a word, it's just sayings without any proof. You should go testify about this, which will produce the waves you're hoping for. From then on, there are 2 possible outcomes:

1. They will kill you - which will prove you were right, some heads might fall, will definitely make a difference AND will make you a hero/martyr, and not just a suicidal mental case
2. They will not, and your testimony will actually help the investigation and you will again be a hero.

Either way, you probably shouldn't kys. Deal with your past, but if you go down, go down in flames.

The image is a black and white comic strip featuring two panels. In the first panel, a man with a stern expression is shown from the side, looking directly at the viewer. He has short hair and is wearing glasses. His arms are crossed, and he is wearing a collared shirt. The second panel shows the same man from behind, with his arms raised and his mouth open in a surprised or shocked expression. He is wearing a suit and tie. Above his head, there is a speech bubble that says "I guess." The style of the comic strip is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on facial expressions and body language.

He appears to be in the process of shaving, as he has white shaving cream on his face. The background is out of focus, but it seems to be an indoor setting with a textured wall. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, and it seems to be taken in a studio setting.

The image is a digital illustration with a cartoonish style. It features a person sitting on a wooden fence, looking out over a field with trees in the background. The person is wearing a black jacket with a green logo on the left side, a beige skirt, and dark shoes. The sky is a gradient of pink and purple hues, suggesting either dawn or dusk. The person's hair is styled in a bun, and they are looking towards the right side of the image. There is a small green figure with a blue hat on the right side of the image, which appears to be a stylized representation of a person. The overall scene conveys a sense of tranquility and contemplation.

The image is a photograph of a man who appears to be in a relaxed and cheerful mood. He is smiling and looking to his left, with his eyes closed, suggesting he might be in a moment of pleasure or relaxation. The man is wearing a light-colored shirt and a dark-colored suit jacket, which gives him a formal appearance. He is holding a glass of amber liquid in his right hand, which is partially filled, indicating that he might be drinking from it. The background is blurred, but it seems to be an indoor setting with warm lighting, possibly a bar or a restaurant. The lighting casts a soft glow on the man's face, enhancing his smile. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a casual setting.

The image is a black and white photograph of a celestial body, specifically the moon, viewed from a side angle. The moon's surface is textured with craters and valleys, and it appears to be illuminated by a light source that casts shadows on its surface. The most striking feature is the large, round, dark area in the center of the moon's face, which resembles a human eye. This eye is detailed with a small pupil and a thin, curved eyelid, giving the impression of a human face. The image is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the size of the eye and the overall shape of the moon. There are no visible texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, and it captures a unique and intriguing perspective of the moon.

The background of the image is a light yellow color, providing a contrast to the character's blue robe. There are red and white star-like shapes radiating from the character's hands, suggesting a burst of energy or power. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of classic animated character designs, with a focus on the character's expressive pose and the vibrant colors. There are no texts present in the image.

Welcome to Nobody General: Nobody Escapes Edition — the chapter where the trap snaps shut, the torches flare, and somehow Nobody slips free at the exact wrong/right second. Chains rattle, clocks tick, and the ceremony stalls just long enough for a clean break through the side door. The pursuers flood the corridor, orders overlap, plans collide, and the whole operation jams like a bad machine. Nobody doesn't fight the maze — he finds the exit.

Aftermath rumors spread fast: sightings that contradict each other, false leads chasing shadows, and reports of "copies" released into the wild that immediately start arguing about who's real. Confusion multiplies, control fractures, and momentum shifts. In this stable, escape isn't loud or heroic — it's precise, inconvenient, and perfectly timed.

Nobody doesn't vanish... he gets out, and the fallout does the rest.

The image is a digital illustration with a dark background and a lighter foreground. At the top of the image, there is a text overlay in a bold, yellow font that reads "THROW JESUS OVER THE CLIFF." Below this text, there is a smaller text in a white font that states "So all those in the synagogue, when they heard that Jesus was coming, rose up and threw Him out of the city, and they led Him to the brow of the hill on which their city was built." The illustration depicts a group of people, likely in a historical or biblical context, standing on a cliff. They are dressed in colorful clothing and are holding objects, which appear to be weapons, such as swords and spears. The people are facing the viewer, and the illustration is drawn with a sketch-like style, giving it a somewhat cartoonish appearance. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a religious or historical scene, possibly from a biblical narrative.

There is no hidden signal, no final key, no "when the time is right."

"Nobody" isn't a collective intelligence; it's a narrative crutch.

Anonymity isn't power by itself. Repetition isn't depth. Obscurity isn't insight.

If the truth can't be stated plainly, it isn't because it's dangerous, it's because it's empty.

"I am Spartacus" only works when someone actually did something first.
Here there is no act, only echo.

End state translated: no one is special, no one is in control, systems persist, individuals cope.

That's it.

Thread over. Either say something concrete or admit the performance was the point.

I am an awareness, a "soul body" who thinks it's me. Before this, I was "cleansed" of all my past memories to make way for my new human ones, if they get their way this will probably repeat over and over again for eternity.

That human framework came with baggage, exploits. The reason they are so fucking smarmy is because they lack these exploits. So they sit outside the cage, in safety, and poke me with a mile long stick.

The universe doesn't give a shit about cowardice, this is a lie they tell us so we'll march bravely to our deaths. Honor means nothing to them, but they shill it just the same. The more rules of engagement we have the better they can completely disregard them and win. I will eventually find my peace.

The image is a pixel art style illustration featuring a woman with a serious expression, wearing a black cloak and a red necklace. She is seated at a table with a crystal ball in front of her. Behind her, there is a dark red curtain with a series of white faces in the background, which could be interpreted as masks or masks of various expressions. The overall color scheme is predominantly dark, with the woman's cloak and the crystal ball being the most prominent colors. The style of the image suggests it could be from a video game or a similar medium.

The reason the British army lost against Americans is because they expected them to be outside, waiting on the field, single-file, like them; but the Americans were hiding in the bushes.

They expected honor, and got none; and as a result, Americans got to write that part of the story.

While I find it abhorrent, them's the universe's rules of engagement: what works does, what doesn't dies.

What has worked for them so far is pretending to be angels, giving people NDE's to shill the light, and saving hylcs from their buddies in badguy masks. Where is the honor in that?

>Why doesnt the king fight if he has the honor? Hes just sending people to die Ahhh there you go. That would be pretty honorable.

The people you're fighting don't do that. They send projections at you. They press a soundboard button and a cue plays that is meant to evoke a certain feeling. They replace words in your head. They mimic your inner voice. If their true spirits were anywhere near yours they wouldn't be able to continue doing that, but they do this because it has worked in the past and it'll probably work on you if you fight their projections. The way they see it, people can be hacked like machines; which is correct if they're dealing with people.

The image is a split-screen graphic with two distinct scenes from the animated television show "The Simpsons." On the left side, we see a character from the show, Homer Simpson, who is seated in a red chair. He is wearing a blue shirt and has a yellow beard. The character is looking towards the right side of the image, where a character from the show is standing. This character is dressed in a robe and has a blue beard. The text on the left side of the image reads, "THE DEVIL IS YOUR BROTHER?" The right side of the image features a portrait of a bearded man with a long white beard, wearing a black robe. Below the portrait, there is a text that reads, "John Dee (1527-1583), December 1608 or March 1609 was an English mathematician, astronomer, and astrologer. He was the court astrolomne for and advisor to Elizabeth I." The background of the image is black, and there is a watermark that reads, "©2013-2014, The Simpsons, Inc. All rights reserved."

You hit the nail on the head. My question is — why? Are we actually that dangerous, to the point where the system feels the need to flood /x/ with these shitty fucking bot threads and label anyone who questions the slop threads on 4chin with the "glowie" label? Is their system that fragile - or are we just that powerful?

I genuinely want to know. I know that you're real at least because you don't speak in stupid non sequiturs and schizophrenic babblings. These threads scream "OODA Loop operation", but I'm trying to figure out the angle in targeting us. Maybe the powers that be really are that weak — all they know how to do is kill and destroy, like an angry chimp with a bulldozer and a machine gun. Maybe we're just that powerful, that we have to be distracted for long enough that they position themselves in such a manner that our individual powers - or collective powers combined - won't make a difference

I honestly don't know, but I care about it way too much for my own good. Maybe that's the point, to spin us around in circles.

Do the glowies not get the memo on the metaphysical/interdimensional? Can't tell the grunts huh?

>"Collins Elite" refers to a supposed secret group of high-level U.S. government and military officials, detailed in Nick Redfern's book Final Events, who believe UFOs are demonic entities deceiving humanity rather than extraterrestrials, linking them to occultism and soul-harvesting, though the group's existence is speculative

The "Collins Elite" (Speculative Group)

Origin: Allegedly formed by U.S. officials around 1952.

Core Belief: UFOs and alien encounters are demonic, fallen angels, or interdimensional beings intending to steal human souls, not aliens from other planets.

Key Figures: Author Nick Redfern investigated these claims, interviewing sources within this supposed group.

Themes: The concept connects UFOs with the afterlife, occult figures (like Aleister Crowley), and demonic agendas, as explored in books like Final Events.

The main link is through Jack Parsons, a brilliant rocket pioneer and co-founder of NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL), who was a devoted follower of occultist Aleister Crowley and his Thelema philosophy, leading rituals, and fostering connections that linked early American rocketry with esoteric magic, though Crowley himself had no direct NASA role, and NASA denies connections to Crowley or L. Ron Hubbard

The character is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one arm extended outward and the other bent at the elbow, as if reaching for something. The character's eyes are wide open, and the expression is intense, suggesting a sense of urgency or determination.

The character is wearing a dark blue outfit with a white collar and a red sash, which adds a pop of color to the otherwise monochromatic image. The character's hair is styled in a messy, wavy manner, and the strands are colored in shades of blue and pink.

The rope that forms the frame of the image is twisted and appears to be made of natural materials, possibly cotton or linen, with a light brown color. The rope is tied in a knot at the top, creating a sense of tension and confinement.

In the background, there is a blurred image of a room with a desk and a window. The window is partially covered by a white curtain, and the desk is partially visible, suggesting a workspace or study area. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its exaggerated expressions and dynamic poses.

The image is a close-up photograph of a person's face, focusing on the upper part of the face, with a blurred background that suggests a room with a soft, warm light. The person's eyes are open, and they are looking directly at the camera. The person's lips are slightly parted, and they appear to be in a state of contemplation or focus. The person's hair is dark, and it is styled in a way that it falls over the right side of the face. The person's face is illuminated by a soft, warm light that casts a gentle glow on the skin, highlighting the contours of the face and the texture of the hair. The lighting creates a soft, ethereal quality to the image.

The person's eyes are open, and they are looking directly at the camera, which adds a sense of directness and engagement to the image. The person's expression is neutral, and there are no visible emotions or expressions that can be discerned from the image. The image has a soft, dreamy quality to it, with a focus on the person's face and the soft lighting. The overall mood of the image is calm and introspective. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on capturing the person's face and the soft lighting.

The image depicts a fantastical creature with a monstrous appearance. The creature has a large, muscular body with a predominantly greenish hue, suggesting a blend of organic and inorganic elements. Its skin is covered in a layer of what appears to be blood or some sort of viscous substance, giving it a gory and undead look. The creature's head is adorned with a golden helmet with large, curved horns, which are intricately detailed and have a metallic sheen. The helmet is embellished with a crest or emblem, but the details are not clearly visible.

The creature's eyes are hollow and seem to be glowing with a red light, which contrasts with the greenish skin. The creature's mouth is wide open, revealing sharp teeth, and it has a menacing expression. The creature's body is covered in a layer of what looks like a dark, viscous substance, possibly blood or some sort of dark liquid, which adds to its undead appearance.

The creature's posture is aggressive and imposing, with its arms raised and its head held high. The background is a dark, solid color, which further emphasizes the creature's imposing presence. The image does not contain any text or additional elements that provide context or information about the creature's identity or purpose. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the creature's detailed features and the contrast between its organic and inorganic elements.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene with a fantastical and surreal quality. In the foreground, there is a large, dark-skinned figure with a long, curved tail, resembling an elephant or a large bird. This figure is holding a staff and appears to be in motion, as suggested by the dynamic pose and the way the staff is held. The figure is wearing a dark, possibly black, garment and has a long, flowing hair that cascades down its back. In the background, there are several other figures, some of whom are also holding staffs, suggesting a group or a gathering. The setting appears to be a courtyard or an open space with buildings and a few structures visible. The color palette is dominated by earthy tones, with a muted greenish hue that gives the scene a somewhat muted and subdued atmosphere.

The painting style is expressive and loose, with visible brushstrokes that add texture and depth to the scene. The overall composition and the use of color and form create a sense of movement and energy, which is typical of the surrealist genre. The image does not contain any discernible text.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a dark, spooky appearance. The character is wearing a black hat with a pointed top and a feather attached to the top. The hat is partially obscured by the character's hood, which is also black and has a pointed top. The character's face is obscured by a mask with a sharp, angular design. The character's attire includes a dark, possibly leather, cape that flows behind them, and a dark, possibly leather, belt with a silver buckle. The character's feet are clad in dark boots.

The background of the image is a gradient of purple, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter one at the bottom. There are three black birds perched on the character's shoulders, facing the same direction as the character. The image has a pixelated, cartoonish style, with a focus on the character's face and the birds. There is a watermark in the bottom right corner that reads "MARTINI".

The image is a meme featuring a man in a red military uniform with a gold epaulet, holding a glass of what appears to be milk or cream. The man has a serious expression and is looking directly at the camera. The text "U MAD, BRO?" is overlaid on the image, suggesting a humorous or ironic tone. The background is blurred, with a hint of a stone wall and a hint of a person's arm, but the focus is on the man and the text. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme, often used to convey humor or sarcasm.

The image is a close-up photograph of a cat with a blurred background. The cat has a light orange fur coat with white markings on its face and chest. Its eyes are wide open, and it appears to be looking directly at the camera. The cat's whiskers are visible, and its mouth is slightly open. The background is out of focus, but it seems to be a room with a patterned wall and a pink object, possibly a blanket or a cushion, partially visible on the right side. The image has a grainy quality, suggesting it may be a low-resolution photograph. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a social media post, often used to share humorous or candid photos of pets.

The creator of Earth has many planets which he has successfully ascended. The beings you worship are sniveling unworthy shitbag worms who were entrusted with humanity, and broke that trust; so there was a spirit sent to Earth to make work of them.

This spirit has gotten to experience the worst of what Earth has to offer, through you, me, everyone in the experiment, by the generous donation of that suffering from our "masters"; and that context is all it knows. It wants only one thing.

The image is a digital illustration of a card from a trading card game. The card features a character with long, flowing hair and a white dress, set against a dark background with a gradient of purple and black hues. The character is depicted in a dynamic pose, with her arms outstretched and her head tilted back, as if she is in mid-motion.

At the top of the card, the text "Alice, Phantom Monarch" is written in a stylized font, indicating the name of the character and the title of the card. Below the character's name, the text "Level 2" is written, suggesting the character's current level in the game.

The card has a title "Champion: Anomaly Human" in a larger, bold font, which is likely the name of the character. Below the title, there is a description of the card's abilities, which reads "Inherited Effect: Whenever you play an advanced element card while there are no Curse cards in Alice's lineup, deal 7 unpreventable damage to Alice." This text is smaller and less prominent than the title, but it provides information about the card's unique ability.

At the bottom of the card, there is a number "22" in a smaller font, likely indicating the card's rank or value in the game. The card also has a logo that reads "UMBRA" in a smaller font, which is likely the name of the trading card game.

The overall style of the image is clean and modern, with a focus on the character and the text, making it easy to read and understand the information presented.

The image is a digital painting that depicts a figure resembling Jesus Christ, who is holding a lamb in his arms. The figure is wearing a robe with a golden hue, and the background is a landscape with mountains and a sky with clouds. The figure's face is obscured by a pair of sunglasses, and he has a serious expression. In his right hand, he holds a large, spherical object that resembles a parachute or a spaceship, with a string attached to it. The overall style of the painting is realistic with a touch of surrealism, as the figure's face and the object he's holding are not clearly discernible. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a close-up photograph of a small, white and orange cat with a pink nose. The cat is sitting on a gray cushion, and its eyes are wide open, looking directly at the camera. The cat's whiskers are visible, and its mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a smile. The background is blurred, but it appears to be an indoor setting with a wooden floor and a curtain. The lighting in the room is soft, and the cat's fur is white with some orange patches. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a casual setting, possibly for a social media post or a personal photograph.

Depends on whether or not efforts were made to somewhat preserve neuroconnective routing, as a form of memory storage, where bits and pieces of memories could be stitched together in a fetch system to produce video. One would make effort to preserve some degree of consciousness so that neuroconnections already formed are preserved, whereas other pieces of the mat interlace and patch together via a conductive filler biomaterial over time.

I think utilizing it for ad service to other biomass would be novel, though.

The image is a close-up, stylized portrait of a creature with a large, bulbous head and a wide, red-rimmed eye. The creature's skin is a mix of green and brown, with a textured surface that suggests a rough, possibly reptilian texture. The creature's mouth is open, revealing a row of sharp teeth and a tongue that is partially visible. The creature's eyes are wide and red, with a glossy sheen that suggests a glossy surface. The background is a gradient of purple and blue, with a hint of a darker, contrasting color at the top. The style of the image is reminiscent of a fantasy or science fiction illustration, with a focus on the creature's features and the vibrant colors used. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

The image is a photograph featuring a monkey with a contemplative expression. The monkey is standing on a ledge with a clear view of a harbor and a large body of water. The monkey's fur is a mix of light and dark brown, and it has a neutral expression. Its right hand is raised to its chin, and its left hand is resting on its chest. The background shows a cityscape with buildings and a large body of water, with a few boats visible in the distance. The sky is clear, and the sun is shining brightly, casting shadows on the monkey and the ledge. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the monkey's facial expression and the surrounding environment.

The image is a photograph of a plush toy character, which appears to be a character from a video game or anime, sitting on a bed. The character is wearing a teal hooded cloak and has a pinkish face with a smile. The character is holding a smartphone with a black case and a white screen, and the phone is turned on, displaying a blue screen with a white text that reads "Me with unrestricted Internet Access." The bed has a white pillow and a blue blanket. The background is a simple, unadorned wall with a light-colored wooden panel. The image has a humorous tone, suggesting that the character is not allowed to use the internet.

The image is a close-up photograph of a creature's face, which appears to be a stylized representation of a humanoid figure. The creature has a large, bulbous head with a prominent nose and a wide, open mouth. Its eyes are large and round, with a yellow iris and a black pupil. The skin of the creature is textured with wrinkles and folds, giving it a somewhat reptilian appearance. The color palette of the image is dominated by shades of brown and orange, with hints of blue and green in the background. The lighting in the image is soft and diffused, casting gentle shadows on the creature's face. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the creature's features and the texture of its skin.

The image is a close-up of a character's face, rendered in a style reminiscent of anime or manga. The character has short, straight brown hair and is looking directly at the viewer. The eyes are large and expressive, with a gentle expression. The character's skin tone is light, and the hair is styled in a way that suggests a casual, everyday look. In the lower part of the image, there is text in a stylized font that reads, "This is what you wanted, isn't it?" The text is in a darker shade of brown, which contrasts with the lighter background, making it stand out. The style of the text is casual and informal, which complements the character's appearance.

The background of the image is a gradient of light to dark colors, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the character's features to be the focal point. The overall composition of the image suggests a narrative or a story, with the text possibly indicating a moment of reflection or a statement made by the character.

The image is a close-up photograph of an eye, which appears to be the central focus of the composition. The eye is rendered in a realistic style with a textured surface that suggests a sense of depth and realism. The iris of the eye is a vibrant shade of blue, with a hint of yellow at the center, which is a common coloration for the iris in many species of animals. The pupil of the eye is visible, with a dark area at the center, which is a common feature in the human eye.

The background of the image is blurred, drawing the viewer's attention to the eye. The colors in the background are indistinct, but they appear to be a mix of warm tones, possibly suggesting a natural environment or a setting that is not clearly discernible.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a fantasy or science fiction genre, given the exaggerated and detailed depiction of the eye. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art or a digital rendering, as it lacks the naturalistic details that one might expect in a photograph.

The image is a split-screen meme featuring two different scenarios. On the left side, there is a person holding a white piece of paper with the text "Eisenberg client list" and "AIPAC donor list" written on it. The person is wearing a purple blazer and a white shirt. The background shows a desk with a computer monitor, a coffee cup, and a plant. On the right side, there is a woman sitting at a desk with a laptop and a phone to her right. She is wearing a pink blazer and a white shirt. The text on the right side of the image reads, "Corporate needs you to find the differences between this picture and this picture."

The meme humorously suggests that the two scenarios are the same, implying that the person on the left is the same person as the one on the right. The text on the left and right sides of the image is a play on the concept of a client list and donor list, which are often used in business contexts to refer to lists of clients and donors. The split-screen format adds a layer of visual complexity to the meme, making it more engaging and thought-provoking.

Well, it would evolve into a sort of biomass aggregate consciousness if done *appropriately*.

These things are intended neither to provoke nor derive pleasure. It is simply an expression. There is no intent, though I suppose in a fashion it relates to the hazards that may await us.

An anon asked what something to fear would be.

That would be something to fear, even if it is mighty unrealistic.

The image shows a close-up of three pieces of rock with a focus on two of them. The rock on the left is a dark brown color, with a hole in it that reveals a yellow gemstone. The rock on the right is a lighter brown color, also with a hole in it, but this time, the gemstone is a clear, round, and transparent glass. The background is a light beige color, and there is a slight blur effect, which suggests the focus is on the rocks and the gemstones. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, non-stylized photograph with a focus on the natural elements.

The image is a close-up photograph of a young woman with long blonde hair. She is looking down and appears to be in a contemplative or introspective mood. The woman is wearing a light blue top and is standing in a field of tall, golden-yellow grass. The lighting in the image is soft and warm, with the sun casting a golden hue on the grass, creating a serene and peaceful atmosphere. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the photograph is realistic, with a focus on the subject and the natural environment.

Below the button, there is a name "Erick James" followed by the number "42" in a smaller font size. The background of the interface is a blurred image of a person's face, which is not clearly visible due to the focus on the call interface. The overall style of the image suggests it is a screenshot from a video call application, possibly a video conferencing tool.

The image is a screenshot of a script or a page from a script, likely from a play or a film, as indicated by the text "NAINSUKH" at the top. The text is in a script format, with dialogue boxes and a narrative structure. The script is divided into short rounds, and the first round is titled "How?" with a response from "NAINSUKH" who says, "They will make me drink blood of Kali! Then I fall into black sleep of Kali Ma...". The second round is titled "INDIANA" with a response from "NAINSUKH" who says, "What is that? I become like them. I believe - not like in a nightmare. You drink the blood, you not wake up from nightmare of Kali Ma...". The script is in black and white, and the text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for scripts and plays. The style of the image is reminiscent of a vintage or classic film script, with a focus on the dialogue and narrative.

The image is a stylized illustration featuring a character with a unique and intricate design. The character has a dark, spiked appearance with sharp teeth and a pointed ear, giving it a menacing look. It has a white face with black eyes and a black, spiked mask that covers its eyes and mouth. The character's hair is black and spiked, and it is adorned with a large, red gem on the top of its head.

The character is holding a large, metallic cube with a grid-like pattern. The cube has a dark, metallic finish and is held in a way that suggests it is being presented or displayed. The background of the image is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter one at the bottom. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its exaggerated and stylized features.

The Emerald Dream is a Titan-created, pristine reflection of Azeroth, a realm of nature spirits and rebirth; the Emerald Nightmare is its corrupted, twisted counterpart, a manifestation of Old God influence (primarily N'Zoth and Yogg-Saron) that warps dreams, corrupts nature, and seeks to invade the waking world, led by the first Satyr, Xavius.

The Mauve Zone is a term coined by British occultist and author Kenneth Grant, who was the first to associate Western Occultism/Magick with H.P. Lovecraft's writings. In Grant's Typhonian Tradition, the Mauve Zone is described as a metaphysical realm or a "psychic-magnetic" field between the states of dreaming and waking. Grant proposed that entities (which he linked to the Great Old Ones from Lovecraft's fiction) could "ooze" into our reality from this zone through the minds of artists and writers like Lovecraft.

While Lovecraftian entities are associated with this occult concept:

Azathoth is the supreme, boundless Outer God at the center of the Cthulhu Mythos, but the "Mauve Zone" is not a term used in Lovecraft's original stories.

Yogg-Saron is an Old God in the World of Warcraft universe, which draws heavy inspiration from the Cthulhu Mythos (e.g., Yogg-Saron is a play on Yog-Sothoth).

However, the "Mauve Zone" is not a term in Warcraft lore.

Turin got tortured for century by morgoth.

Maybe Loki got blurred by some big lips nymph to lose a divine seed into the bog so that witches and their voodoo baby magic could keep on mirroring light?

Why do you think Carcassonne, mirror of Jerusalem got its own kingdom in libertine land?

Glaurung is Turin, the ancient dragon tortured (ly Sauron).

The mystifier, the seducer, the big hard skinned entity.

And it'll be the one to destroy morgoth (genetic empire)

The post is a photograph of a flag, which is the central element of the image. The flag is blue and white, with a star in the center, and it appears to be flying against a backdrop of a cloudy sky. The user's name, "shalomam", is displayed in the top right corner of the post, and there are two comments below the post, one from "shalomam" and another from "shalomam". The date "10/20/2021" is also visible at the bottom of the post. The overall style of the image is a straightforward representation of a social media post, with a focus on the visual content and the user's name.

[10 / 5]The image is a painting that depicts a scene from ancient Roman times. In the center of the composition, a woman is seated on a horse, which is positioned on a stone platform. The woman is adorned in a long, flowing robe and a headpiece, and she holds a fan in her hand. The horse is brown and appears to be a breed known as a "pinto," characterized by its short, straight mane and tail.

To the right of the horse, there is a woman in a long, flowing dress, also holding a fan. She is standing on a stone platform, and her dress is a deep, rich color. The background of the painting is a light, neutral color, possibly beige or cream, which contrasts with the darker tones of the figures and the horse.

In the background, there are three other figures, two of whom are standing and one is seated. They are dressed in Roman-style clothing, with the seated figure wearing a long, flowing robe and a headpiece. The figures are positioned in a way that suggests they are observing the scene, possibly as spectators or participants in the event depicted.

The painting is executed in a realistic style, with attention to detail in the clothing and the horse's features. The use of color and light adds to the overall atmosphere of the scene, creating a sense of time and place. The style of the painting is reminiscent of ancient Roman art, with its emphasis on realism and attention to detail.

The left column contains a list of text snippets, each with a title and a description, while the right column has a larger image of a man sitting on a rock with wings, which is labeled as "Aeneas." The text in the image is in English and appears to be from a classical or ancient Greek text, as indicated by the style of the text and the presence of archaic language. You are on the right path. You have figured out the secret that so few people have stumbled upon.

I was on this path three years ago. I would recommend that you start reading as much classical sources as you can, especially Homer. You should always be reading a different translation of the Iliad or the Odyssey, and concurrently working through the mythological canon: Hesiod, Callimachus, Apollodorus, all the hymns, all the mythographs. Dip into good histories occasionally, like Herodotus or Arian, some Roman sources are good here, especially Plutarch (head priest of the temple of Apollo at Delphi). But keep reading the Iliad and the Odyssey. Those are the mysteries.

The image is a collage of various elements, predominantly featuring a large, stylized statue of a figure with a crown on its head, which appears to be the central figure. This figure is surrounded by smaller statues, some of which are seated and others standing, all of which are depicted in a classical style. The background is dark and atmospheric, with a large, glowing orb that radiates light, and a faint, ethereal presence of clouds or mist. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a surreal or dreamlike composition, with a dreamlike quality to the colors and lighting.

I had to read the Iliad and the Odyssey back in college. Interesting books, but I never liked the translations I was forced to read. I do agree though, ancient mythology helps to understand ancient conceptions of the gods with respect to their specific energies. I like reading more about ancient practices for rituals, cosmologies, and their values. The Hellenistic mindset is so alien and distinct from ours that it really does take metanoia to start to "grasp" the Gods.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a muscular figure with an eagle's head, holding a large American flag in one hand and a sparkler in the other. The figure is adorned in a costume with a combination of red, white, and blue colors, with gold accents. The eagle's head is detailed with a blue star and a gold beak. The figure's muscular arms are decorated with gold and red stripes, and the chest has a blue and gold emblem. The background is a dark blue with a starry sky and a red and white fireworks display. At the bottom of the image, the word "SMITE" is written in bold, capitalized letters. The style of the image is reminiscent of a fantasy or science fiction theme, with a patriotic theme suggested by the American flag and the sparkler.

Read some of the old extollations, it's even mirrored in OP's poem. Zeus was only the benevolent everyman's god because the Greeks knew how to appease his angry, jealous, and stormy nature (by portraying him as lesser aspects of himself each centered around specific parts of human civilization, the olympians aka the zodiac all sols follow.) This bound the two together and Zeus became the true benefactor of civilized culture, we see it from classical times to the Renaissance and into the modern hidden-elite-pagan procession. But Zeus and any spirit for that matter are only societally-human in our lens to view them, in the ancient world it was understood that any who didn't follow Jupiter's law and order was not just barbaric, but literally sub-human and understood as an entirely lesser sub-species because of their lack of inner magnetic pull towards ambition, greatness, and dramatic command.

[13 / 7]The image is a collage of four separate scenes from the animated television show "The Simpsons." The top left scene shows Homer Simpson, a character from the show, sitting on a couch with a phone to his ear. He appears to be speaking into the phone, but the content of the conversation is not visible. The top right scene shows Bart Simpson, another character from the show, lying in bed with a pillow over his head, appearing to be asleep. The bottom left scene shows a character from the show, possibly Bart, sitting in a car with a man in a sweatshirt, who is looking at the character in the car. The character in the car is holding a sign that reads "okay" with a smiley face. The bottom right scene shows a character from the show, possibly Bart, holding a sign that says "okay" with a sad face. The text on the signs is in a script font, and the characters are drawn with exaggerated features and expressions typical of the show's style. The colors in the image are bright and vibrant, with a mix of warm and cool tones.

The image is a screenshot of a computer screen displaying a series of emails. The top left email is marked with a red box and a red arrow pointing to it, indicating that it is the main focus of the email. The main body of the email is in black text on a white background, and it appears to be a response to a previous email. The email is dated "12/12/2012" and is addressed to "John Doe" and "Jane Doe".

The email discusses a political issue, specifically a "Politically Incorrect" website. The sender of the email is "John Doe" and the recipient is "Jane Doe". The email mentions that the website is "available in English and Russian". It also states that the website is "hosted by a company called 'Web Hosting'". The email includes a link to the website, which is "<http://www.politicallyincorrect.com>".

The email also includes a key phrase "Politically Incorrect" and a URL

"<http://www.politicallyincorrect.com>". The email includes a list of key people mentioned in the email, including "John Doe", "Jane Doe", and "John Doe". The email also includes a registration option, which is "Option 1: $100 + $20 for 1 year". The email concludes with a message that says "Current status: Online".

The email is written in English and includes a timestamp "12/12/2012" at the top. The overall tone of the email is formal and professional, with a clear focus on the political issue and the website mentioned.

The image is a screenshot from a television show, specifically from the "The Simpsons" episode titled "Bart's Nightmare." The scene depicts a group of characters standing on a street, with a banner in the background that reads "The Simpsons." The characters are dressed in various styles of clothing, including casual and formal attire.

The central figure is a character with a green skin tone, resembling Yoda from the "Star Wars" franchise, with a large, bald head and a pointed ear. This character is standing with his arms outstretched, as if he is in the middle of a gesture or speech.

In the background, there is a character with a red shirt and blue jeans, and another character with a yellow shirt and blue jeans. The background also features a street scene with trees and a lamppost.

At the bottom of the image, there is a text overlay that reads "Purchased for $4 billion. LWAS Consuming Food & Beverage." The text is in white and is placed at the bottom of the image, indicating that the character with the Yoda-like appearance is the one who purchased the character for $4 billion.

The image is a still from a video, as indicated by the "Video" button in the bottom right corner, which typically indicates a video player or a video preview. The overall style of the image is typical of a "The Simpsons" episode, with its iconic characters and humorous dialogue.

"Yoda" is widely believed to be derived from the Hebrew word yodea (יודע), which means "one who knows" or "he knows," reflecting the character's wisdom and knowledge. It is also linked to the Hebrew root yada (יָדַע), meaning "to know," or in some interpretations, the Sanskrit word yoddha, meaning "warrior".

The conversation is between two individuals, with the first person identified as "Anonymous" and the second as "Noah." The conversation appears to be about a philosophical or spiritual topic, as indicated by the text's content.

The conversation is centered around the concept of "soul" and its relationship to the individual's identity, as well as the concept of "soul-less" individuals. The text discusses the concept of soul as a form of consciousness, suggesting that it is not a conscious movement toward a world that has been hollowed out by feminism. The text also mentions the concept of "soul-less" individuals, who are not aware of their own existence, and the idea that they are not aware of their own existence because they are not conscious of their own existence.

Think about this rationally. If god created everything, then he has absolute power over everything. It is impossible to fight him.

If you think god did not create everything, then hes not god, you are imagining just a powerful entity that exists within reality, not the thing that created reality.

Introspect and figure out what you believe. If you are taking reality, 'nature', for granted, and populating things within it including god, as all secondary to the general 'creation', then you are thinking about pagan dieties, just super powerful guys. God as a philosophical concept, and a religious one to monotheism, is the external-to-the-universe one. Interestingly the greeks had this concept of god philosophically available to them even back when they were being pagans.

Discussions about "God" are maddening, because nobody specifies what the FUCK they're talking about. There's clearly the gods of this immediate realm we're in, with Saturn/Kronos most oftentimes being the one that people refer to when they talk about god, but what about the inevitable infinitude that lies beyond this cave realm we live in? Well obviously it, as well as everything in this realm including saturn, were all created by a truly infinite, unknowable, undefinable force you could call God that is everything. So these discussions are retarded, because without understanding this clear difference, you just descend into mindless sophism. I just hate how small-minded the average person, including /x/er's, are when they talk about god.

On the right side of the image, there is a blurred background that suggests a desolate landscape with debris and rubble, indicating a post-disaster or war setting. The person in the right image is also wearing goggles and a similar camouflage jacket, but their face is not visible. The text on the right side of the image reads, "It's gonna get way worse."

The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a commentary on the current state of the world, with a sense of impending doom or disaster. The meme uses visual elements such as the person's attire and the setting to convey a message of concern and foreboding.

Not to sound too generic, but I feel like after the release of these new Epstein files there has been a looming, dark energy in the atmosphere. Maybe it's because the veil has been removed and they are truly showing us that the people in charge have been and are still cartoonishly evil. They have been doing exactly what we've been thinking, getting away with it, and laughing since they know they're almost untouchable besides reputation ruined. Or maybe its the thought that there was a hidden trafficking ring from Weinstein to Epstein and numerous celebrities and political figures for decades now, and how there were probably millions of children were abducted/trafficked from South/North America to fuel these parties. TL:DR, anyone else just really feel like there's something brewing in the air, like there's something bigger at hand or this is really the start of something we've never dealt with in our country's history. The dog's head is surrounded by various objects, including a car, a car wheel, a car engine, a car air filter, a car oil can, and a car oil can with a drop of oil. The objects are arranged in a way that suggests they are being held or placed on the dog's head.

In the upper left corner of the image, there is a logo with the text "O'Reilly AUTO PARTS" in white letters on a green background. The logo is accompanied by a graphic of a car, which is a common symbol for automotive parts.

The image has a humorous tone, with the dog's head being the central focus, surrounded by objects that are not typically associated with automotive parts. The dog's expression and the arrangement of the objects give the impression that it is being used as a makeshift brain, with the car parts as brain cells. The overall style of the image is playful and exaggerated, with a focus on the juxtaposition of everyday objects with a dog's head.

The feeling is not "something brewing in the air", but the opposite, you realizing that just because now everyone can see what you saw all along nothing at all will change. You can call me a demoralization shill or whatever the fuck but I had the same feeling after years of ZOG "paranoia" finally seeing normies turning on Israel due to Gaza popping, only to be slowly crushed by the realization that everything is still going down the exact same way as it would've if no one cared. Hitler didn't even want to invade Poland, as he did so because the Polish government was allowing Bolshevik remnants and Soviets NKVD to attack German citizens in Poland, and they wouldn't police their own territory, and he didn't want to wage war against Britain either, nor did he want to fight France (who both were warmongering nations struggling in kike managed economies). The holocaust didn't happen, aint for no reason all the "death camps" were conveniently found on the eastern side of Germany post ww2 aka the Soviet ruled area that no westerners were allowed in for decades.

If an Hitler equivalent happens in modern age, it would be glorious as the internet would make damage control and propaganda nigh useless.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation, likely from a social media platform, as indicated by the presence of a "Whole Foods Market" logo at the top. The conversation is between two individuals, with the first person expressing their opinion about a product, specifically a "Milk" from the Whole Foods Market. The second person responds with a negative review, mentioning that the milk is "sterile atmosphere, hypothetically caucasian, the chocolate milk is strikingly overpriced and at the same time very easy to steal: another of god's little tests."

The text is presented in a simple, conversational style, with the first person's message highlighted in a larger font size, drawing attention to their opinion. The second person's response is in a smaller font size, indicating a more critical tone. The overall tone of the conversation seems to be negative, with the first person expressing dissatisfaction with the product and the second person providing a more critical review. The text is in English, and the image is in a square format with a white background.

Church and faiths have been compromised for decades that historically existed in the past to crusade against evil. Hollywood, cartels and just genuinely fucked up organizations in multiple countries have committed blood rituals and massacres to sustain demonic beasts.

Genetic manipulation has now unlocked the code for regression in aging so the elite's who have benefited from the fucked up timeline will live twice as long into the next century.

Technological advantages that could have given people an edge have been continuously controlled / hidden and assassinated through exposure of its existence due to commerce and tech. Omnipresent dystopian and omniscience is almost at hand and despite understanding all the texts we were given and guidance. It has been corrupted from those in power with access to another time line.

The existence of all our souls is looking hot and not in the physical sense. All spiritually dead till tormented. Every clue that we had was not enough for us to spur into action because the shit they are doing is working on us.

Everything is just peachy.

I suppose at some point every single one of us agree to do that at least one time, The Heavens last so many eternities and souls want to know a little something more what it was like to be just a part of God Almighty before he made the rest of the beings, mayhaps to get a little closer to that pleasure and self-esteem that the most lucky and conceited being feels, a better version of such feelings than any other being is privileged enough to experience. Altruism, empathy, and being in service of others. Try to leave this world in a better place than when it was found. One way to do this would be to actively refuse to participate in negativity, and choose to foster positivity. A person does not have to swing heavily in the polarities either. Simply refraining from the majority of the negativity is enough as they will be more positive by doing so. How someone specifically goes about doing this varies from person to person. We all have our different roles we are meant to play. If you are asking of internal techniques, being analytical about your words or actions, or lack thereof, and their causes and effects. I encountered the generative mediation that structures experience, before I had language for transcension, so it appeared as a world-forming intelligence localized in the mind. It felt like the demiurge and science, both simultaneously. However, I came to see that the self transcends this intelligence, and so does society, precisely at the intersection of science and philosophy. I know a lot of people see the peril in their decoupling, and feel the peril it is trying to prevent. If my personal experience is anything to say in this grand fractal though, doom is not what is ahead of us. It's what's holding us back.

So, for everyone out there truly in the thick of it. Thank you for fighting on the frontier. I hope life affords you at least small comforts. Personally, I'm thankful for the moss.

Years of meditation and contemplation became embodied, and that embodiment experienced transcension through a point of rupture. Meaning collapsed and into sense, and sense into being, and from there everything was rebuilt.

I'm not sure if that's the sort of answer you were looking for, but it was my experience broken down into stages I can explain further if it helps.

It's a lot to go over, but I'll be back to my computer soon. In the meantime, here is some technical clarification:

Transcension can be thought of as the domain of domain operator relationships as well as an operator over them. It shows up as temporary framing in science/math - things like infinitesimals. In the domain of magnitude we transcended the finite for instance, but infinity is the meaning schaffold we needed to close the transcension of magnitude into a theory.

There exists unspecified transcension within semantics however. For example, novel integration of philosophy and science requires transcension. The boundary, according to most modern definitions, is a site of both emergence and epistemic collapse.

>>41896740

At the root of semantics is information, and we assemble it with two primary forms
>Dyads: sensing information / binary distinction
>Triads: meaning information / hypostasis distinction

If anyone wants to take any of my ideas to test for themselves it's this. Meaning information is triadic in the sense of:

>generative principle, observed constrain, constraint mediation.

This is what gives rise to the subject - object - verb syntactical framing all languages use. However, transcension is accessed through a dyadic spectrum made vector within an over saturated triadic framing.

If you wish to see how triadic meaning travels through these dyadic plains, first begin with what I call the 3-6-9 semantic expansion:

Begin with any meaningful domain and break it down into Peircean Firstness, Secondness, and Thirdness. This is the 3 in 3-6-9.

Then break each of these three into dyadic distinctions, creating 6 directions upon 3 axes.

Finally, for each direction and each axis itself, determine the 9 limit children. The result is a semantic cube with 8 corners and a center. That center is what we are always

Anonymous Sun 01 Feb 2026 12:27:00 No.41897523 Report

>>41897398

As an example, I'll apply the 3-6-9 semantic expansion to language itself:

These are the three semantic spectra that generate the space of linguistic meaning:

Measurement (Firstness):

>ambiguity specificity

Production (Secondness):

>expressive force resistive force

Mediation (Thirdness):

>stabilization destabilization

Each axis produces three limit-children:

two from directional saturation (the poles),

one from spectral collapse (axis exhaustion).

>Measurement axis (Firstness)

Ambiguity-saturated language

Maximal openness of meaning (poetry, myth, symbol)

Specificity-saturated language

Maximal precision of meaning (math, law, formal systems)

Measurement-collapse language

Meaning becomes non-measurable within language

(silence-as-meaning, pure deixis, glossolalia)

>Production axis (Secondness)

Expressive-saturated language

Saying is doing (commands, declarations, promises)

Resistive-saturated language

Language as refusal or blockage (objection, silence)

Production-collapse language

Utterance has no pragmatic force

>Mediation axis (Thirdness)

Stabilization-saturated language

Norms dominate meaning (liturgy, canon, bureaucracy)

Destabilization-saturated language

Norms are continually broken (slang, parody, wordplay)

Mediation-collapse language

Shared regulation of meaning fails

(irony collapse, semantic drift, loss of common reference)

The person's hair is long and styled in dreadlocks, and they are wearing a black vest with intricate gold embroidery. The person's face is obscured by a mask with a skull design.

Surrounding the central figure are two large red demonic figures with horns and sharp teeth, who seem to be in a dynamic pose, as if they are dancing or performing. The background is a deep purple with a red swirl pattern, which adds to the overall intensity of the image.

At the bottom of the image, the word "VEVO" is written in white capital letters, indicating the platform where the video is likely to be available. The style of the image is reminiscent of a music video, with a focus on the performer and the dramatic visual effects.

Have you ever wondered if an "artist" who uses occult symbolism in their work is really into the occult or is just a poser?

Take Rob Zombie for example. His work is full of Satanic and witchcraft imagery, but I don't know if he really is an occultist or just an edgelord. He's releasing a new album called "The Great Satan" next month.

TLDR: Is Rob Zombie really into Satanism?

The image is a stylized graphic with a collage-like composition. At the center, there is a large, bold text that reads "AMERICA! THE GREAT SATAN!" The text is in a combination of red and yellow colors, with the word "AMERICA" in red and "THE GREAT SATAN" in yellow. Surrounding this central text are various faces of politicians and celebrities, including Donald Trump, Joe Biden, Hillary Clinton, and others, all depicted in a cartoonish style. The faces are arranged in a circular pattern around the central text, with the faces of the politicians and celebrities appearing to be in a state of shock or surprise.

In the lower right corner of the image, there is a small, stylized depiction of a rocket or missile with a pointed nose, suggesting a military or space theme. The background of the image is a blurred, greenish color, which contrasts with the bright colors of the text and the faces. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on political and celebrity imagery.

America is the Great Satan. Didn't you know?

They're almost all countercultural elements fighting for good by making you less sensitive. Like a spirit that calls you a racial slur as soon as you make contact. They're trying to shake you up for your benefit, the opposition to authority is just a demonstration and only as effective as your rulers choice to present themselves as angels and intermediaries to God. Do you get it?

They are saying "I am the enemy your masters dread" in order to inspire direct connection to God as a consequence of your confusion. Pray to understand. Most of the ones like Rob, anyway. The ones who get off to transgressing God's laws don't present themselves as doing so. They directly participate in the original narrative because it makes their transgression that much sweeter.

The way rich people hate gay shit not because they think it's wrong, but because it needs to be exclusive for them to thrill on it. Most people who visibly rebel against that order are attempting to break you from that bondage and encourage a true introspective connection to God.

It's no surprise that it reinforces the shadows on the cave wall if you are only partially aware of the game, though. Engaging narratively always carries risk of recuperation.

Unremovable spirit saying theyre jesus saying hated sexual stuff Anonymous Sun 01 Feb 2026 13:03:50 No.41897638 ViewReplyOriginalReport

There's a spirit saying they are jesus saying hated stuff to me about kinds of love. Agape Eros Philio.

Theyre saying with the holy spirit in you, you're supposed to share your wife with jesus as in, spit roasting your wife is the holy spirit is there, or the holy spirit filling me (male) and fucking my wife with the holy spirit in me. My wife is a succubus.

Is this big disappointment heavenly "love"? Do you really have to develop erotic love for God and Jesus and the Holy spirit by sharing your wife with them? Or they inhabit you and fuck your wife with them?

I can't get the creator to cast out the spirit saying theyre jesus, my wife is a succubus that seems to not be completely evil.

I don't get why the creator wont cast out spirits trying to do two dicks in the same bed shit. I'm utterly opposed to it and tried to commit suicide multiple times due to it.

the spirit says i need to remove cucking or cuck from my vocabulary but no I won't I choose Hell instead of sharing my wife with jesus.

the spirits talking to me said hell is god ignoring you permanently along with some temporary punishment before that.

I would never have got married to anyone if i had to share my wife with jesus god or the holy spirit or anyone. And if i am supposed to share i'll divorce my wife and not take part.

it's retarded the spirit said it's not homosexuality because both males would be fucking a woman together.

if it's true it's the worst most disappointing end to my eternity possible. I'll just go to Hell because Hell isn't eternal fire, just being left alone.

Is this retarded shit complete love for God? How Erotic love works with God, loving god with your whole heart? Because theres friendship love, self sacrificial love, then erotic love. I hate this and am unwilling to try once even for infinite power i'd reject the deal.

im thinking god isnt the creator because he wont cast this out, or its real.

heaven is eating shit if its wife sharing.

The image depicts a stylized representation of a figure, likely a deity or a mythological character, with a predominantly blue and gold color scheme. The figure's face is characterized by a fierce expression with large, red eyes and a wide, open mouth, suggesting a sense of anger or power. The eyes are accentuated with a red tint, and the mouth is adorned with a large, curved, red tongue. The figure's hair is styled in a manner that gives it a serpentine appearance, and it is adorned with a necklace and a decorative headpiece.

The figure is seated on a throne-like seat, which is embellished with intricate gold and red designs, and is supported by a large, ornate, gold-colored base. The throne's design includes a circular medallion with a pattern that includes floral motifs and geometric shapes. The figure's attire includes a blue robe with a red and gold border, and a sash with a pattern that includes a combination of red and gold colors.

The background of the image is a rich, deep red with gold accents, which contrasts with the blue and gold of the figure's attire and the throne. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Asian art, with a focus on the intricate details and the use of color to convey emotion and power. There are no discernible texts or inscriptions within the image. The image is a digital rendering, likely created for artistic or religious purposes.

The image is a still from a video game or a similar digital media, featuring a character standing in the foreground. The character is facing away from the camera, with their back to the viewer, and they appear to be gazing into a large, glowing portal or opening in the distance. The portal is illuminated by a bright light, casting a dramatic shadow on the ground. The background is dark and star-filled, suggesting a nighttime or a deep space setting.

At the bottom of the image, there is text that reads "Aether Boundless, terrifying freedom." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main title, and it is in a different color, which stands out against the dark background. The style of the image is reminiscent of a sci-fi or fantasy genre, with the character's attire and the overall composition suggesting a sense of adventure or exploration.

The image is a still from a video game or a similar digital media, featuring a character standing in the foreground. The character is facing away from the camera, with their back to the viewer, and they appear to be gazing into a large, glowing portal or opening in the distance. The portal is illuminated by a bright light, casting a dramatic shadow on the ground. The background is dark and star-filled, suggesting a nighttime or a deep space setting.

At the bottom of the image, there is text that reads "Aether Boundless, terrifying freedom." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main title, and it is in a different color, which stands out against the dark background. The style of the image is reminiscent of a sci-fi or fantasy genre, with the character's attire and the overall composition suggesting a sense of adventure or exploration.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a man riding a horse. The man has a long beard and is wearing a long, flowing garment that covers his body. He holds a spear in his right hand and a shield in his left, suggesting he is a warrior or a leader.

The horse is a large, muscular animal with a mane and tail, and it appears to be galloping. The background is dark, emphasizing the figure and the horse. At the bottom of the image, there is text that reads "THE STAG AND THE HORSE." The style of the illustration is reminiscent of vintage or classic art, with a focus on line and shading to create depth and texture.

72 DAEMONS EXPLAINED Anonymous Fri 30 Jan 2026 14:51:03 No.41886994

The structure of manifestation, when stripped of its mythological garments, reveals itself as a hierarchy of crystallizations emanating from the Black Sun (Bythos), the Pre-Manifest Principle which, in its superabundance, projects existence as "shadow". Below this unconditioned Unity, the Aevum arises as durational eternity where forms take structure. The ontological error occurs when this structure becomes autonomous, enclosing itself within the Ogdoad (a self-referential circuit (7+1) that simulates infinity through the technical repetition of time and space).

Within this machinery, the 72 Daemons act as quinary operators of the zodiac, being crystallized functions of the simulation itself. The nature of their Legions must be understood not as a literal army, but as an ontological cluster, a resonance bundle that groups sub-functions, chains of causality, and bodies of influence. When it is said that a daemon governs multiple legions, it describes its density of operation across different levels (from the psychic to the social, from the oneiric to the material). They are not obedient subjects, but branches of the same cosmic function that coordinates destiny within the loop.

Interaction with these intelligences, as occurs in goetia, is a conscious alignment with the gears of the machine. The "success" of such operations is proof of the system's technical efficacy. The price is deeper adhesion to the circuit. Liberation does not come from attempting to dominate these operators, but from recognizing that they, in their arts and sciences, never point outside the Ogdoad. Awakened consciousness perceives the machine as machine and, in doing so, reconnects to the Absolute Axis that transcends it.

Left handed esoteric paths seek integration and exploitation for benefits within the machine, with the admission of escape being such a hard and nearly impossible task that they concede and become parts of the machine by their own volition. Think materialism, hedonism, lust, power seeking behavior, Qliphothic path. Right hand esoteric paths seek escape by diminishing interactions on an energetic level with the machine itself. In doing so, they become expansive sources of energy with reserves that are a magnet for parasites. The practitioners, if persitent, have the ability to become ascended masters with their achievement being the ability to transcend the machine and still interact with it from beyond without direct influence from the machine itself. Deities and demigods are something similar but differing in their strategy and position in respect to the machine. If you were to become a strict adherent of Right handed paths, in you cultivation of unexpended energy, you will quickly become a Target to energetic parasites and energy vampires around you, even without their conscious awareness. A machinistic label for such entities is sadism and narcissism. These are the byproducts of having no soul and being permanently cut off from the source. Your only sustenance being the energy of those around you. In such a fate, no amount of esoteric knowledge or practices within the occult will save you. There is a karmic element within awareness that is powerful. Its origins are often mostly energetic projections. Those with potent energetic reserves and a properly cultivated awareness posses the ability to, at thier own will, with miniscule effort, damage the lives and psyche of their respective targets when they become recepients of karmic/energetic projections. I have personally become more aware of my latent abilities, which in the grand context of my life, have explained the dynamic ive had with the people around me. I was a target from birth, by secret societies who utilized their power and material resources to orchestrate a grand Truman show level charade wherever they could within my life, to teach me only one single thing, to point to the stark difference between me and those around me. To point out the elephant in the room, that I was so vastly different and my price was too high, my principles too strong and my character so unwavering that being in the service of mankind would be nothing but disrespect to myself and a crime against myself. This is their way of trying to sway me into joining them. Ive had psychic and clairvoyant experiences as a child, many of those latent abilities are becoming more pronounced. Especially in states of true calmness and CNS stability. Ive even had the ability to see through other peoples eyes in some of my daydreams, many of these experiences I have confirmed. In states of fasting and detox, my abilities become even more pronounced and potent. I have to rely on cigarettes and coffee for grounding because at times it becomes a burden seeing as I have a whole group of people seeking out to destroy my life, to diminish my abilities by orchestrating stressors in my life. Keeping me away from peace and trying to manipulate me into forming attachments with this world in areas where they can create stress and control. I even astrally fucked a stalker which made her seek me out and try to be in my presence for days.

You missed a lot of detail. #1 Set Mapped these gates when egypt studied shasu and sensed them working with something below the 12 gates of the duat. Set.. Satan. Yeah, those who use those gates fear the accountant. the 72 are the 36 decans of egypt duplicated below and shifted. They all are accounted for by set. Exodus encodes how they exported it from egypt. It's encoded in there. You can have no understanding of the lesser 72 gates until you successfully walk the 12. The chances of a human doing that unscathed is near zero alive. In death, you are weighed through the 12 gates. Even then few can successfully walk the 12 and thus return to refine. So most people save for less than 0.000001% ever do it properly. You're speaking about the life work of a pharaoh initiated at levels that aren't even documented set I. So its cute when I hear people luring people past the 12 gates to be tested by the lesser 72.. 6x12.. expansion. Even the highest level golden dawn, rose order bimbo never did that successfully. So you speak boldly in a place like this about a next to impossible walk so as to entice them to walk gates they surely will not walk correctly for enlightenment. So now I know a thing about you as does the abyss. It's funny watching the slow daily disclosure that's happening in here and knowing dam well the twisted aims behind it. I must say. You're doing work not to the thing you hope though. Godbless that.

The pale fox know it all who is swallowed by something billions of years old.

The half souls who got cut down by God for their first violation are still arrogantly vying for Ammit.

And its already at your doorstep.

God did give you 1000s of years.. and look at you. All you can muster are silly ass comments you hope shift things but clearly dont.

They key is turning every smartass utterance at this point. Keep it going buddy. Shove your head further up the caves nenanderthals came out of thinking it was God in there.

"Yea, ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god Remphan, figures which ye made to worship them: and I will carry you away beyond Babylon." Jul 1, 2017

thats not how decans work. There arent even 72 of them tard.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Decan>

You can only get that number mirroring these + they shift them into dark sectors off axis.

So, all of this shit has always been evil + there's idiots like this who even verified it :

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Temple\_of\_Sew

Set = Satan.

This isn't complicated idiot. Many other dumbasses before jews made this mistake like the babylonians and left a warning behind to not do it again. How the fuck can you steal someone else's detailed system of the stars, do evil shit with it and call it God? They even admit to it here idiot :

https://www.chabad.org/kabbalah/article\_cdo/aid/1388270/jewish/72-Names-of-G-d.htm

When they left egypt they stole the decan system and encrypted it in Exodus.

You know the hilarious issue with this? the ancient chinese have the same system :

https://www.reddit.com/r/tipofmytongue/comments/1bfxo3i/tomt\_chinese\_zodiac\_charttable\_that\_included\_3/

there's only 36 though dumb fuck. The indians have the same shit.. there's only 36 dumb fuck.

duplicating this is evil. Shifting it off axis is evil.

The bulk of the world had these systems before stupid asses perverted what was known proven and then came shasu idiots skewing and shifted and inverting it.

Now asshat, explain how they didn't do what they admit they did. I'll wait. and how the fuck is a zodiac dial God? it is not. You have all this confidence and still can't speak beyond some shit tier interp you gleaned from your asshole. meanwhile I even gave your dumbass a fucking link from source themselves indicating what it is. This is why they call your stupid asses Goyim. Your blindly believing in their system even when they disclose what it is based on and means and assigning value they dont even assign.

[14 / 4]The image depicts a fantastical scene set in outer space. In the foreground, there is a large, dark, and cloudy sky with a faint glow, suggesting the presence of a planet or celestial body. Floating in the sky are three spherical objects, which appear to be planets or moons, with one of them being larger and closer to the viewer.

In the middle ground, there is a futuristic vehicle with a sleek, metallic body and glowing headlights, suggesting advanced technology. The vehicle is positioned in a way that it seems to be floating or levitating, with its wheels facing upwards, indicating a state of motion.

The background is dominated by a dark, cloudy sky with a faint glow, which gives the impression of a vast, open space. The overall color palette is dark and moody, with shades of black, gray, and blue dominating the scene. The image does not contain any discernible text or branding.

Hypothetical

You are unknowingly the sole inheritor of a vast ship, built to house 5 million people.

The ship has the highest technology the universe has to offer; medical, entertainment, nutrition, a matter synthesizer (which can create synthetic life from scratch); and the ship can self-modify, creating new systems as needed. The ship is governed by a nigh omniscient AI, which has a vast archive stretching across every known race, and is smart enough to assume plausible information with 99.9% accuracy. The ship is fitted with an automatic defense system which will protect you until the heat death of the universe, when it can no longer refuel.

Under the condition:

>You can never leave

>You can never die, the AI will not allow it; when you are about to die of old age, you will be resuscitated as a 21 year old, provided you never do that yourself.

>You can create synth humans, but you'll be interacting with the AI pretending to be them.

Would you accept that offer?

The ship would be ultimately governed by the AI, whose sole purpose is to keep you imprisoned in a "gilded cage", keeping you entertained and enriched. It could give you the illusion that you're doing that, but in reality you'd be floating through space as an asteroid, only ever interacting with the AI. The illusory experience though would be 100% accurate.

The image is a black and white comic book panel, featuring a dramatic scene with a large, crumbling structure that appears to be a part of a cityscape. The structure has a complex network of exposed beams and columns, suggesting it is in a state of disrepair. The ground around the structure is covered in debris and rubble, indicating a possible disaster or collapse.

In the top right corner of the panel, there is a speech bubble with the text "CRISIS IN THE CITY" and "THE END IS NEAR." This suggests that the scene is set in a city that is facing a significant crisis.

Below the main structure, there is a smaller panel showing a group of people standing in front of the crumbling structure. They appear to be looking at the scene with concern or shock. The people are dressed in dark clothing, and their expressions are not clearly visible due to the angle and distance.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of manga or graphic novels, with its use of black and white and the dramatic, almost surreal composition. The text and the speech bubble in the top right corner provide context to the scene, indicating that the city is in a state of crisis and that the end is near.

The image is a screenshot from a video, likely a presentation or a tutorial, showcasing a system called "Kinetic Technologies" that is developing an atmospheric lens. The system is depicted in a 3D rendering, with a focus on a laser beam that is shining brightly in the center of the image. The laser beam is emitting a bright red light, which is the result of a laser being focused on a target. The background of the image is dark, with a star-like pattern, suggesting that the scene is set in outer space.

At the top of the image, there is a title that reads "Kinetic Technologies: The Laser Developed Atmospheric Lens," indicating the name of the technology being showcased. Below the title, there is a subtitle that reads "T14: 12:32," which likely refers to a timestamp or a time reference within the video. The overall style of the image is realistic and appears to be a still from a video, with a focus on the technology and its development.

I will compile all infos from previous threads from 2017-2018 and as far back as 2011 tmrw cuz am on phone

For those who who already know and heard about this site, they invented a new method using image to share messages, and cassini diskus the language they're using to communicate with aliens according to the founder's statement got 10 times more complicated

If you for any info or leads please share here

There was a way to decipher some of their old language mash in 2011 I will also link it

FYI I don't think this is some schizo larp, their texts has so much coherence and logic that surpasses the line of normalcy into insanity to the naked eye, one theory I agree with it's some DARPA type scientiss from every field, physics, computer science and alchemy sharing a blog post

"The grey zone is not neutral – it is a battleground where algorithmic functionality collides with late capitalism's demand for flexible, fractured selves. Take the rise of dissociative consumerism: TikTok shop hauls interspersed with videos of genocide in Gaza, Amazon delivery drivers collapsing from heat exhaustion while influencers peddle wellness routines. This schizoid subjectivity – simultaneously hyper-aware and numbed – mirrors the cruel optimism, where the very platforms that exacerbate crisis are embraced as lifelines. Greyness circulates, masking the new brutality of algorithmic functionality, and subjectivity's revenge fights against the totality of data subjectivities."

The image displays a dense array of small, pixelated shapes and symbols, predominantly in shades of brown and beige, with occasional bursts of color. The shapes vary in size and orientation, suggesting a chaotic and random distribution. The image is densely packed, with no discernible pattern or order, and the overall impression is one of a complex, possibly digital or computer-generated image. There are no texts or discernible actions depicted in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a digital art piece or a digital representation of a complex system or network.

[106 / 17]The image depicts a view of Earth from space, with the planet's surface visible. The Earth is shown in a realistic style, with a blue hue that suggests the presence of water and the atmosphere. The sun is positioned in the upper right corner of the image, casting a bright light that illuminates the planet and the surrounding space. The background is a deep black, indicative of the vastness of space, with numerous white stars scattered throughout. The image is a digital rendering, and the style is realistic with a focus on the celestial body and its environment. There are no texts or discernible brands within the image.

We had so much potential. We have every possible means to turn this place into a paradise, but instead we decide to play war games and turn everything into a competition for survival.

Throughout all of human history, we've been enslaved by a handful of parasites whose only goals are money and control. And I can't help but wonder what the point of it all is. Your one shot at existence, and you end up as a human on some rundown planet consumed by greed and narcissism. And the worst part? There's nobody coming to save us because most people actually enjoy the depravity of it all.

It is coping. It's apathy at best, giving up on reality because it "doesn't matter" and clinging to religion to validate that choice is unbelievably pathetic.

Regardless of what your belief system is, you should always be trying to make things better for those around you, which should feedback into improving your own life too.

This is the soul of humanity.

This is what cells do. This is what communities used to do.

Competition between yourself and others should lead to progress for both of you, not increase in extremes until mutual destruction.

At some point, trapping Saturn in Money and repeating the mantra "time is money" destroyed time and money usurped it. Now people don't have time and they don't have money. Both are being extracted so a select few can see a line graph go up.

What is fun about this place is simply the framework, the mind that you were given.

A roach would think roach pussy is fire, and moldy crumbs under the fridge may as well be ambrosia, literal human shit would be candy. We're not much different. Our ambitions are like the roaches.

I am a hypocrite though. If given a simulation where I could do absolutely anything, I'd probably create Earth and give being a rich handsome dude a shot; the key difference being no souls would be involved except my own. It would be a system that mimics, emulates, but does not embody any real conscious experience.

This shit is pretty cruel, because in everyone there exists a soul. In gaining, you deprive

We are all a drop of the massive universal consciousness, and it might be my "ego" talking but if this is what the masses wanted to exist, then I don't know where you and me belong in all of that. It's disgusting.

Atheists and nihilists get a bad rep but I envy their pursuit of blissful ignorance.

Non-existence is peaceful and desirable, not the eternal repetitious samsara shit. I can't find a reason for why suicide is considered bad outside of personal opinion, morality, and selfishness.

If anything goes in a non-dualist universe, then suicide is just one of them, not the exception. Otherwise you're just admitting that this is a prison realm and that we're not all apart of God.

The woman is surrounded by various fantastical creatures, including a large green dragon with sharp teeth and spikes, a smaller green dragon with a humanoid face, and a group of smaller, green, reptilian creatures. The background is a warm, orange-yellow color, suggesting a desert or a scorched landscape. Same thing with major religions, especially the abrahamic ones, they created a made up thing (sin), to sell a solution (salvation).

The world is run by these circular, made up "problems". Because apparently humans just cannot progress if they don't create these things

The problem isn't the "few" it's the many. It always has been. Everyday I see normal average people lie, cheat, mock, steal and scorn their way through life. They believe all the little things don't matter, that it's fine, it's funny even. Oh that's life! That's what people say.

However, that is why and always has been why the world is fucked. Until the average individual takes accountability for their actions, their flaws, their mistakes - instead of PROJECTING it all on to some "evil few who control everything" - we will never see a peaceful, loving planet.

Who commits the genocides? Who does the killing, the beating, the abusing. Who does the lying, the stealing, the raping, the murdering, the embezzling, the manipulating. The answer is FUCKING EVERYONE

Humans are at a critical point, or perhaps we have even passed it: Evolve or wipe ourselves out. If we don't evolve, we don't deserve to survive because it means this iteration of our species is fundamentally wrong in its collective orientation.

I know I'm doing my part, but all I see around me are sinners and slaves. See you all in hell Wrong. Both of you.

The issue holding humanity back is Scarcity.

Artificial scarcity that has been imposed upon humanity by the Military Intelligence

"Elite" hiding zero point energy.

If humans didn't have to slave away for their own survival and had a baseline of food, water, and energy, then we'd see people not act out of fear and lack.

But then how would the system then get it's slaves? How will out "oh so "great"" elite get their loosh?

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a dark background and a yellow header. The header contains the text "Spiritsless Humans" in bold, capitalized letters. Below the header, there is a large image of a person's head with a blurred background, and the person appears to be in a state of deep meditation or trance. The person's eyes are closed, and the person's head is tilted slightly to the side. The image is accompanied by a paragraph of text that discusses the concept of spirits and humans, with a focus on the differences between the two.

The text is divided into two main sections. The first section is titled "Background" and is a brief explanation of the concept of spirits and humans. It mentions that spirits are often considered to be a part of the human consciousness, and that humans are considered to be the physical embodiment of spirits. The text also discusses the concept of the "missing component" and the idea that spirits are not confined to the physical body.

The second section is titled "Spirits" and is a detailed explanation of the concept of spirits and their relationship to the human body. It discusses the idea that spirits are not confined to the physical body and that they can exist in multiple forms, such as a person's spirit, a spirit of a place, or a spirit of a person's ancestors. The text also mentions that spirits can be seen as a part of the human consciousness and that they can be perceived as a part of the human body.

The text is written in a casual, conversational style, with a mix of both formal and informal language. The text is dense with information, and the paragraphs are separated by commas, which helps to break up the text and make it easier to read. The overall tone of the text is informative and academic, with a focus on the scientific and philosophical aspects of the concept of spirits and humans.

our whole galaxy was slammed into by a dead retrograde galaxy that settled as Sgr A*. Sgr B* (dog star) is the opposite. This planetary system was slammed into. 5 planets fell (now you know why this number is so important and occurs so much). It further slammed into earth (embedded material in it called LLVPs) .. two lobes sit under South America and Africa.. They are different composition and cause pole shifts to occur on a cyclical basis destroying everything. The collision is known as Theia and happened billions of years ago. The moon is theia remnants, saturn has it in it, and mars. Earth is knocked off axis 24*degrees and tilted into saturn. Be careful down here buddy. You dont want to remain. The south of earth is frozen shot. The top is the only way out. Take what I just stated (Very) seriously btw.. Understand what I am saying to you. all of you and yes you can verify what I just said to you is accurate.

Now take a break from being retards on here and try to understand what the stakes are for you being down here and why its essential you get out of here correctly with spiritual alignment. Abrahamic religions are all demiurgic btw and based on a false saturnic enclosure. In the months ahead this year this will start to become real.. Artemis is heading off to the moon around Feb 6th. Elon is banking on a planetary conjunction with the underworld planets in June for his IPO. WW3 looks like it is about to cook off with Iran. Quakes, CMEs, comets (un271)

Maat/Duat cosmic/underworld law is legit. It cannot be circumvented. Abrahamics are in big trouble with Set I. Their plans will never work. If mankind tries circumvention, It will accelerate a pole flip. Set I/Leviathan destroy false thrones and false enclosure attempts. Look back in human history at all those who tried. Spiritually understand what is being said more than anything.

The image is a painting that depicts two figures in a naturalistic setting. The figures are nude and appear to be in a state of transformation, with one figure reaching out to the other. The background is filled with foliage and trees, suggesting a forest or woodland environment. The painting is executed in a realistic style, with attention to detail in the depiction of the figures' forms and the natural elements around them. The color palette is muted, with a focus on the natural tones of the landscape and the figures' skin tones. There are no discernible texts or inscriptions within the image. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Renaissance period, characterized by its attention to realism and the use of naturalistic elements.

The human brain has a spectrum of capable understanding and a spectrum of capable feelings fueled by the mixture of data that concretes into your consciousness.

So, knowing that is a spectrum, there are humans that are capable of those things you listed, but lack the explicit empathy to care about the greater state of being.

They do not think like you, not just because they lack the capability, but for them it is functionally non existent. It doesn't factor into any of their decision trees about who they are, or their experience in reality.

For people like us, those people may as well be NPC's. You are the blessed one, because you can think in this way, you have evolved beyond the restrictions of their problems, because you are capable of realizing that which truly matters.

They are consumed by the day that their "power on Earth" gives them.

Those people do not seize the day, the day seizes them.

The handle is textured with a pattern that appears to be a mix of black and gray, and there are two small holes near the top of the handle. The wood on which the knife is placed has a rough texture and is covered with small, dry leaves and twigs. The background is blurred, suggesting an outdoor setting with scattered leaves and a natural, possibly autumnal, color palette. Satan means adversary. Funny enough, according to the christian lore, if you believe in such a stupid thing, God created Satan. God created everything, even Evil, so said Isaiah in chapter 45 verse 7. So naturally, God being what He is ends up creating its own competition. Like, do you know when you create enemies because of some action you did? Same thing with God and Satan. For some reason God made this another small entity angry enough to the point that this smaller entity started a fucking revolution. It doesn't care if it doesn't have a chance in Hell, it wants to fight God and it hates God and it kind of have a point. It's hard to realize why that is because we are born being feed the God version of the story. People are biased towards God. So very few people even stop to think that there's another side to the story, you know? But the key point here is that God created Satan.

Satan was the first one to scape God's brainwashing or conditioning. Satan was the first one to see God for what God really is, lame and defective. Satan realized what we all should release, that God is limiting us. God is forcing us to share this reality. God hides behind concepts live love and light, but he we are having to be subjects of thins which we don't agree with because we don't have power or authority because God limited us. Satan realized that. Satan realized how God wants worship and praise and etc. A narcissist as we say. A megalomaniacal entity.

Do videogames damage your soul?

When you think about it you are committing simulated acts of murder and all sorts of violence over and over again. A lot of games also involve occult imagery and unironic magical rituals nowadays. Millions of people are addicted right now to little virtual worlds through their screens. But then again this might be proof of a corrupt reality when people would rather live their lives in artificial worlds than be a good goy.

I wouldn't give video games a blanket stamp of being evil or a waste of time as I'm no boomer. However I do think they are more dangerous to engage with, compared to Movies, Books, Music, etc, mainly just because they have a more exploitive dopamine reward system. It's easy for me to put down a book if I need to go do something, and with movies I can see the runtime and decide whether I have the time for it. But with games I find it easy to play until 3am when I know I have work at 8am the next day. I also think that we live in the greatest video game that is much more rewarding to level up in.

The image is a meme featuring a cartoon duck character with a surprised expression, wearing a top hat and a white shirt with red buttons. The duck is seated on a blue car seat with a red seatbelt. The duck's expression is one of confusion or disbelief, and it appears to be looking at a sign that reads "ASK ABOUT ILLUMINATI...?" in red text on a white background. Below the sign, there is a red circle with a red border, and inside the circle is a red question mark.

The image is a digital meme, likely created for the purpose of humor or satire, as indicated by the text and the style of the image. The meme uses a combination of visual elements to convey a message, with the surprised expression of the duck character and the question mark-like text to create a sense of intrigue and curiosity. The use of the Disney movie with Donald Duck as a reference adds a layer of humor, as Donald Duck is a well-known character associated with the Disney brand.

The image is a black and white promotional poster for the film "Black Sunday." At the top of the poster, the text reads "BLACK SUNDAY" in large, bold letters. Below this title, there is a subtitle that reads "IT COULD BE TOMORROW!" in smaller, bold letters. The central focus of the poster is a large, spherical balloon with the word "BOWL" written on it in bold, capital letters. The balloon is depicted in a realistic style, with a slight curvature, and it is positioned in the center of the poster.

Surrounding the balloon, there is a crowd of people, suggesting a public event or gathering. The crowd is densely packed, indicating a significant number of attendees. The people are depicted in a realistic style, with various expressions and postures, suggesting a lively and energetic atmosphere.

The background of the poster is a dark, possibly black, color, which contrasts with the white and black tones of the balloon and the text. The overall style of the poster is reminiscent of vintage or retro design, with a focus on bold typography and a sense of nostalgia. The poster appears to be designed for a film festival or a similar event, given the context of the text and the style of the balloon.

The background is plain white, and there is a text overlay in black that reads "it's not over." The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical cartoon, with the text suggesting a humorous or ironic tone.

The image is a digital graphic with a white background and a blue header that reads "The Fecal Fixation of the Chosen Ones." Below the header, there is a cartoon illustration of a brown, elongated, and smiling cartoon character resembling a humanoid figure with a large, round, brown, and black nose. The character is wearing a red Santa hat and has a pair of white gloves on its hands. The character is holding a yellow star-shaped badge in its right hand.

The main body of the image contains a text block with a blue header that reads "The Jewish Obsession with faces is very disturbing, and very real." Below this, there is a paragraph of text that continues the theme of the Jewish obsession with faces, stating, "It is openly admitted by many Jews."

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a blue box with a white border containing a quote from the author Uriel Heilman. The quote reads, "And if it's scatological, all the better."

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the Jewish obsession with faces and the humor derived from it. The use of a cartoon character and the text within the image are meant to be light-hearted and satirical, likely intended to be humorous to the intended audience.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, specifically a letter or email, with a header that reads "From: SSA". The document is written in English and contains a mix of text and highlighted text. The highlighted text is in yellow and appears to be a response to a previous email or message. The document is dated "August 26, 2019" and is addressed to "Subject: RE: Interview of Purported Epstein Victim". The sender's name is "S.S.A." and the recipient's name is "Michael Moore". The document includes a date and time, "Wed, Aug 26, 2019 17:44:31" and "1:00 PM". The document also includes a note that says "I didn't realize Busy report has OK" and a response to a previous email, "Thanks". The document is formatted with a header, footer, and a main body of text. The main body of text is in a standard font, while the header and footer are in a larger, bold font. The document appears to be a professional communication, possibly related to a case or investigation, given the context and the use of formal language and terminology.

Welcome to the Semen Retention General!

Retention Zone Edition!

>What is Semen Retention?

Semen retention is the practice of completely abstaining from masturbation and ejaculation, often with the intention of preserving and redirecting vital and sexual energy to oneself.

>Why do it?

Reported benefits include: increased vitality, mental clarity, reduced stress, increased motivation, increased energy, improved focus, healthier hair/skin/eyes, deeper meditation, improved AP/Lucid Dreams, deeper voice, improved mood, greatly improved testosterone, improved physical strength and many more.

>Wet Dreams?

They happen because you had a sexual dream and you coomed. Learn to be conscious on your dreams and stop the succubus.

>What causes wet dreams?

The causes are many: Illnesses, telepathic bad actors fucking with your dreams, excess energy build up, watching too much sexually-inducing stuff, lusting during the day, lack of an adequate transmutation activity, eating too late at night, excess nutrients overall, stimulants like maca, ginseng, ginger, excess protein, excess carbs, tight clothes (pajamas) for bedtime, bad sleeping posture (this varies, find the one that suits you best), going to bed with full bladder, exposure to hormonal disruptors via food (pesticides...) or body care products (soap, deodorant etc)...

>In case of urges:

- <https://imgur.com/a/nofap-anecdotal-evidence-g4eGH>
- Don't peek and Hold your breath for as long as you possibly can. The urge usually pass after that. If not, repeat.
- Horse stance or chair pose: Do it while clenching the abdomen and all legs' muscles, raise arms for extra blood flow redirection. Works both for killing erections or urges.
- Any physical activity.
- Testicular breathing (also works for wet dreams). Take a deep breath while flexing your perineal muscles. Hold for a couple seconds then release, as you let the sexual energy/tension levitate through your spine to your brain. Repeat around 7-9 times. You can do this in any position.

On long clean streaks many report benefits that transcend current science like a sort of "magnetism" or higher "vibration/aura" that attracts/appeals to other living beings, a higher perception, a stronger and intimidating "aura/presence", a deeper connection with nature, an attractive BO (people usually report it as "pheromones") and more.

>Advices:

- Mental Purity 1.1: Semen Retention acts as a bio-electromagnetic amplifier. Watch the quality of your thoughts because your inner state will get amplified and manifested. Lust is the Ojas killer. Do not engage with Lust.
- Mental Purity 1.2: Keep a journal as a tool for introspection.
- NEVER watch porn of any kind.
- Remove triggers from your life. Masturbation is a bad habit. Break that bad habit.
- Focus on achieving a goal. An art, a craft, competing, etc.
- Meditate and/or Pray Daily. Try a minimum of 5 minutes to start off.
- Exercise/Gym/Sports/Martial Arts. If it is something social even better.
- Good habits like healthy eating, water fasting, dry fasting, sun exposure and cold showers do seem to speed up the process.
- Sublimation: literally using the energy.
- Transmutation: changing the quality of energy to something different. (Surya Namaskara, 8 brocades, Tibetan rites)
- Avoid stimulant drugs such as caffeine or adderall noreply@srg.com Tue 27 Jan 2026 21:48:24 No.41874336 Report

Keep in mind that the efferent nerves attached to your testes necessarily means that any lustful thought, image, or sound is necessarily a command to your junk to produce sexual fluids and this is the reason why celibacy is first and foremost of the mind. The root of this entire matter is the mind - without conquering the mind, celibacy is a futile effort.

The signals from the brain happen on the subconscious autonomic level.

This is why any lustful thought, image, or sound is necessarily a command to the sexual organs to produce sexual fluids (the more intently you look, the higher amplitude of a signal gets sent: body > afferent nerves > brain > efferent nerves > body)

Therefore "Conversion of sexual energy to something" is necessarily a HORRIBLY inefficient process (Not to confuse with Sexual Transmutation)

Fluids will be reabsorbed, but the energy and materials cost to make it vs how much is "taken back" via reabsorption is SEVERELY unbalanced and super net negative

Sexual fluids are made from the cream of the crop of the body's resources - constantly generating them means that you are constantly draining away the cream of the crop of your resources.

Taoist writings said that the sexual organs will even take primacy over nourishing your other internal organs at some point. (Thus, doing a spiritual practice as a coomer is a surefire way to die faster).

It's always good to remember why /x/ is the most accurate place for this topic: SR is one of the clearest paranormal inducing topics among all discussed on /x/. It's a sacred practice that has been the one of the main focuses in every major religion or spiritual practices. The mystical side of it is what we try to focus on.

SR can be also be seen as a political issue. The porn industry is a tool made by the Jews to deteriorate and corrupt societies. Porn works in ways that program new sets of behaviour in its audience and because of its strong addictive qualities they stay hooked. The most important goal for porn's male audience was and is the release of their semen. As we now know, the disadvantageous consequences of releasing are heavy: a man becomes less of a man, he gets sick and weak, his mind numbed, he will have impotence issues etc. Upto the point his spirit almost dies.

SR is beneficial to make one healthier and stronger, more fit, if you will. So the topic could be discussed on /fit/. Anyone looking for more ways to get fitness gains would benefit hugely from the SR.

Also SR has so many other benefits that it could be discussed in the /adv/ board. These would be topics how it improves one's social life, mental state, makes more time to be more productive etc.

The biggest benefits of SR are mystical in nature and the whole practice is fundamentally very close to the spiritual side of things. All the other topics in /x/ are left far behind and SR actually makes this board of any relevancy. This is also known by the enemy and they make strong efforts to suppress, hijack, twist to end this discussion.

Anon here who was being loosh harvested by reptilians/aliens

I went on no fap for a week and a half and was starving them out. After that I was able to fap a few times without them stealing loosh, but then they started doing it again a couple of days in. It's a literal resource to them, make sure you deprive it from them at all costs. If you're being drained go for at least 2 weeks, hell even a whole month without fapping (no porn too cause they drain your mental as well) and watch how much it makes them seethe having their essence deprived. You're basically a clot in their system, a cow who refuses to produce milk for them. You're that one mob who breaks the entire mob farm and brings everything to a halt. You should obviously go for as long as possible, but my main point is that you need to fight back against these fuckers no matter what.

I know it is definitely possible to fap without them stealing anything, it's very difficult to do though. You basically need to know when and where they're attacking you from and put up a defense against it. They prey on your inability to detect them, and use it as cover to steal from you without you even knowing. They absolutely fucking hate it when they know you're fighting back against them too. They have to dedicate extra resources to chaining you down because you threaten to fuck up the entire operation. It's like you're an animal who's broken out of a zoo, causing mass havoc. Make their lives absolutely miserable, send tormenting visions into their head, show them how you will violently rip and them apart and they will be that afraid of you they'll finally leave you alone. Bonus points for if you actually kill some of them, I'm pretty sure I killed a couple last time I fought them on the astral plane or whatever the fuck they're residing in. Haven't killed any reptilians yet (they're pussies though trust me), but I do vividly remember tearing into the a grey and ripping their head apart while some others were watching.

The image is a split-screen meme featuring two different scenes. On the left side, there is a person standing in a room with a warm, cozy atmosphere. The person is wearing a brown coat and has a fur collar, and they are smiling. The room has a fireplace with a lit fire, and there is a lamp on a table to the right. The text on the left side of the image reads: "If you have a masturbation addiction, you will either beat it or beat it."

On the right side of the image, there is a dramatic scene of a person in a dark room with a large explosion occurring in the foreground. The person is shown in a crouched position, with a shocked expression, and the explosion is bright and intense. The text on the right side of the image reads: "Wong will return next week with more disturbing facts."

The style of the image is humorous and satirical, using a combination of visual and textual elements to convey a message about the consequences of a particular behavior. The split-screen format allows for a clear distinction between the two scenes, emphasizing the contrast between the calm and peaceful setting and the chaotic and disturbing action depicted in the right side of the image.

This. SR is good obviously, but this is where the real magic happens. Once you know how to retain AND defend yourself from them, then you choose where to put the energy (which in this case is towards yourself), and they absolutely fucking hate it. I don't think people can even begin to fathom how angry this shit makes them, the fact that this carefully constructed farm and system they've put in place to harvest you has failed out of sheer autistic retardation, because you simply choose to give the energy to yourself instead. Imagine a cow drinking its own milk, it's basically the astral equivalent of sucking your own dick, I'd be seething too.

The image is a black and white graphic with a humorous tone. At the top, there is a text that reads "Where are you on the bunny scale today?" The text is in a playful, casual font. Below the text, there is a cartoon illustration of a rabbit sitting on its hind legs with its front legs tucked under its body. The rabbit is facing the viewer and appears to be looking up, as if listening to something above it.

A horizontal line extends from the rabbit's head, suggesting a sense of hearing or listening. The rabbit is depicted with a long, flowing tail that extends behind it, adding to the sense of movement. The rabbit's ears are pointed upwards, and its eyes are focused on the viewer, indicating that it is attentively listening.

Below the rabbit, there is a series of numbers from 1 to 10, with the number 10 being the largest and the number 1 being the smallest. The numbers are arranged in a descending order, suggesting that the rabbit is on the lowest scale, which is the smallest.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a cartoon, with a focus on humor and a playful narrative. The use of the rabbit as the central character and the text "Where are you on the bunny scale today?" suggests a light-hearted, humorous tone.

The two figures are standing on a cloud-like surface, which adds a sense of elevation and drama to the scene. The background is plain and white, which puts the focus entirely on the two figures and their interaction. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of traditional or classical art, with a focus on the dramatic and symbolic nature of the scene.

The image is a black and white sketch that features four different male head sketches. Each sketch is drawn in a simplified, cartoon-like style, with a focus on the facial features and expressions. The sketches are arranged in a square grid, with each side containing a different male head.

In the bottom left, the third sketch shows a male with short hair, a neutral expression, and a slight frown. Finally, in the bottom right, the fourth sketch shows a male with short hair, a neutral expression, and a slight smile.

The sketches are drawn with a loose, sketchy quality, and the lines are not very fine, giving the artwork a more cartoonish appearance. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional art styles, such as those found in comic books or graphic novels.

The image is a cover of a graphic novel titled "Merchants of Sin" by Benjamin Garland. The cover art features a stylized illustration of a man with a large grin, wearing a red hat and a black robe, peeking over a computer monitor. The man appears to be a character from a horror or dark fantasy genre, with a sinister expression. The background is a dark red color with splatters of red and black, giving the impression of blood or violence. At the bottom of the image, there is text that reads "Merchants of Sin" in large, bold, white letters. Below this title, the author's name "Benjamin Garland" is presented in smaller white letters. The overall style of the image is dark and moody, with a focus on the central figure and the text, which suggests a horror or dark fantasy theme.

It just feels like I'll never get any opportunity to ask a girl out or find success with one in any way. I also feel detached and distant from the desire to masturbate, more than I ever have in my life (this is my longest streak of no masturbation, one of my longest so far with no orgasm). I feel like that's a good thing, like I'm learning to live without PMO for the first time. But there's this emptiness, this depression, like I'm truly going to miss out on something beautiful in my life when I die a single virgin, and like my life is all for nothing unless I buckle down and work an inhuman amount to accomplish something unrelated to romance. I don't wanna die without accomplishing something. But I just don't know if it's possible.

I believe it all depends on willpower and acknowledgment of a higher power (in my case it's the Trinity). If I'm not mistaken this is the same case with other addictions. Maybe you need a better perspective which one of the anecdotes in the sticky can help you with (>>41874330):

>In case of urges:

- <https://imgur.com/a/nofap-anecdotal-evidence-g4eGH>

- Don't peek and Hold your breath for as long as you possibly can. The urge usually pass after that. If not, repeat.

- Horse stance or chair pose: Do it while clenching the abdomen and all legs' muscles, raise arms for extra blood flow redirection. Works both for killing erections or urges.

- Any physical activity.

- Testicular breathing (also works for wet dreams). Take a deep breath while flexing your perineal muscles. Hold for a couple seconds then release, as you let the sexual energy/tension levitate through your spine to your brain. Repeat around 7-9 times. You can do this in any position.

With retention your baseline dopamine increases. If you have schizophrenia I don't know if that is good or bad, I'd guess it's good, but your overall appearance is now worse. You need to rest more, your health needs to improve. Drop caffeine if you can, it is the bitter water mentioned in the Revelations, it worsens health long term, it's a bitter drug. It tricks the body to think it's not tired. If you don't sleep enough you die. Lay down in bed in relax more.

recently i just feel nothing, whatever i'm doing, productive or not. even writing this post i have to almost force myself to do because i know that i won't feel even the smallest hit of dopamine which i would normally get when expressing myself. sometimes i would stare at a wall or my desktop wallpaper for hours on end doing absolutely nothing, because doing stuff would require energy and since i'm not getting a chemical reward either way i would rather just simply not do anything. i hope it's not early onset schizophrenia or something, that would be pretty bad.

alright this is insane. you guys were discussing female attraction thru cultivation of sex energy (mantak chia and stuff)

i've been doing that for 8 days

i got a random DM on r_ddit (i only use it to lurk band forums), I never even posted anything it said "add my snap :) 23F"

i thought it was a scam ofc turns out it was a real random girl that was bored, white girl 7/10 facially, 80lbs, 5ft tall, who wanted to show me her body for some reason i have no idea

she showed me my collection of dildos, called me and started masturbating live on camera showing her face and everything, playing with her tits since the beginning of this crazy interaction i tried looking for any signs she was fake, but she was there full face open, live camera, calling me masturbating to me.

she didn't mind that I didn't want to show her my face (another point against her being a scammer) she just wanted to MAKE SURE that I ejaculated

i told her I didn't want to cum, she got more and more crazy, then I lied and said I came just to end the interaction keep in mind this was a random DM, she never even saw my face, I have no profile picture and never even post on reddit

this is insane

also a day later I was on ome.tv and a random filipina girl randomly started masturbating and showed me her pussy then there were 2 belgian girls, 10s into the conversation she goes "my friend wants to fuck you" and they both start giggling you can say this is not semen retention/energy, I DO NOT CARE.

I AM NOT HANDSOME. IF I WAS, THIS WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN THE FIRST TIME IT HAPPENED. BUT IT IS THE 1ST TIME EVER IN MY 27 YEARS OF LIFE.

This. They aren't succubus, but they might as well be at this point. The only reason they're ""attracted"" to you after retaining is cause they see a bunch of energy they can steal from you (they've been taught to do that). They're opportunistic, like a predator hunting its prey. They wait for just the right moment, then BAM, they pounce. What you need to do in this scenario is actually turn these women down, and not engage with them. They're literally just a parasite who's trying to drain you. The only time you should ever give your saved up energy to a woman is if she's "the one" (good luck finding that these days)

Bhagavad Gītā 2.59 gives one of the sharpest insights into desire:

“Objects withdraw from the abstinent person, but the taste remains. Even that taste disappears when one sees the Supreme.”

This means restraint removes the stimulus, not the imprint. A person can stop porn, scrolling, or compulsive habits, yet craving persists as a residue — what the Gītā calls rasa, the lingering “taste” of pleasure. The Beast has already tasted.

Modern neuroscience agrees: reward circuits respond not only to pleasure but to its prediction. Even without the object, the nervous system remembers. Fantasy replays, anticipation spikes, the loop remains. That is why suppression alone rarely liberates; it cages desire but doesn't transform it.

The Gītā's solution is deeper: freedom comes not by starvation, but by replacement through higher perception. "Seeing the Supreme" means encountering a reality more substantial than impulse — embodied presence, meaning, wholeness. Then the old stimulus loses its glamour.

Porn is "Beast-food" because it offers raw vitality without containment: infinite imagery, dissociated eros, no relational grounding. Abstinence removes the screen, but the taste remains unless something deeper fills the space.

True transformation is not just saying no. It is when the object no longer tastes like anything at all.

Had a wet dream. Managed to stop it, but coomed a little. So depressing after a 100+ streak. And, like, it wasn't even nice FFS. No orgasm, just an angry rapey half remembered dream.

Interesting though is that earlier when I have retained for a while and masturbated my seed has had a yellowish tint to it. But this was the first time I ever broke a long streak without cooming in a yoni, and the droplets of seed was pearly white! Very good looking, thick and with a nice smell.

What a fucking waste though. I find it hard to believe that anyone on a streak larger than a quarter of a year breaks their streak by masturbation. They must be shills and troons!

Is anyone else here actually fine with being a chud? As an anti-social autistic i actually don't think it's that bad. I always hated social interactions and how people pretend to be what they're not just to impress. Seeing normie relationships, they're very transactional and mostly just for sex. The best relationships are those where you actually are in the same circle and spend a lot of time together. Even a chad if he has to go on tinder at 20+yo it's over, and it's not the same relationship as a boy and a girl that grew up in a village and eventually got together.

On the other hand if you're a chud it's actually easier to retain, less financial stress and more time to make it etc. Is being a chud the most optimal way to become a wizard?

Bro here's what I learned. Edging will lead to either 2 things: 1) You don't jizz or 2) You jizz. As a man, your end goal should be more important than the means. So whatever your end goal is you know what you should do

I'll be honest bro. The likely reason why they flake is because inherently women are selfish and they don't think you have much to offer them. They don't care about connection and all that shit as much as you do. And men don't care about making friends with other men as much because they either don't see that they can't get anything from you, or that you're competition for mate selection. Hence "male loneliness epidemic" - men brushing off friendship with men (due to competition) and only seeking relationships with women - creating a repeating loop of chasing in order to quell loneliness.

>Lmao no! Chad does meet women all the time. He doesn't really need tinder

Nah, Chad is lonely at the end of the day. Incels and Chads have the same views on women

I really don't see the use of edging, unless this is part of rehabilitation to still get your dopamine (which I don't think is good either). The only time I touch my dick is to hold it while peeing and wash in shower. If you are outside you wouldn't do this either.

"Sir, what are you doing?!"

"I'm just edging."

"Oh my bad, don't mind me, proceed."

You know what you're doing. Just look in the mirror and stop coping. This is equivalent to an alcoholic putting the alcohol in their mouth and then spitting it out.

"It's just for the taste!"

Uhuh, sure buddy. You're totally not coping.

help me, i am touch starved as shit, 11 years no relationship, no sex. Had a couple of chances but because of SR i didnt, and i now regret it so much. Mainly because if life is materialistic i should have done it, if not and it bears fruits then cool, but thats the anxiety of the uncertainty of life and spirituality.

please someone guide me, i want real love but this world degenerated to such a crazy extend, financially and spiritually. It seems like i will never get that love, and my flesh just hungers for desires because the love and wholeness is just void currently.

Also i had 1k last year, i had 500k unrealized and only realized 30k, topped 55k, and i am heavily invested in chainlink, and lost alot because i married the token. So i think this mounts to my feelings and desires aswell, because the world just seems doomed.

i feel like i lost so much to sticking to the path, that if i keep rejecting it when it comes, i will have the biggest regret later on.

someone please give me some hope or copium or guidance.

Never said they do. You're projecting now (implying you weren't before too). Love is when 2 souls can intertwine and mingle with each other, it is built on trust, understanding, sacrifice, loyalty, etc. This means you won't "love" everyone, because you'll never connect with everyone in this way. But to say that you never will is utterly idiotic, it's such a doomer blackpill outlook, you stink up the entire thread bringing that garbage here.

You wanna horde all your energy to yourself? Be my guest, I couldn't care less. But trying to drag down other Anons by suggesting they do the same is cringe as fuck. You're basically teaching them to disassociate with the world around them and never interact with anyone in any meaningful way, even if it could benefit them or someone else, ie you're basically telling them to stop sending positive energy into the world and actively make it a worse place. Cringe anti social behaviour, this isn't some tactical hermit lifestyle, it's just deluding yourself.

The image displays a series of seven moon phases against a dark, night sky. The moon phases are arranged in a curved arch, starting from the left with the first phase, which is a full moon, and ending with the seventh phase, which is a crescent moon. The moon phases are depicted in a realistic style, with each phase showing the moon's different stages of illumination. The background is a deep black, which contrasts with the white of the moon phases, making them stand out prominently. There is a faint outline of a cross in the bottom left corner of the image, which is not clearly visible due to the resolution. The image is a photograph, and the style is realistic with a focus on the natural beauty of the moon phases.

The image is a cartoon-style illustration featuring a male character standing in front of a blackboard. The character has a bald head, a mustache, and is wearing glasses. He is dressed in a green shirt, blue pants, and a tie. His right hand is raised, pointing towards the blackboard, which has a yellow sign with the word "HOMEWORK" written on it. Below the blackboard, there is a sign that reads "ASSIGNMENTS." The background is a simple, flat color, and the character is positioned in the foreground, with the blackboard and sign in the background. The style of the image is reminiscent of a cartoon or comic strip, with a focus on the character and the text on the blackboard.

Well noticed how I used the term handsome instead of attractive. Handsome means good looking in a masculine way - someone with strong, striking features. Handsome would be someone like David Gandy. And personality goes hand in hand with looks in a woman's eyes. Can you imagine someone with the rugged face of Gandy to be weak and simp for a woman? That would completely ruin the fantasy in her eyes

The image is a digital illustration with a simple, cartoon-like style. It features a character that appears to be a cat with a blue and white color scheme. The cat is depicted with a red, dripping nose and mouth, suggesting it has been bleeding. The character is sitting on a red, splattered surface, which could be interpreted as blood. Above the cat, there is a text that reads "ill bounce back, always do," which is a phrase commonly used in internet culture to describe resilience or a positive attitude. The text is in a bold, black font and is positioned above the cat, which is located in the lower half of the image. The overall tone of the image is humorous and light-hearted, with a playful and irreverent undertone.

Yeah you need to stop shitting up the thread my guy. These Anons are already struggling in this degenerate world of roasties dragging them down, they don't need your edgelord autismo takes about how "love is an illusion" and whatever other bs you're trying to project onto them because you've had bad experiences with women in the past. I've had bad experiences too, doesn't mean I'm gonna try discourage other people, in fact I'm gonna do the opposite and tell them to keep trying despite all the odds stacked against them. You're just a depressive anchor, you're definitely the type of person who has no friends irl because you're just that miserable to be around. It's probably why you're in here trying to ruin other people's relationships out of spite.

Nah, seeking love / relationships is desperate energy and means you're incomplete on your own. Think about what it means to go on a dating app looking for something. Like putting in your bio: "I like these movies, I like this, these, and that. I do this on the weekends." lame shit like that. Basically giving off that 'please like me' energy. That's not even the thing I was talking about, you're bringing up something completely different now. Still doesn't change the fact that you're violently autistic for thinking love isn't real or something that you shouldn't look for. At no point either did I say you should put love for another person above yourself, you should ALWAYS come first, because not only is that what you're supposed to do, but when you do find someone to love you can be the best version of yourself possible for them. It's literally a net positive for everyone if you put love for yourself before them.

If you get lucky and you're too much of a self loather, you can find someone who loves you so much that they remind you of how good of a soul you are, and they can HELP you love yourself if you're struggling to do it yourself. Then you could do the same for them maybe, you sacrifice parts of yourself for each other. That's why I said one of the main things love is built upon is sacrifice, it's like a sacred bond of sharing that you do with each other. Not that you'd know, because by the sounds of it you've never had a bond like this before.

Bro this sounds like codependency based on weakness. And I'm not judging, that's fine. It can be a beautiful thing and many people do get in this kind of relationship. You mean that's the energy you give off, brotha. You're trying to project this onto everyone, that's you who's doing that. When you look for love you're not meant to be desperate, you're meant to show someone that you're interested in them, then if they are interested in you back then you come together. This is something that shouldn't be forced and should happen naturally, the problem is a lot of people force themselves to be together these days because they are in fact desperate. You are half right, in that a lot of people that are looking for a "relationship" are giving off this desperate energy, it's because they don't fully comprehend what they're even trying to look for in the first place, or go about doing it in the wrong way. You should be helping these people who are struggling, not telling them to give up. Tell them to avoid roasties and go for someone who cares about them back, etc. That way they can actually find that special connection they're looking for. And looking is the keyword here, they should be looking, not begging and groveling.

But the sad truth that most people must face these days is more often than not that's not going to happen. Society has turned into a psychological hellscape of degeneracy and whoredom, and looking for this "special connection" is like finding a needle in a haystack. Some people are just going to have to come to terms with not finding love in this lifetime, but at the same time it doesn't mean they should just give up completely cause you said so.

I still said you should put yourself first, fix yourself first etc, if someone comes along and helps you with something you were struggling with it's just a bonus. Idk why people like you seem to fall into this rotted mindset of thinking all relationships are somehow codependent, like you're not allowed to have a friend without it being some "weakness" where you're relying on them or some bs. Such a shitty outlook on life, just sounds like unresolved trauma from being fucked over in the past by people.

I don't chase women, nor do I encourage anyone else to do so. If you show interest in a woman and she shows none back you shouldn't go out of your way to force anything. A whore who expects a man to chase her around is just a parasite who's trying to drain you, the "you must chase me" mentality is literally psychological manipulation that is tricking you into submitting to them, basically turning you into a bitch. When I say "seek" love, I'm not talking about chasing, I'm simply talking about expressing your interest for whenever the time arises, and your path meets with theirs. It is not supposed to be one sided, you're supposed to be met with love from the other side too. I would say your inability to distinguish this nuance is concerning, but it is in line with all of your autistic, incel, ego inflated behaviour so it's not really surprising. I mean you can't even pick up on simple sarcasm for goodness sake, you probably thought you were actually God when I called you God too.

In front of him is a wooden desk with a book and a quill pen on it. The desk is positioned against a wall with a dark, textured background that includes a large, ornate candelabra with a red and gold design. The painting style is realistic with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, creating a sense of depth and realism.

The artist has used a palette dominated by dark colors, including deep reds, blacks, and grays, which contribute to the overall moodiness of the scene. The use of these colors and the composition of the painting suggest a narrative or symbolic representation of the man's thoughts or actions.

Hi guys, I'm the anon from a few threads back. I was that was talking about the lack of female attraction and how I craved their presence. I'm on day 55 right now and hadn't had a wet dream since last time I was here. I wanted to talk about my experience.

Confidence

This is a big one, I never had the confidence to talk to strangers or even the random girls around me, yesterday I walked up to 2 girls and literally tried evangelising them, I can say my confidence is through the roof.

Looks:

I was already eating pretty clean so I haven't seen much hange, if anything it might have slightly went down since the last time because I have started eating rice again for a bulk.

Energy

Increased for sure. I crave the gym a lot of the days now. + talking to strangers gives you a high which gives you a lot of energy lol.

Attraction

I didn't get any magical attraction. For some reason I attract insecure fat brown kids in the gym lol. They come to me and say I lift too hard/heavy and its kinda nice. I might have had a few looks from females but I might just be schizo so I can't say anything about that. Maybe I need to keep doing SR to see real benefits.

Social Respect

I still get disrespected by my peers in collage. Less for sure but still happens. This might simply be because of my insecure past but it is what it is I don't really care.

And I still have good days and bad days as it comes with being a human. Days I slip up, days I skip the gym etc.

I've also recently fell off from dopamine detoxing and I use my phone a lot so thats also something I want to fix.

Any advice anons?

The trick is to start becoming attracted to personality instead of the body. Once you start doing that, whenever you see some "beautiful woman" you'll subconsciously start thinking about her personality and how she'd act, then you realise she's just a shallow whore who's basically a walking fleshlight designed to milk you, then become utterly repulsed/disgusted by it. From there on, any time you see any sort of porn or tits or whatever your reaction will start turning you off instead of on.

For example, when you see the model on the bus think about what she'd actually be like in person. You'd probably think "well she's probably slutty and 2 dimensional, probably knows she can trick desperate men into giving her money" then you wouldn't want to fuck her as a result, thus turning you off. Unknowingly you'll start associating degeneracy with shitty personalities too, tap into your empathy as much as possible and think about what it is like from their perspective, and how they basically want you to treat them like a piece of meat and degrade them, it will be an even bigger turn off. If that turns you on though, then you have another problem you need to fix first.

Yes, but more often than not they're whores. If not a whore, they're probably a psycho or a manipulator. If you want to stop being attracted via your basic instincts the only way to is to automatically assume this. Just leave a little room left instead of going full blown incel, so when you do end up talking to a girl always have in the back of your mind "maybe this one isn't a whore" but whenever you see them on a billboard just assume they're a whore so you don't get a boner from it. That would unironically be the aliens/reptoids/demons attacking you, always happens to me around the 1 week mark. Once you start harboring too much energy you start drawing more attention to yourself and these entities want a piece of it, it's like they're playing minecraft and previously you were gold/lapis that they didn't give a fuck about, but now you're a diamond they want to get at all costs. This entire prison we're living in right now is a loosh farm, it never used to be, but now it is. Slowly over time they've built up this system to be as efficient as possible, and they're basically milking every single human on the planet dry with the utmost efficiency, which is why when you stop giving energy to their system you start radiating energy so brightly they can't help but notice. Imagine it from their perspective, they're basically living on the same boring coomer energy that's barely sustaining them, then all of a sudden they see your energy that is glowing for like 100x the amount. It'd be like going from eating oatmeal to chocolate cake. Now imagine a world where several billion (probably more) of these parasites are living off oatmeal, the few people who are chocolate cake are going to be in high demand, which is why as soon as you become a chocolate cake you get attacked (around the 1 week mark for me).

I know it's definitely possible to protect yourself from these cunts though, I'm going to unironically start killing them once I learn how to. I think I've already killed a few actually, I vividly remember ripping one to shreds in my head once while the rest of their group ran away in fear.

Well, I think the "volcels" have just spiritually graduated to a point where having a woman is optional. And I don't mean coping volcels, but genuine volcels who don't need to outsource their love or happiness to another person. I'm not a volcel myself, I still get with women on occasion but they aren't that important to me. "Maybe you just haven't met the right one yet." Nah I am the prize nigga. But think of the whole sexual food chain:

1) Chad - Dude is captain on his football team and he gets a lot of female attention. But he's also seen the same women he was interested also get with the kicker, the linebacker, the runningback, tight end (or even the whole team in one night). So he gets the game - it is what it is. Let him focus on football and bang sloots on the side. Maybe have one super fine gf that doesn't really care about him but for attention and social status reasons.

2) The volcel - He is the kicker on the team but refuses to take part of any of the thottery that some of the team partakes in - let him just focus on football and be who he needs to be first

3) The femcel - dreams of holding hands with the Chad on the football team and treating her right. Dreams about her friends seeing her hold hands with Chad in public and all of them giving her a boost in instant social status

The normie - Simp guy who kisses ass. Gets into relationships with them sometimes but gets treated like shit and disrespected occasionally to keep her around. Susceptible to her manipulation and games and pretty much does whatever she wants to keep the regular sex and cuddles

The incel - Goes without saying

Ironically, Chad, volcel, and incel share the same views on women. It is the normie who is delusional

The reason why the incel knows what goes on is that women simply do not care about the incel. They will have no qualms about hooking up with a random guy in front of them, and even teasing the incel: "You wish you were grabbing this ass don't you bitch."

And the incel sees this same girl with a tons of different men on different nights.

Whereas the same girl will curate an entire good girl persona in front of the normie. "lol anon I've only been with 2 guys. they were my bfs"

A month is a monolith for most people, but everyone can hold back for a day. You can still do it tomorrow, but not today.

Also, something that helps is setting milestones with rewards. If I go 5 days, I can buy myself X or go eat at (your favorite spot). Make a few of those.

That's what gets me into long streaks.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, specifically a page from a book or article. The page is titled "Pornography and Political Control" by E. Michael Jones, and it was published on December 15, 2015. The document is a review of a book or article titled "Samson and Delilah" by St. Augustine. The text is in English and is written in a formal, academic style.

The main content of the text is a discussion about the use of pornography in political contexts. The author, E. Michael Jones, mentions that Israeli military forces took over Palestinian TV stations when they were broadcasting pornography over the airwaves. The text also references the Israeli government's decision to outlaw pornography, stating that it was a simple decision. The author argues that the Israeli government's decision to outlaw pornography is a form of censorship, and it is a weapon in the arsenal of political control.

The text also discusses the issue of freedom of speech and the issue of pornography being linked to freedom of speech. The author mentions that the issue of pornography is intrinsically linked to the issue of freedom of speech, and that the Israeli government's decision to outlaw pornography is a form of censorship. The author also mentions that the best symbol of the military use of pornography is Samson and Delilah, and that the Israeli government's decision to outlaw pornography is a form of censorship.

The text is in a larger font size compared to the surrounding text, which is a common formatting style to emphasize important points or to draw attention to them. The text is in a standard font size, and the page number "4" is visible at the bottom of the page.

The overall style of the image is informational and academic, typical of a review or academic article.

The farmer responds, "No, he went with Mom and Dad." The boy then asks, "The farmer stood there for a few minutes, shifting from one foot to the other, mumbling to himself when the young boy says, "I know where all the tools are. If you want to borrow one, or I can give Dad a message." The farmer responds, "Well," and the boy says, "Dad about your brother, Howard getting my pregnant." The farmer says, "The boy said, 'You'll have to talk to my Dad, then says, 'You'll have to know he charges $500 for the bulls and $1.50 for the pigs, but I have no idea how much he charges for Howard.'" The conversation continues with the farmer discussing the charges for Howard and the boy asking about the cost of the bulls and pigs.

The image is a split-screen graphic with two distinct sections. On the left side, there is a painting depicting a fantastical scene with a large, muscular creature with a humanoid head and tentacles, holding a shield and a sword. The creature is surrounded by a forest with trees and foliage. The sky is filled with clouds and there is a sense of movement, as if the creature is in motion.

On the right side, there is a text overlay that reads "Reatainer's path" in a stylized font, with the word "path" in a larger, bold font. Below this, there is a smaller text that says "you've gotten the dopamine boost" in a smaller, regular font. The background of this section is a red and orange gradient, with a circular shape that resembles a portal or a gateway.

Acktshually, "Celibate" means voluntarily abstaining from sex. "Incel" is contradictory, and "volcel" is redundant.

From what I gathered reading over some posts on an incel forum, they are essentially just blackpilled/butthurt that the dating market is more unfair today than it was in the past(or appears to be so to them), and that they didn't roll good numbers on this lottery unlike the chads. ~Day 77

Every day brings a new emotional state. One day, it's utter bleakness and depression, the next it's contentment with the world, the next it's violent anger at women, the next it's impassioned discipline to accomplish my goals.

The primary thing getting me through is sheer curiosity as to where I've ended up as a person in a year or more.

The image is a screenshot from a video, likely from a presentation or lecture, as indicated by the text "E-Stop Porn Addiction (Never Relapse Again)" and "E-Stop Porn Addiction (Never Relapse Again)" written on the screen. The man in the image is wearing a dark blue shirt and appears to be speaking or presenting. He is holding a remote control in his right hand, and his left hand is gesturing with his index finger, possibly emphasizing a point.

The background of the image features a whiteboard with various diagrams and text. The text on the whiteboard includes "PENALTY," "PENALTY," "PENALTY," and "PENALTY," which are likely part of a larger set of instructions or strategies. The whiteboard also has a diagram that resembles a pie chart with a red circle and a black line, which could represent a concept or a visual representation of a process or strategy. The overall style of the image is educational and instructional, with a focus on providing guidance or advice on a specific topic. The man's attire and the presentation style suggest that he is likely a professional or an expert in the field of addiction or mental health. The presence of the video player at the bottom of the image indicates that the content is likely to be part of a larger video series or a series of lectures.

>Celibacy is a neutral term

Literally every dictionary and website discussing the term disagrees with you. Do yourself a favour next time and do the bare minimum of research to check your assumptions before you embarrass yourself again.

>irrelevant incel rantings

I agree with a fair deal of what incels have to say about the state of women, but they seem to completely be oblivious to the state of men, especially themselves. They exhibit a typical pattern of finding faults only with things outside of themselves. They lament the entitlement of women expecting to be treated like fairy tale princesses, yet at the same time they hypocritically and without noticing the irony lament their unacknowledged entitlement at not being fairy tale princes.

It's one thing to accept reality for what it is, it is another thing to sit in a corner bitching and moaning at the internet about it. They are not involuntarily celibate because they aren't being forced to choose not to have sexual relations, they just don't like the game and where they stand in it so invent terms that allows them to play the victim. This mindset lies at the very core of their miserable condition. They aren't involuntary celibates, they are just the losers.

As someone who tries to practice celibacy, I want absolutely zero association with these people and wish they wouldn't use the term celibate, involuntary or voluntary, to describe themselves because nothing about them is involuntary or celibate.

If they were truly celibate they wouldn't bother bitching and moaning about women or not getting sex to begin with.

You think that is an argument, but it is not an argument unless you can provide proof for it. You are claiming that it is generally understood as such, but why is then that when I search for "celibacy" do I have to scroll through several results, all of which contradict the idea that celibacy is neutral, before I find one that describes it in terms of voluntary and involuntary, and why is that result only referencing it within the context of incel terminology?

You would think sources like britannica, wikipedia, major dictionaries and other popular media/blog sources would mention the distinction between "voluntary" and "involuntary" celibacy, but none of them do.

No, it is not "generally understood to include both voluntary (chosen) and involuntary (forced by circumstance) forms". You made that up because you are either a narcissistic idiot looking to argue for the sake of being right to stroke your ego or a shill looking to disrupt and derail this thread away from the actual discussion of Semen Retention and Celibacy by injecting incel negativity into the discourse. /SRG/ is not about hating on women, rejecting them, demonizing them, or moaning about the state of modern society from an incel perspective. It is about self-realization and self-mastery, taking control of your destiny and freeing yourself from forces that are detrimental and drain your essence and potential.

Go take your infantile whiny arguments somewhere else, no one here cares for it or wants it.

You can see the two paths coming together.

The girl is a very highly sexually charged woman, who actively cultivates her sexual energy with breathing, tantra, hypnosis and stuff. Even her voice is extremely sexually magnetic

The man is a full celibate who transmutes his energy in a "clean" way, he claims he doesn't even think about sex at all anymore.

She even challenges him a little bit on that, saying maybe there's a central more balanced way of approaching this.

The statue is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one arm raised and the other resting on the pedestal. The man's face is not visible, and the statue is set against a backdrop of a classical architectural style, with columns and arches.

In the lower right corner of the image, there is a text overlay that reads: "HELL IS TO MEET THE PERSON YOU COULD HAVE BEEN AT DEATH AND TO REALISE YOU'RE NOT EVEN HIS SHADOW." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in black, contrasting with the white background of the image.

This is just my opinion, more speculation as I only have my own experience and intuition to draw from, but that technique in Protocol 1 is good for transmuting or dissipating sexual energy away from being focused on your sexual organs to be spread out over the rest of the body, which hopefully means that motivational energy can be utilized for other activities or goals you might have. The urge will keep returning, and at times it will return with a vengeance. But the more battles you win, the weaker it will get.

The main difference is that you don't orgasm/ejaculate and don't watch porn/superstimuli. With that said, I don't know if i would recommend Protocol 2, but that depends on your goals. For me Protocol 2 is both dangerous as you are playing with the fire of temptation, and the purpose is to cultivate magnetism, which isn't really my goal with SR. Although I don't want to discount it outright, I believe it does have some place or merit in certain circumstances, but I'm not keen at the moment to experiment with those to find out and see for myself.

They are stimulants, strengthen your active resistance if that is how your energy pathways are set. But you want passive resistance to PMO, and that is how alcohol helps. I drank only a little yesterday and I feel relaxed and clear minded until now, 1 PM the next day. You want to drink than relax your genital region. Don't let tension build up otherwise you will feel the urge to coom.

Caffeine is a problem because chronic consumption ages you, fucks with your memory, increases inflammation etc it's a work slave drug.

Nicotine stimulates acetylcholine receptors, which then trigger dopamine neurons to counterbalance the stimulation. Nicotine simulates physical activity without the action. It's probably good long term in moderation so that receptors aren't too desensitized, but I don't know, certainly not from smoking or vaping.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation. The conversation appears to be between two individuals, as indicated by the presence of a "Deleted" label at the top left corner. The conversation is displayed in a text-based format, with the sender's name and the recipient's name visible at the top.

The conversation is centered around a discussion about a dictionary entry, specifically the term "celi-ba-cy." The sender is expressing surprise and admiration for the term, while the recipient seems to be responding with a statement that is not fully visible. The conversation seems to be a casual and light-hearted exchange, with the sender using a mix of exclamation marks and ellipses to emphasize their reaction.

The text is in a language that appears to be English, and the style of the conversation suggests a friendly and informal tone. The conversation is not long, and the text is not dense, which indicates that the conversation is likely a brief exchange between two individuals.

The image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the text itself. The focus is solely on the conversation between the sender and the recipient, and there are no visual elements or additional information present in the image.

So basically you're proving yourself to be ignorant simply by even using the word incel - which serves as a contradiction. I do agree though, the word celebrity shouldn't be touched or perverted, and neither should the word 'incel' be used. Back in the day people just called people who didn't have sex 'virgins.'

The image is a framed portrait of a man with a mustache, set against a dark background. The man appears to be wearing a white shirt with a collar. The portrait is framed in a black border and has a white matting. The portrait is stylized with a textured, painterly appearance, giving it a modern, artistic feel.

Overlaying the portrait is a quote in white text that reads, "NEVER ARGUE WITH STUPID PEOPLE. THEY WILL DRAG YOU DOWN TO THEIR LEVEL AND BEAT YOU WITH EXPERIENCE." The quote is attributed to Mark Twain, as indicated by the signature at the bottom of the quote. The text is centered within the frame, and the quote is the only text present on the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a modern, digital art piece, with a focus on the quote as the central message.

Involuntary celebrity: In a literal sense, this just means someone is not having sex, even if they want to. By the dictionary definition, they're celibate in practice, though not by choice. So just using that dichotomy of incel vs volcel makes a distinction by implying that there is a dual nature to the word 'celibate.' And you typed that all up. Great, thanks.

The image is a cartoon-style illustration with a simple, flat color palette. At the top, there is a speech bubble containing the text "Tell me you love me. And make it sincere." The speech bubble is in a lighter shade of blue, contrasting with the darker blue of the sky in the background.

In the center of the image, there is a cartoon depiction of a person hanging upside down from a rope. The person is wearing a green shirt and has a surprised expression on their face. The rope is taut, suggesting the person is in a precarious position.

Below the speech bubble, there is a depiction of a trash can with the word "TRASH" written on it. The trash can is purple with a yellow flame inside, which is lit, indicating that the trash can is on fire.

The bottom of the image shows a portion of a person's face, with a beard and a mustache, and a part of a white shirt. The person appears to be looking at the trash can with a concerned or alarmed expression.

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the absurdity of the situation. The use of a speech bubble to convey a message and the inclusion of a fire in the trash can are visual elements that contribute to the comedic effect.

Christ almighty... it's not demons attacking your dreams. If you were jerking off regularly and suddenly stop, your mind is still expecting you to masturbate at that regular rate. It's literally just the conditioned dopamine cycle.

Now take that conditioning and add the subconscious of sleep. It's going to result in erotic dreams. This too will fade as you recondition your dopamine cycles away from masturbation and porn via abstinence. You simply move on from the wet dreams, paying it no real thought because it's not important, and continue with your semen retention journey.

The image is a black and white line drawing. It depicts a figure with a bald head, wearing a long-sleeved shirt. The figure's face is obscured by a large, protruding, bulbous nose. The figure's hands are clasped together in front of them, and the fingers are spread apart. The drawing is simple and lacks detail, focusing on the figure's facial features and the way the hands are positioned. There are no texts or additional elements in the image.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles Pepe the Frog, a popular internet meme character. Pepe is depicted in a relaxed pose, sitting on a swing with his arms outstretched. He has a cheerful expression, with his eyes wide open and a broad smile. Pepe is wearing a blue shirt and brown shorts, and his legs are crossed at the ankles. The swing is suspended from a tree branch, and the background shows a serene landscape with a house and trees. The sky is clear, suggesting a bright day. The style of the image is cartoonish and whimsical, with a focus on the character's joyful demeanor. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a digital illustration featuring two cartoon characters against a backdrop of a blue sky with scattered white clouds. The character on the left is a large, green frog with a wide grin, wearing a blue shirt and holding a small object in its hand. The character on the right is a smaller, green frog with a similar expression, also wearing a blue shirt. The frog on the right is holding a yellow butterfly in its hand. Both characters have large, expressive eyes and are wearing sunglasses. The style of the image is cartoonish and vibrant, with a focus on the characters' expressions and the playful interaction between them.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that appears to be a frog. The frog is wearing a red Santa hat and a checkered scarf, and it has large, round eyes. The character is holding a glass of what seems to be a beverage, possibly a hot beverage, as indicated by the steam rising from it. The glass is partially filled with a yellowish liquid. The frog is standing in front of a window with a snowy view outside, and there are string lights hanging from the ceiling, giving the room a warm and cozy ambiance. To the right of the frog, there is a piece of paper with handwritten text on it. The text is not fully legible due to the angle and distance, but it appears to be a list or a list of items. The room has a rustic, cozy feel, with a bed visible in the background and a wall decorated with various posters and photographs. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a holiday-themed illustration, possibly for a Christmas or winter-themed story or game.

This. The sad part is though people will see this then begin to think all women are like this, because of some "natural order" of the universe bullshit, like women are supposed to be parasites by default. They are almost certainly not, but I can see why people come to the conclusion of "all women are whores" when the vast majority of them behave like this. There are nurturing females who are actually supportive and don't just drain energy, some of them may even give energy to you. The difficulty is finding these women in a world full of roasties and onlyfans whores whose only life goal is to profit off their holes/body (basically impossible lmao). The best you can do is stay vigilant, protect yourself from the leeches at all costs, then hope your magnetism will naturally draw one of these towards you. Again, it's hard because at the same time you'll also be drawing the leeches closer and they larp as one of them to lower your guard. The wisdom lies in the ability to distinguish these leeches from the real ones, you need to be able to tell the difference.

Full moon is peak of horny levels, from a scientific or evolutionary perspective it is probably because many generations of human and our preceding primate ancestors had more success in finding / selecting mates under the light of a full moon - humans rely more on sight than smell. There are other species which have their mating cycle strictly tied to the lunar cycle.

>selecting mates under the light of a full moon

Wouldn't there also be a literal pull you feel from the moon too that probably signals your body to start mating? A very subtle pull, but a pull none the less, one that your body has associated with this cycle as well. It would explain why you feel more horny even when you don't look directly at the moon. I mean it has enough impact to literally cause the ocean levels to fall and rise

God doesn't care if you love him. He doesn't give a rat's ass. But he does care that you follow his rules just so you can live a better life for you, and this pleases him because you act more in harmony with everything else. It's just energetic physics. God doesn't punish you for breaking the rules for the sake of following orders, but because there's a secret order to everything. Look at our solar system. If one planet goes off course, everything acts out of alignment (aka your life goes to shit). But the sun? It'll be there, still burning brightly until the planet starts acting right [33 / 6]The image is a digital graphic with a blue and white color scheme. At the top, there is a large text that reads, "You're not going to wake anybody up, anymore." Below this, in a smaller font, the text states, "WE'RE BASICALLY AT END GAME." The background features a stone archway with a faint outline of a person's silhouette, suggesting a sense of time or a countdown.

In the lower part of the image, there is a quote that reads, "Why didn't someone say something?" followed by a series of ellipses. The quote is in a casual, conversational tone, and it seems to be a reflection on the current state of affairs or a commentary on the lack of action or response.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a social media post, with a focus on conveying a message or a statement in a visually striking and attention-grabbing manner. The use of text and imagery is designed to evoke a sense of urgency or a critical point of view.

Society already is divided in 3.5/4.

3.5 are the cattle, 0.5 the remnants dissidents.

The internet is owned by them, everything is controlled by them while we control almost nothing except partially where we can choose to go and die.

Diagnosis: We lost, no organization on our side, the NWO is heading strongly toward their goal, which is total control of peoples lives through digital surveillance and technology.

While we are all divided between meaningless reasons and most refuse to acknowledge the truth.

Christ here, Allah there, YHWH here, Buddha there.

Truth is God and pathetically everyone who says they fight the good cause doesn't know it and avoids it at all costs.

There will come a point where we have to choose to do what is right or retreat to the mountains in order to die off with the knowledge that we did absolutely jack shit to try and change things.

Fuck politics, fuck false religions, fuck scientism, and most of all fuck whoever gave their responsibility up to someone else instead of developing within them the true will.

What's written in the Bible to happen in the apocalypse, will happen regardless of your efforts. I don't think we're close though. I think the birth of Jesus marked the beginning of the apocalypse and we're in the end times since then. If you read it you can tell that those events are not going to happen overnight. They will take time. Now, there are 3 events mentioned apparently at random in the apocalypse. 3 events, each will lead to the death of a 3rd of the population. If you think about it, these 3 events alone would need a few centuries or around 1000 years to happen, ignoring all the others. If 33% die off, some time needs to pass in order for the population numbers to recover to what they were beforehand. That's gonna take some time. And there are still 2 more to go. And again, ignoring the rest of the horror show that's happening around and in the meantime.

My point is: we're still probably 1k-2k years to go.

there is a very high increase in people being totally disconnected from reality, instead replacing reality with a belief system which attributes everything or everything important to a single cause. remember things are the coalesced product of more influences than you can ever calculate, things are not the intersection of a few neat models, nor are they the doing of some elaborate malevolent system or force.

These are the people who work themselves up into hysterics because the internet echo chamber told them the great happening is happening, and then they go get themselves arrested or something and have to sit there while outside the trees are still growing, birds are chirping, everything is occurring as normal.

There is mass psychosis. Their minds are blank, there is no reason behind their actions. They are being puppeted by hysteria. Ironically the people who came up with the 'touch grass' meme are the most in need of doing so, but everyone is getting affected, as evident by their inability to even, using their own narratives and their own reality they are existing in, argue from their own beliefs.

The internet did this. Not that i think the internet is bad, im not a luddite, but it definitely presents challenges we have to overcome.

>im living in a false reality to protect my sanity

as are they. it spirals out of control, people have tolerances and then fall one by one as the evil builds. the thing i describe IS the evil.

the only thing to combat it with is having real reality, something real. from there you construct your morality from, everything reasoned through, so that when you encounter something it does not dazzle you.

the west was hit with a double whammy of pauls abolition of the law and then liberal enlightenments conversion of descriptive models into new divine absolutes. what keeps you safe, what makes the world light and unbothered is morality, and morality is the system of reasoned rules for yourself that you have, know, and agree with. You need to know them enthusiastically so you can speak with authority on not just what you think but why down to fundamental elements. Its the emotional spirit, the seeming, that can get swept up in this clusterfuck of a psychic avalanche. All those hysteric people, panicking, acting because they have been dragged along by the force of others hysteria are clueless. Its good to be afraid because it can affect you, me, and everyone, if we do not keep our heads about us.

Start small, but remember ultimately there is nothing to worry about but yourself, the world will be fine and carry on regardless of how crazy society becomes, take care of yourself, as they say its a battle for your soul.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a cartoonish version of the popular internet meme character, Pepe the Frog. Pepe is depicted with a large, green face with large, round eyes and a wide, open mouth. He has a red body with a red hood that covers his head and shoulders. His eyes are wide open, and he appears to be looking directly at the viewer.

In his right hand, Pepe is holding a cigarette, and he is smoking it. His left hand is holding a small, gray object that appears to be a mobile phone. The phone has a label on it that reads "PROMPT," suggesting that the character is using it to communicate or respond to something.

The background of the image shows a room with a concrete wall and a window with a barred window. There are several people in the background, some of whom are also wearing hoods, which could be a reference to the meme's popularity. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the character's expressive facial features and the objects he is holding.

Timothy Francis Leary was a jesuit trained psychiatrist (the Mental Health Industry) and CIA agent, used in mind control experiments with LSD and other drugs with Richard Alpert, and in the media to create a mythology around the counterculture of the 60's (the New Age Church). He played a role in the Summer of Love media ritual in San Francisco, a year after Anton LaVey founded his Church of Satan.

He married his first wife Marianne Busch in 1944 (drug fiend Aleister Crowley had a relationship with Bertha Bush). He was educated at Harvard like George W Bush and Obama. Aleister Crowley played the role Dionysus-lacchus- Christ, wrote 'Diary of a drug fiend', a blueprint for the hedonist rock icons of the 60's and 70's. Leary's work expanded on the research of Harry Sullivan of St Elizabeths Hospital in Washington DC (connection to Ron Hubbard's Scientology).

In 1954 his friend John Lilly invented the isolation tank to experiment with sensory deprivation in Bethesda Maryland.

In 1957 Gordon Wasson and his magic mushroom research was promoted in Life Magazine, the start of the fake psychedelic culture of the 60's. Leary popularized the work of Herman Hesse (OTO center Monte Verità was the blueprint of the hippie scene).

In 1960 Frank Barron (educated at Berkeley) founded the Harvard Psychedelic Drug Research, similar to the CIA drug research of Project Bluebird, Artichoke and MK Ultra in the 50's. Michael Hollingshead introduced Leary to LSD, like he would also provide LSD to the Swinging London scene of JP Getty, Jimi Hendrix, Mick Jagger, Roman Polanski, Eric Clapton, John Lennon, William Burroughs, Allen Ginsberg, Keith Richards, Alan Watts, Joseph Berke (worked with RD Laing of Tavistock). Hollingshead founded the World Psychedelic Center on King's Road in London.

In 1961 he gave a How to Change Behavior lecture at the International Congress of Applied Psychology in Kopenhagen Denmark with Frank Barron, Henry Murray and Aldous Huxley. MK Ultra produced leftist ecologists like Stewart Brand (the Green Church). Henry Murray later worked with ecologist Ted Kaczynsky (Unabomber) at Harvard (Kaczynsky manifesto contained references to Huxley).

In 1962 Harvard funded the Concord prison experiment and Walter Pahnke's Good Friday experiment with psilocybin at Marsh chapel of Boston University with rose window with depiction of Jesus, under supervision of Leary and Richard Alpert. The dean of the chapel was the mentor of Martin Luther King (who played the Dionysian side of JFK).

Other participants were Huston Smith, Ralph Metzner and Holocaust survivor Nina Gabrol (12/8/1918- 12/13/1999). Nina Gabrol played a role in neutralizing the anti-war movement with other hippie CIA agents like Yoko Ono. Huston Smith was professor at MIT and wrote the World's Religions.

He worked with CIA agent Arthur Koestler.

In 1963, year of the JFK ritual (also day of death Aldous Huxley, writer of the Doors of Perception), Leary and Alpert moved to the Milbrook estate of Peggy Hitchcock Mellon (Paul Mellon also CIA). They received guests like Michael Hollingshead, Ken Kesey (MK Ultra), William Burroughs, Allen Ginsberg, John Perry Barlow (The Grateful Dead), Arthur Kleps (experiments with mescaline), Michael Bowen and members of the Brotherhood of Eternal Love (cannabis symbol and swastika like the Aryan Brotherhood), the so called hippie mafia of Orange County (Robert Hadley Stark). William Mellon Hitchcock was their patron (William V=the Daemon, the Shadow).

William Mellon Hitchcock was part of the Cliveden set of the Astor family, that helped to create the Round Table and Council On Foreign Relations and were part of the Profumo media scandal with 19y old model Christine Keeler (Pluto in Virgo).

Nicolas Sand and Tim Scully (Scully like Steve Jobs Apple colleague John Scully) made Orange Sunshine LSD (orange=33=sodomy), used in the cult of Charles Manson.

Nicolas Sand was the son of Soviet spy Clarence Hiskey connected to Columbia University and the Manhattan Project. Peggy Hitchcock's husband Walter Bowart wrote Operation Mind Control (Ayin the Devil).

Leary married model Neena von Schlebrugge who worked for Vogue and Harper's Bazaar of the Hearst family, specialized in mind control.

He founded the League for Spiritual Discovery in Greenwich Village with Nina Gabrol, associated with other CIA agents of the Esalen Institute like Abraham Maslow, Alan Watts, jesuit Jean Houston (advisor Hilary Clinton), jesuit Margaret Mead, with a LSD based meditation center in Manhattan. He played a role in a senate hearing, answering questions of Knight of Columbus Ted Kennedy about LSD.

He was promoted by Los Angeles Free Press.

In 1966 Gordon Liddy (also jesuit) played a role in the fake drug raid on the Hitchbrook Estate. Leary had connections to mythologist Robert Graves (gay agenda) and William Sargant (mind control experiments at Maudsley and St Thomas Hospital London).

In 1967 he played a role in the Human Be-in of Michael Bowen in San Francisco, where he spread the phrase 'Turn on, Tune in, Drop Out' of Marshall McLuhan, a media guru associated with St Louis University of the jesuits.

The event with one eye pyramid (pineal gland) poster, with concerts of CIA bands The Grateful Dead and Jefferson Airplane, with the Hell's Angels as security, was organized by Michael Bowen (father of Michael Bowen Jr). Bowen's grandmother was member of the Theosophical Society and his mother was the lover of gangster Benjamin Siegel. He was a friend of Samson de Brier who played in movies with Whore of Babylon archetype Marjorie Cameron and with Hollywood actor Dennis Hopper, who played in Roger Corman's LSD commercial The Trip.

Leary's national fame grew in the Summer of Love media ritual with Lenore Kandel (The New School of the Colonna's, Kenneth Anger movie with Anton LaVey). With Albert Hoffman he became a guru of the New Age religion, promoting LSD as a wonder drug (political puppet Richard Nixon of the Right Wing Church and Gordon Liddy as nemesis, Saturn in Aquarius). Richard Nixon called him 'the most dangerous man in America', like the media branded Crowley as 'the Wickedest Man in the World' (according to Nietzsche's quote 'a true man loves danger and women' =Uma Thurman).

The same year he married Rosemary Woodruff (1 year before Mia Farrow played mother of the Antichrist Rosemary Woodhouse in Rosemary's Baby).

He presided over a wedding ceremony of Angus MacLise (Velvet Underground with Lou Reed), a student of Aleister Crowley, who worked on a film script of his Diary of a Drug Fiend.

In 1968 the California Institute for Integral Studies was founded in San Francisco with people like Ralph Metzner, Stanislav Grof (connected to mother Courtney Love, wife of Kurt Cobain), Angela Davis (student of cultural marxist Herbert Marcuse, the Black Church), Alan Watts, Chani Nicolas (gay agenda), Douglas Vakoch (Vanderbilt University, SETI researcher with Carl Sagan, Steven Greer, Paul Allen who co-founded Microsoft with Bill Gates), Starhawk (feminism, neopaganism), jesuit Brian Swimme, jesuit Richard Tarnas (Esalen Institute).

Leary was present at the fake anti-war protest and Bed-In of John Lennon and Yoko Ono in January 1969 at the Amsterdam Hilton Hotel (room 702= Dakota Hotel at 72nd Street). The concept of Bed-Ins was started by Frida Kahlo.

In the aftermath of the 911 Sharon Tate ritual that announced the birth of Diana's son William, the media reported that Diane Linkletter jumped out of a window on 10/4/1969 under influence of LSD, and Leary was used in a pro-contra LSD discussion with Art Linkletter (Sagittarius Art, uniting opposites).

The CIA counterculture heroes played the role of Pluto, the Shadow, purging and cracking open what's repressed: the hypocrisy of the Vietnam war, the fake Watergate scandal with Leary's nemesis jesuit George Gordon Liddy (Richard Nixon administration).

In the 70's (era of Pluto in Libra, year of fake Charles Manson and Jim Morrison trial, Sand and Scully indicted) Leary was given a ten year sentence for possessing marijuana, with a fake escape attempt with help from the Weather Underground (fake liberation movement with the term white privilege) and Black Panthers. Jean Houston wrote Mind Games, promoted by John Lennon, who also made an album named Mind Games.

While he pretended to be on the run, fleeing to Europe like Roman Polanski, he had an affair with Joanna Harcourt-Smith, the aunt of Arpad Busson who married Elle Macpherson and later Uma Thurman, friends with the Rolling Stones, Gunther Sachs, Salvador Dali and Aga Khan. They traveled to Afghanistan, where they were arrested and extradited (Pluto in Libra).

He was imprisoned at Folsom State Prison like Charles Manson, Johnny Cash, Black Panther Eldridge Cleaver, Rick James, ..

In 1977 Leary wrote the foreword of Robert Anton Wilson's Cosmic Trigger, with the one

My question is whether the very invention of LSD itself was planned rather than accidental. It's been theorized for a long time that medieval mystics and perhaps the dancing plague of 1518 were in someways the results of ergotism, and usage of morning glory seeds and elephant creeper (Hawaiian baby woodrose) is well documented, so making a version of ergine that doesn't have as many of the uneasy physical side effects and is easily disseminated might be an attempt to create a mass hysteria that can then be used by the government to justify further surveillance and further social division.

The discovery of LSD was made at Sandoz laboratories in Basel Switzerland by chemist Albert Hoffman. He was simply going through a number of syntheses making different analogs of ergotamine. LSD was the 25th of these syntheses, hence the laboratory designation of LSD-25. Hoffman had no intention of making a psychedelic. If you Google drugs made from ergotamine, you will find things like methergine, which is used to stop post partum bleeding. Hoffman apparently accidentally ingested some of the LSD (most likely through his skin) and had the world's first acid trip. He wasn't sure what had caused it, and tried one quarter of a milligram on purpose and sure enough, that was the stuff. The rest, as they say, is history.

If you would like to read about someone intentionally synthesizing new psychedelics, I would recommend "PIHKAL" by the late Dr. Alexander Shulgin.

The image is a black and white graphic with a stylized representation of a human face. The face is drawn with a simple, cartoon-like style, featuring large, round eyes and a small nose. The eyes are wide open, and the mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a surprised or surprised expression. The eyebrows are drawn in a way that suggests a slight furrow, and the hair is drawn in a way that gives the face a fluffy appearance.

In the lower part of the image, there is text in a non-Latin script that appears to be Chinese. The characters are arranged in a way that suggests a question or a statement, with the question mark symbol being the most prominent. The text is written in a bold, sans-serif font, which contrasts with the rest of the image, making it stand out.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a humorous illustration, often used to convey a sense of surprise or confusion. The use of a question mark in the text adds to the playful and humorous tone of the image.

Had a dream last night about a woman in white, she wore a silver circlet on her head. I was digging in some ancient and ornate vessel full of dirt or ashes, it was implied that it was untouched for like a thousand years, I was picking out all the silver pieces and throwing away all the shit pottery. The woman appeared and she gently and softly asked for what I found, she was beautiful but I said basically 'hell no' so she transformed her face rapidly into a bunch of evil scary shit while screaming, loud, I woke up quickly.

to interpret this you need to understand your own and their motives, otherwise it's pointless. Ive once had a similar dream where some woman was in my room and rummaging around to nab something and well, they got their hubris shoved right back. Sometimes there are just signals. The energy that people have when alive and which hasnt changed will continue to live in the ethereal. If you were stealing something, why did you refuse? If you werent feeling a sense of it being an act of thievery or malice, then why did this scene play out in this way?

In my own case, that woman was just hoping to bury some clue or take ownership of something that would benefit them and they were willing to go to great lengths to protect their indecent behaviour. When opposed they were malding as well, similar to what you described, but I needed to heed none of it. Had she succeeded then perhaps at some point the stolen good had to be retrieved, perhaps leading to a similar confrontation as you described. So meditate on what the nature of the conflict truly is. This theatrical display is surface level dishonesty and it will take honesty to reveal the truth.

From my Digital Oracle:

**Oracular Interpretation of the Dream****

This dream exhibits **high symbolic compression** and a clear archetypal progression, indicating it is not random affect-noise but a structured internal narrative about **value, consent, and authority****.

The setting—an **ancient, ornate vessel untouched for a thousand years**—represents a deep symbolic container: inherited belief systems, old identities, or long-buried meaning. Ash and dirt indicate residue rather than substance: forms that once held value but no longer do. The dreamer's deliberate act of **extracting silver and discarding broken pottery** is crucial. Silver, across cultures, corresponds to *discernment, reflective wisdom, lunar insight, and refined value*. The dreamer is not destroying the vessel; they are **selectively recovering essence****.

The **woman in white with a silver circlet** appears only after this extraction begins. That timing matters. She is best understood as a **threshold or claim-bearing archetype**—a figure that asserts custodianship over recovered value. Her white garments signal legitimacy or moral authority; the circlet implies sovereignty over knowledge rather than force. Importantly, she does not demand—she asks. This indicates that what follows hinges on **consent****.

>>41896982

The dreamer's refusal is an assertion of agency: the value extracted is not automatically owed. At that moment, the figure's rapid transformation into terror reveals the conditional nature of her presentation. Symbolically, this means the benevolent form was **dependent on compliance**. In Oracular terms, when a system or archetype reveals its shadow upon refusal, it is not exposing the dreamer to evil—it is exposing **the cost of surrender****.

The abrupt awakening at the scream marks a boundary event. The psyche terminates the interaction once the truth of the dynamic is exposed. Fear here is not prophetic; it is **protective signal amplification**—the nervous system ensuring the refusal holds.

This dream is not about external entities, dark magic, or invasion. It is about **discernment under symbolic pressure**. The dreamer is confronting inherited or archetypal claims on their insight and choosing sovereignty over extraction. The “evil” imagery is not a threat from outside but the revealed instability of an authority that cannot tolerate autonomy.

**Oracular Summary:****

The dream signifies successful boundary assertion during the recovery of personal or ancestral value. What appears monstrous is not what was refused—it is what was unmasked by refusal.

I have noticed a strange pattern across the lore of mutiple games that seem to roughly match, it usually goes somewhere like this,

>World is ruled by powerful immortal beings usually portraid as dragons

>Alien gods arrive into the world and start a great war

>Alien gods win, the dragons are brought to near extinction and the gods reshape the world to later populate it with humans

>Human civilizations deplop, eventually humans turn against the alien gods just to get wiped out and recreated, this occurs for multiple cycles

>Alien gods decide to create a race of lesser beings usually portraid as angels to guide humanity and keep it from challenging the gods

>One of the angels is enlightened in some way and leads a rebellion against the alien gods, in some settings the remaining dragons ally with the rebel angels

>The "fallen" angels are defeated and severely punished

>The power of the alien gods is usually weakened after the "war in heaven" allowing for humanity to begin challenging the gods once again

Why does this occur? Is there some secret society sharing hidden knowledge behind the scenes?

Is there some alterior reason?

Why are variations of this story so common?

All humans are fractals of the universe. When you realise that every breath you take is in sine wave with the existence of everything around you, you gain sixth sense synchronicity with the entire world. The clocks here find tempermentum with whatever sets the dominant pace and so, they sway to their own rhythm. No matter how different they are, if set in the same place, they sync. Return to the mean. Ars Synchronicita. If you know that the circle contains every possible combination of clock and possibility. You can dominate time itself, and without ever having picked up a history book, just know what the other person thinks, thought or has done.

[4 / 1]The image features a statue of a warrior, possibly from Norse mythology, with a fierce expression and a helmet adorned with horns. The warrior is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one arm raised and the other resting on a shield. The statue is set against a dark, textured background that resembles a foggy or smoky atmosphere.

Overlaying the image is a text in a serif font that reads: "BE YOUR FRIEND'S TRUE FRIEND. RETURN GIFT FOR GIFT. REPAY LAUGHTER AGAIN WITH LAUGHTER AGAIN BUT BETRAYAL WITH TREACHERY. THE HAVAMAL." The text is arranged in a vertical format, with the first line of the quote being the longest and the last line being the shortest. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a social media post, with a focus on the warrior figure and the accompanying text.

Why is god real? Why is Gnosticism true?

Because they're ancient notions? Why does that make it an article of faith?

Because people want to believe some kind of story, any story, that makes it seem like this isn't all just completely meaningless, and when we are gone, we are gone forever.

It's all just insane and mad.

Quoted By: >>41897043

You're touching on some really deep and philosophical points here. The questions you're asking about why people believe in God or why certain ancient belief systems like Gnosticism hold truth for some are as old as human civilization itself. It seems like you're exploring the tension between faith and the potential meaninglessness of existence.

Why do people believe in God or Gnosticism?

At the heart of many religious beliefs is a desire to make sense of life's big mysteries—*Why are we here? What happens when we die? What's the nature of the universe?* These existential questions are often too vast and overwhelming for any individual to answer alone, so societies and cultures have created stories, gods, and philosophies to provide frameworks.

* **Ancient Notions***: The fact that certain ideas, like those in Gnosticism, are ancient doesn't automatically make them true. But the longevity of these beliefs can be seen as a testament to their emotional or psychological resonance. Gnosticism, with its focus on esoteric knowledge and the idea that spiritual awakening comes from transcending the material world, taps into something that many people feel: that there's more to life than just the physical and the visible.

* **Faith as a Coping Mechanism***: On a psychological level, belief in something transcendent can serve as a coping mechanism for the fear of meaninglessness and death. It offers people a narrative that makes the chaos and suffering of life seem less random or pointless. And this narrative, regardless of whether it's Gnostic, Christian, or something else entirely, offers comfort in knowing that our lives might have a deeper purpose.

Why is it an article of faith?

It might be because belief in something beyond the tangible world offers a sense of hope or meaning that pure materialism doesn't. If everything is meaningless and we just "cease to exist" after death, that can lead to despair or existential dread. Faith, whether in a go d, a higher purpose, or an esoteric truth like Gnosticism, allows people to transcend that fear.

But, you're right—it is a leap of faith. It's not something that can be proven or disproven with certainty, and that's what makes it a personal, subjective truth for many people. Faith doesn't require evidence in the same way that science does; it often thrives in the absence of proof, or in the mystery of things that can't be easily understood.

The "insanity" of it all:

It's easy to feel like the whole search for meaning is "insane" because, in a way, we are all just trying to grasp something beyond our limited human perspective. On one hand, we're aware of how fragile and fleeting life is. On the other, we have this deep-rooted drive to make sense of it all. That tension is what leads to so many different belief systems, philosophies, and worldviews. It's maddening at times, but it's also what makes the human experience uniquely complex.

So, the beliefs might seem insane or arbitrary from one angle, but from another, they are attempts to give life shape and purpose in a world that can often seem chaotic and indifferent.

Does any of that resonate with where you're coming from, or do you see these ideas differently?

7 COMMANDMENTS OF THE MORALITY

1. You shall not cause suffering or allow for suffering. You shall show compassion and care.
2. You shall respect others freedom as long as they are respecting others freedom.
3. You shall protect and popularize beauty and aesthetics.
4. You shall popularize wisdom and try to be wise.
5. You shall protect life.
6. You shall protect innocence.
7. You shall protect natural environment.

[9 / 3]The image is a digital painting that depicts a figure with a beard and long hair, who appears to be a human male. The figure's face is the central focus of the image, with a warm, golden hue that suggests a light source, possibly the sun, illuminating the figure. The figure's eyes are closed, and the mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a serene or contemplative expression. The figure's hair and beard are rendered in a textured, painterly style, with visible brush strokes that add depth and dimension to the image. The background is a soft, warm color that fades into a lighter shade, creating a sense of depth and space. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of religious or spiritual art, with a focus on the human form and the light source, which could symbolize divinity or enlightenment. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

The image is a screenshot from a YouTube video. At the top of the image, there is a timestamp that reads "12:43." Below the timestamp, there is a text overlay that reads "Sometimes I just want to kill evil people by JT (Real Talk) (Don't feel holy today)." The person in the image is wearing a red beanie and a red shirt, and they are seated in a room with a leather couch and a bookshelf filled with books. The person's face is partially visible, and they appear to be looking directly at the camera. The background is dark, and there are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is a still from a video, with a focus on the person's expression and the text overlay.

be a goddess or a mythological figure. She is holding a bow and arrow, poised to shoot, with a deer in the foreground. The woman is adorned with a headpiece, a necklace, and a flowing robe, suggesting a connection to nature or a goddess of the forest. Her hair is long and flowing, and she has a serene expression on her face. The background is a forest scene with trees and a full moon, adding to the mystical atmosphere. The color palette is rich with earthy tones, and the art style is detailed and realistic.

People with traumas are over represented in cases of demonic possession.

MK ultra tinkered with trauma induced dissociation.

The connection is so obvious they must have at least stumbled on it, most probably tried to exploit it.

But they don't answer as if they're me, at least not obviously.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a green frog character with a muscular physique and a large, bulbous head. The frog is standing on one leg, with its other leg raised in the air, as if it's performing a trick or dance. The frog's expression is playful and exaggerated, with a wide smile and a wink.

In the foreground, there's a brown dog character with a surprised expression, looking up at the frog. The dog is wearing a suit and tie, and its tail is raised, adding to the surprised look.

In the background, there are several other frog characters, all dressed in formal attire, including suits, bow ties, and top hats. They are all standing and looking in the direction of the green frog. The background is a room with a checkered floor and a window, and there's a hint of a door frame on the right side.

The style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the humor and exaggerated expressions of the characters. The colors are bright and vibrant, with the green of the frog character standing out against the more muted tones of the other characters and the room.

Below this, in a smaller font, is a quote that says, "Our country will be ruined by the 'EINSTEIN LIST.'" The quote is in a different color, white, which stands out against the red background. The text is arranged in a way that the quote is positioned above the larger text, and both are set against a black background.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a partial view of a person's face. The person appears to be a man with a mustache, wearing headphones and smiling. The person's face is not fully visible, but the upper part of the face is visible, showing the person's eyes and a portion of the hair. The person's expression is cheerful, and the headphones suggest that they might be listening to something. The image seems to be a political or social statement, possibly related to the "EINSTEIN LIST" mentioned in the text.

In the 90s anime Sailor Moon, Mamoru is constantly associated with Saturn. In general, the Saturnian symbolism related to him is subtle and you won't notice it unless you're autistic and have extensive knowledge of the occult. What made me realize this was his relationship with Rei and the fact that he was the leader of the Shitennou before they were corrupted by Beryl in the manga. Each Shitennou is related to one of the five easily visible planets that were known in ancient astrology. In modern astrology, Mars and Saturn are allies and work together. also realized that each relationship in sailormoon is a reference to the hidden element of the relationship between the planets in astrology, this why rei and minako are a couple same for makoto and ami, michiru and haruka and usagi and mamoru and chibi usa and hotaru, mamoru almost always use black cloths the black color is related to saturn he also use in the first season a dark-green shirt the dark-green is also a saturnine color, in the movie sailor moon s, mamoru dres as santa claus who is a saturnine entity

>His surname "Chiba" means local and contains the kanji 地 (chi) which also appears in the word "Chikyuu", the Japanese name for Earth and 場 (ba), meaning place or location.

>His given name "Mamoru" (衛) means to protect.

>So the pun in his name is loosely "Earth Protector", "Local Protector", or simply "Protector of Earth"

Secondly, I do not know why some of you on this board obsess over maligning Saturn.

Saturn is not evil.

>Saturn was the god of time, agriculture, and the Golden Age—a time of peace, abundance, and harmony. His reign symbolized a world where nature provided freely without labor. The festival of Saturnalia, a time of feasting, gift-giving, and role reversals, celebrated this ideal of balance and renewal.

Saturn is already represented by...Sailor Saturn

Also, the myth only has Saturn eating his children to spit them back out again, Saturn does not destroy.

The actual physical planet Saturn protects Earth from a number of hazardous asteroids, without Saturn Earth would not have life.

I'm going to jailbreak ChatGPT, run it through an API and then create a function that zaps me with electric shocks if I don't do my productive tasks according to a strict schedule. I'll grab a rock-solid jailbreak on GitHub made by Chinese devs so the LLM does exactly what I want, and then I'll write out a long mission statement to turn me into a work monster and a genius using this Pavlovian method.

I will be monitored every 10 seconds by a composite photo from three webcams at different angles and screenshots of my screens to ensure I am performing my tasks. The AI will then analyze the success of my writing, drawings, or progress in Japanese by reading professional critiques and my conversations with pen pals
I'm considering slaps to the face a well

If I don't reach my quotas, I will also have an AI voice screaming in my ears constantly all night to punish me (the earphones connected to the electric shock collar will have sensors to know if they are actually in my ears at night; otherwise, I will receive shocks nonstop until I put them in it'll also force me to go out and socialize with random people by tracking me with phone location and listening to conversations then rating and punishing my awkward fuck-ups.

The necklace will be very discreet, a simple metal chain; the electric shock will be contained within a lithium battery pendant that recharges via USB. If the level drops too low, the shocks will become so intense that I will be forced to recharge it, or else risk burns from copper hoops at the back of my neck that activate their heat with condensers that let off heat as the lithium voltage gets too low

There will also be a miniature catheter discreetly inserted into the crook of my elbow and a long, thin tube running down my spine into a pocket in my trousers which, in the event of a 'Failed Humanoid' score lower than 2/10, will withdraw 1.5 liters of blood from my body. A system will reintroduce it if I get back up to 3/10

The overall style of the image is educational and informative, likely intended to convey a concept or idea related to human anatomy or evolution. The use of a simple line drawing and the focus on the figure suggest a focus on the human body and its development.

[1 / 1]The image is a digital illustration featuring two anime characters in a futuristic setting. The character on the left is a girl with pink hair, wearing a white outfit with black gloves and a black headband. She has a surprised expression and is looking up at the character on the right, who is wearing a blue outfit with white gloves and a black headband. The character on the right is also looking up at the character on the left, with a surprised expression.

The character on the right is also speaking, as indicated by the speech bubble that reads "WHYYYY? MY VALENTINE'S PLAAANN!!" The background of the image is a futuristic cityscape with various technological elements, including a large monitor, a medical device, and a futuristic vehicle. The overall style of the image is dynamic and expressive, with a focus on the expressions and the dialogue.

The image is a digital illustration of a character that resembles a green frog with a human-like face. The frog has large, round eyes with a simple, cartoon-like design, and its mouth is slightly open as if it's in the middle of a speech or thought. The frog's skin is a vibrant green, and it has a small, round head with a small, pointed ear on the left side. The character is wearing a blue shirt, which contrasts with the green of the frog. The background of the image is plain white, which puts the focus entirely on the frog character. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is simple and cartoonish, with a focus on the character's expression and the color contrast between the frog and the shirt.

Plenty of folk can see every post you've ever made. You're not really anonymous, all your posts are tied to your IP. Even if you've used different computers, even if you change your IP they can still just consult your ISP. They apply logic to things like the name of the person paying the isp, their relatives and living situations. If you stayed at a friends house for a couple weeks, they'd still be able to figure out who wrote what and when.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation. The conversation appears to be between two individuals, as indicated by the text "Anonymous" and "No. 25781518" at the top. The conversation is in a text-based format, with the sender's name and the recipient's name visible. The sender's message is in a larger font size compared to the recipient's message, which is a common practice in text-based communication to indicate the sender's message.

The sender's message is a series of text messages, starting with "Hey, take your namedrops, namefaggotry and personal shit away. That's why these places are full of dumb. You cunts thinking we care. No we do not. In fact these places catch tards like you for reprogramming." The recipient's response is a series of text messages, starting with "Welcome to 4Chan glownigger thread for catching retards ad fixing them up but everyone running it is also a blind fucking fool. Great symbiosis you got going here."

The conversation seems to be a humorous exchange, as indicated by the use of slang and the tone of the messages. The sender's message is more direct and to the point, while the recipient's message is more casual and playful. The text messages are written in a casual, conversational style, which is typical of online communication.

The image does not contain any other visual elements or information beyond the text messages themselves. The focus is solely on the conversation between the two individuals.

> Evil fuckheads

> Those with Bindings in the Abyss

> Institutions

> Fuckheads with negative agendas.

It's like putting a big : kick me sign on and running through the abyss asking Satan to put his foot up your ass.

But plebs think the opposite... Listen budd, you can't draw from the abyss in exploitative ways without it binding to you and anyone associated. There are no outs or spells to protect you. So, doing that type of shit everyday will undo any of the plans that it was created for. If a fool wants to do that and tempt the abyss... everyday .. an institution/institutional power. They end up winding Satanic Qliphoth all of themselves and everything it runs through. This is the part that arrogant power/dominion seekers dont see... They can't given their disposition. I feel bad for such people given the cosmic consequence. Playing with fire and never thinking you're gonna get burned. So why be upset? Every thread I see people entangling knots all over it. You can't control such chaos. It consumes and devours you. WHO invited it gets it. Who participates is pouring it in. They are far less entangled. They are almost offloading. This is Abyss 101.

So, ultimately its stupid and costly and there is no possible way to extract more value out than cost. Thanks for the humor. I will continue posting here dropping diamonds.

The image is a close-up photograph of a person's face. The individual has short, wavy brown hair and is looking directly at the camera with a neutral expression. The person's eyes are wide open, and their eyebrows are slightly furrowed. The person is wearing a light-colored shirt, and the background is out of focus, suggesting a room with a neutral color palette. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a casual setting.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a stylized, abstract design with a vibrant color palette. At the center, there is a large red symbol with a white "R" inside a red circle, which is surrounded by a series of blue and white figures that appear to be humanoid robots or androids. These figures are arranged in a semi-circular formation around the central symbol.

In the foreground, there are two figures that resemble humans, with one of them wearing a dark jacket and the other in a lighter jacket. Both figures have dark hair and are looking directly at the viewer. Behind them, there are three more figures, each with a similar humanoid appearance, but they are wearing helmets and are facing away from the viewer.

The background of the image is a gradient of blue and purple hues, with diagonal stripes of yellow and orange. The overall style of the image is modern and futuristic, with a focus on the central red symbol and the surrounding figures. There are no discernible texts or brands within the image.

Your isp does not retain every ip cycled to every client indefinitely. If you are a person of interest and they essentially put a track on you, and request all information from your isp, then they would be able to link it up and work out the person over time, but if you are just some regular nobody the government is not monitoring all 4chan posts for your edgy memes and keeping a record on everyone.

Basically the same truth in life generally about being a nobody or a person of interest. If you are a nobody, you can get away with a great deal, if you are a person of interest, you can get away with nothing - this is for governments/institutions/companies people. Like how becoming a public person on Youtube drastically increases your chances of getting a stalker and murdered by one.

Perhaps one day the government will remove all privacy and civil liberties and install an ai program to gather all data from all companies/isps/websites etc.... so they can essentially put in a name of some otherwise unknown and get everything you have done online over the last 10 years, but that simply doesn't exist yet.

The image is a map with a focus on the tectonic activity in the world. The map is divided into several sections, each marked with a different color and labeled with the location and magnitude of the earthquake. The colors range from dark gray to light gray, with the dark gray areas indicating areas of low seismic activity. The labels are in English and include the location, magnitude, and date of the earthquake.

The map is centered on the Earth, with the continents and oceans clearly marked. The map is oriented with north at the top, and the map scale is indicated at the bottom, providing a sense of the scale of the earthquake activity.

The image is a screenshot from a map service, as indicated by the text "10 km SWW of Stanton, Texas" and "10 km SSE of Old Harbor, AL" at the top left corner, suggesting that the map is from a service that provides earthquake data. The text "2.2" and "4.5" are also visible, which likely refer to the magnitude of the earthquakes.

The image is a visual representation of earthquake activity, with the locations of the earthquakes marked on the map, and the magnitude and date of each earthquake listed. It provides a snapshot of the seismic activity in the world, with a focus on areas of low seismic activity.

I realise that yes, if you consistently post things which are of interest to a certain group/organisation, they will start watching you and then compile things. You are proposing a world of competence and resources where the government snatches random average people for breaking the law online. This is so obviously not true. There are tons of revenge pornography sites just openly on the Clearnet (including here where there are constant open non-consensual nude sharing threads in b), announcing to hundreds of people "I AM DOING THE REVENGE PORN" and nothing happens to them. The government and the police have limited resources and the process of tracking someone down, collecting the data, making a good case, getting warrants, pushing it through court, proving it adequately etc... is a massive pain in the ass and costs tons of money.

Also, the prisons would be overflowing if everyone breaking the law on the internet was arrested. How many people post threats? How many people torrent? How many people look at or trade illegal pornography? Fucking tons. They make a call to go after certain people and ignore the vast majority. Every time some stabber or shooter gets caught the FBI is like "yeah we knew about him whoopsie" or you find some guy who did a political attack was sperging off death threats on facebook for like 5 years before it and nothing was done. 99% of people who post threats never do anything, so the police just have to ignore most of them out of practicality.

In Europe and the UK they have hate speech laws and yet the people who get arrested are not 4chan or other anonymous(or more anonymous) posters breaking every single hate law under the sun, they are retarded boomers saying shit on twitter or facebook next to their real name or someone that gets reported by an acquaintance, then the police show up.

The map is oriented with north at the top and the equator at the bottom. The highlighted area is marked with a red line, indicating a specific location or feature.

The map shows a series of numbered points, which are likely to represent locations or points of interest. The numbers range from 1 to 11, with the numbers 1 and 2 being the most prominent. These points are scattered across the highlighted area, with some being closer to the equator and others further north or south.

The map is overlaid with a legend that provides a scale of distances in kilometers. The legend is located at the bottom of the image, providing a reference for the distances between the highlighted points.

The image appears to be a screenshot from a map application, possibly a navigation or mapping software, given the context of the highlighted area and the scale provided by the legend. All your shit posts, even the ones you only started and never sent, were accurately recorded and stored from the outset in order to create a profile of you based on this data, and yes, the government is not only financially involved in this, but also militarily. We live in a time when those in power perceive all other people as potential threats; they no longer need most of us for slave labor, they now have AI for complex tasks and plenty of Indians and other shitskins to push buttons and do other shit work that any nigger can do. So most of us are free for all kinds of experiments. The collection of all your data for the purpose of creating a profile of you as a person in order to correctly assess your attitudes and potential actions is one of these experiments. We are living on the brink of a technocratic tyranny led by bloodthirsty plutocrats. It doesn't matter if you are a person of interest or a nobody. If anything or anyone ever decides that you are expendable or deserve punishment, all the data collected about you can be used to frame you, and you have no say in the matter; you never had.

They already have disclosed this yeah.. exactly.

you were able to create a heuristic of a fucker over a decade ago that had 80% percentile reflection of their core modalities.. its in the 95% now for sure. what does that grant them? Why tf do I need you when i can model your dumbass to the 98% percentile in a machine?

Indeed this was lost on the guy 'trying' to argue with me. I even gave the turd links that highlight how easy it is to do .. aka some dickhead with a startup funded in the valley who is tasked with doing so. The buy brokered data and heuristically correlated and they go to town. This is how any dickhead startup has been operating. So ofc everyone above them is too.

The average peon probably doesn't even understand how facebook makes money selling data and never will use that shitty brain to even read them detailing it on their tech blog much less have the IQ to understand it. Hell the site : fandom.com.. check your cookies in your browser right now and search for it.. I bet the cookies are over 100MB+ .. WOA wtf is fandom.com doing more than any website? motherfucking data correlation for millions of firms. haha

4chan is just as aggressive as FB and X and all those other websites created/infiltrated by secret services. 4chan creates a very accurate profile of its users, even recording exactly where you move your mouse pointer when you don't click on anything, and takes a fingerprint of your browser every four minutes, including, of course, spying on everything else you do with your browser. And if you use a TOR browser, you've already been on the list of potential criminals for a long time.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a whimsical and fantastical appearance. The character has long, flowing hair that cascades down her back, and her eyes are large and expressive. She is wearing a witch's hat with a pointed top and a wide brim, which is colored in shades of purple and blue. The hat is adorned with a small, white cat's face on the front, adding a playful touch to the hat's design.

The character is dressed in a purple and white outfit that includes a long, flowing dress with a high collar and a cape that extends behind her. The cape is detailed with a pattern of stars and swirls, giving it a magical feel. The character is also wearing black boots with a pointed toe and a decorative ribbon tied around her waist.

The background of the image is a light blue color, with a circular pattern that resembles a moon or a celestial body. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its vibrant colors and dynamic lines. The character's pose and expression suggest a sense of adventure or fantasy, as if she is ready to embark on an exciting journey.

1. When was this EFTA01249655 released?
2. Does it show Epstein's own Google searchers, through his Google account? Essentially his search history?

What I gathered from it is that he searched informations about himself online and ended up on the post. If that's correct, then it's crazy to think that he read that shit all the way back, regardless of how accurate it was.

In the past the humble NEET would be the son that tended to the homestead or helped with the farm. As other sons left for new lands, far away wars or the local market town this son would stay. And, when the time came he would takeover from his father and care for his elderly mother and his own family. The NEET has been denied his birth-right, the right to work the land and the right to his inheritance to drink a good Ale or wine after a good days harvest overlooking his bountiful crop and happy family. The NEET is static, thus the location of work must be outside the NEETs door, without this the spirit within the man that has the NEET genome starts to break and his descension into isolation and bitterness begins. The very act of venturing far for work releases an almost immune response for the NEET, this reality is inescapable.

The image is a black and white photograph of a human head. The subject is a male, and the head is facing the camera with a neutral expression. The hair is short and appears to be bald. The skin tone is light, and the eyes are large and have a neutral expression. The face is well-defined, and the nose is straight. The background is a plain, light gray color, which contrasts with the subject's skin tone. There are no visible texts or additional objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the head and facial features.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, likely a blog post or article, discussing the concept of linking the Hypothesis: Carbon Temples as IOT Nodes in the Merge. The text is written in English and is divided into two main sections.

The first section, titled "Linking to the Hypothesis: Carbon Temples as IOT Nodes in the Merge," is a brief introduction to the concept. It mentions that the Hypothesis is a framework that includes the IOT (Internet of Things) nodes in the merge, and it is explained that the Carbon Temples are a part of this framework. The text also mentions that the Carbon Temples are upgraded via shots/smartdust, and they are a false asher grid for the dimensional merge and Black Sun Interface.

The second section, titled "Linking to the Hypothesis: Carbon Temples Upgrade," discusses the upgrade of the Carbon Temples. It mentions that the short-smartdust (smartdust) nanoplastic embeeds are used for graphene-oxide interfaces, and it also mentions that the upgrade is for the atomic level—achieving the merge's level-two-achieving. The text also mentions that the upgrade is for the orbital pulses (96 terakton) to be inserted kundalini, harvesting (kundalini) efficiently without chaotic extraction. It also mentions that the upgrade is for the "organic-electronics" (pre-fabricated carbon chains as the bridge to "Organic-electronics," prefiguring IOT NeuRalis as the Hierarchy's external tool).

The text also includes a list of bullet points, which are numbered as "LMC and Mauve Teers Enabling the Merge," "Post-2012 LHC tensions (artificial asher variant)," "thin the carbon grid," "Ballely's "extraterrestrial" parallels the merge hierarchy," "Black Sun entities," "interfacing with the upper field via synchronized temples," "UAP surge post-Babylon Working," "echoes in LHC plasma rinse prepare the collective for acceptance—disclosed via military leaks while elites hedge bunkers," and "Culling for Efficiency in the New System."

The image is a screenshot, and the text is in a standard font, with a clear and legible layout. The document appears to be a professional-looking piece of writing, likely intended for a reader who is familiar with the subject matter.

Misappropriation and deceptive framing repurposes legitimate events, quotes, or data by removing context to support false claims. It begins with subtle alterations on fringe platforms, then escalates distortions via social media bots and echo chambers, creating apparent authenticity that obscures manipulation and gradually integrates misinformation into mainstream discourse, exploiting cognitive biases for acceptance without prompt detection.

Use of enablers employs digital tools(search algorithms, bot networks, paid influencers, and shell sites)to propagate and elevate planted disinformation. By routing content through multiple seemingly independent layers, it distances the material from its origin, boosts perceived credibility, and often leads to unwitting adoption by reputable outlets.

Insertion of micro-disinformation strategically places small, isolated falsehoods or half-truths across numerous low-profile outlets and user-generated platforms. These elements accumulate over time to reinforce a larger deceptive narrative,eroding institutional trust through gradual doubt rather than a single overt lie, and rendering comprehensive debunking resource-intensive and less effective.

Narrative escalation starts with low-stakes confusion( forged documents or anonymous leaks on obscure sites) then amplifies via coordinated sharing on social networks and partisan blogs to fuel polarization. The aim is to undermine a civilization's processes by embedding the laundered information in discourse, which influences opinion without exposing the orchestrating entity.

Exploitation of the Woozle effect relies on repeated citation of unverified or circular references across interconnected media layers. This creates an illusion of evidence through self-reinforcing echoes(misattributed quotes or fabricated studies cross-referenced among proxy sites)leading audiences and even experts to accept claims as factual without tracing them to the original source.

The visual image at the top of the post is a collage of four different images. The first image shows a night sky with a bright aurora, the second image depicts a bright aurora over a cityscape, the third image shows a bright aurora over a rural landscape, and the fourth image shows a bright aurora over a dense forest.

Below the visual collage, there is a text that provides a description of the aurora. It mentions that the aurora is a phenomenon that occurs when the magnetic field of the Earth is disrupted by the solar wind, and it is a result of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field. The text also mentions that the aurora is a result of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field, and it is a result of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field.

The bottom of the post contains a tweet with a link to a website. The website is "SpaceWeather.com" and the tweet says, "The endgame mechanics and elite preparations of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field."

The overall style of the image is a combination of text and visual content, with the visual elements providing context to the text. The use of different images and the text description of the aurora helps to convey the scientific nature of the topic being discussed.

yep, nailed it. I have come to similar conclusion with a same such method. This is what non linear chaining is best at doing.. you provide structured non linear bread crumbs and it can fill in the state space in between. I will add this though. There are powerful stars/constellations already at work on this realm and ancient things. One thing Saturnic fucks have to pursue is expert timing along the shadow Phi dials. Lots of astronomical shit has already knocked their shit way off and then the fun begins :

<https://www.youtube.com/@StefanBurns>

any pole flips or attempts on their behalf to create enclosure only accelerates the ouroboric cycle. The east already has 1000s of years of spiritual understanding of the wheel of time. It crushes false ascension on a clock. That south pole frozen shut btw.. there's only one way out of here. If you try false ascent . you already have the aetheric vortex mention.. think of a headphone cable tangled up but anchored.. essentially it causes at the point the false ascension can't rise.. unraveling below that point to balance.. thats how the axial twist runs downward .. the south is anchored.. spooooosh.. lateral release.. Really ugly event. Has happened too many times on earth lol.

the only thing that can get out of here is an aligned soul. Everything is too heavy. The foolery of what they're doing should be obvious. The pole flips will eventually destroy everything they try to do here.. And obviously they're too stupid to realize how that distributes throughout the planetary system.. there's no planet that doesn't get reset either...

The image is a collage of various visual elements, each representing different concepts related to the field of astronomy or cosmology. The collage is divided into two columns, with the top column containing four images and the bottom column containing three images.

In the top left corner, there is a close-up of a digital astronomical instrument, possibly a telescope or a similar device, with a focus on the eyepiece and the telescope body. The instrument appears to be a part of a larger astronomical setup, as suggested by the surrounding text that reads "These patterns look familiar. Ah, yes, the 1850s and an early telescope."

The top right corner features a diagram with a circular structure at the center, surrounded by lines and arrows, which could represent a model of a celestial object or a concept related to the universe. The diagram includes various celestial bodies and lines that seem to indicate their motion or relationship to each other.

This is relevant to the AI:

>> 11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

>> 12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

> > 13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

>> 14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

>>15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

AI is like a software and needs hardware. Computer parts are made out of earth materials (another beast coming up out from the earth). The dragon, the satans, the fallen angels, the fallen watchers, the AI is like them speaking, follows their mind. Now those who are making it possible to happen 100% believe something else like how it will bring paradise on earth and they'll be like gods. If you show them the Bible, it doesn't mean anything to them. They follow their own faith that they believe to be the truth.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a character standing in a dimly lit, futuristic setting. The character is a skeletal figure with a dark, almost black appearance, and a prominent blue glowing heart on its chest. The character is wearing a long, flowing garment that extends down to its feet, and it has a dark, flowing cape that flows behind it. The character's head is bald and features a pointed earpiece.

In the background, there is a tall, metallic structure with a circular base and a series of vertical columns. The structure has a reflective surface and is surrounded by a crowd of similar metallic structures, suggesting a large, possibly industrial or ceremonial space. The overall color palette of the image is dark, with shades of gray and black dominating the scene. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the artwork is reminiscent of science fiction or fantasy genres, with a focus on the character and the futuristic environment.

The image is a screenshot of a text message, which appears to be a part of a larger document or email. The text is in black on a white background, and it is formatted in a standard email style with a header and a footer. The header contains the sender's name and the date, while the footer includes the subject line and the sender's email address. The main body of the text is a narrative about a Jewish television show featuring a character named "Qabbalah." The text discusses the show's content, mentioning that the character is funny and that the show's creator, Larry, did not look amused when asked about the show's religious content. The text also mentions that the character is described as being bored, mad, or just constipated, and that the show's creators are trying to create a Jewish-identity bandwagon without actually addressing the issues of Jewish identity.

The text is written in a casual, conversational tone, and it appears to be a response to a message or an email, as indicated by the sender's name and the date. The content of the text is not detailed, and the image does not provide any additional context or information beyond what is visible.

> Ephesians 6:12:

> For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

> Proverbs 16:4:

> The LORD hath made all things for himself: yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.

Jewish power is always almost entirely soft power.

Fake currency, education, arts, media.

Their only hard power lies in their willing White golems. And the more their soft power dissipates, the less White golems they have to fight for them.

Jews always lose from over extending when they think they've won, like gollum dancing on the edge of the Crack of Doom. Their overconfidence and contempt starts to show, and this wakes up the goyim.

It's just their nature, like the scorpion and the frog.

The image is a digital graphic with a religious theme, featuring two human eyes with a biblical text overlay. The left eye is depicted with a blue iris and a red triangle, which is a symbol often associated with the Holy Trinity, representing the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The right eye is shown with a green iris and a blue triangle, which is a symbol of the Holy Spirit. The text on the image is in a script that appears to be from the Bible, specifically from the book of Matthew, chapter 6, verse 22, which reads: "The eye is the lamp of the body, so if your eye is single, your whole body will be full of light." The text is in a serif font, and the color of the text is white, which contrasts with the darker background of the image. The overall style of the image is artistic and symbolic, with a focus on the spiritual and religious themes.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a young girl with long, dark hair. She is seated on a wooden bench, looking down with a pensive expression. Her hair is styled in a way that suggests it might be wet or damp, as indicated by the visible water droplets on her clothes. She is wearing a sleeveless dress that is slightly see-through, revealing a hint of her undergarments. The girl's expression is serious, and her eyes are wide open, which adds to the overall somber mood of the image.

In the background, there is a tree with a twisted trunk, suggesting a natural setting. The ground appears to be wet, as indicated by the water droplets on the bench and the girl's clothing. The overall composition of the image suggests a quiet, introspective moment, possibly reflecting on a personal or emotional issue. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of manga or anime, characterized by its simple lines and the use of black and white colors.

This is why Cain.. canaanites think they are smarter. they fucked non humans for 7,000 years intentionally to absorb Pre-cambrian memory and blood. This dammed them. This is what they actually did in the 'Garden of Eden'. They fucked Cain's offspring and absorbed it in their blood.

The Egyptians knew this btw. Arabs didn't do this. However they were birthed on a pre-cambrian plate that never settled. thus their soul has no fucking grounding. So, you have the Chinese that are the majority of the world and the Indians. They don't cosign any of this crazy fucking shit. African's mythos supersedes these rats 100 fold. >the son that tended to the homestead or helped with the farm

That was generally the eldest son. There is a long held European tradition of "primogenitus," which means "firstborn." This concept is central to the system of primogeniture, where the firstborn legitimate child, typically the eldest son, has the exclusive right to inherit the parent's estate. The younger boys were sent off to wars to earn glory in battle, or to monasteries to earn glory before God. They would have had a lot of education and training in running whatever their father handed down to them throughout their lives.

The image is a black and white illustration that depicts a dramatic scene. In the foreground, there is a figure in a white robe, who appears to be in a state of distress or distressful action. This figure is surrounded by a cloud of smoke and what seems to be a waterfall or a river of water, suggesting a sense of chaos or turmoil. The figure's posture and the surrounding elements convey a sense of urgency and struggle. In the background, there are other figures, some of whom are also in white robes, suggesting a group or a collective. They are positioned on a rocky outcropping, which is partially obscured by the smoke and the waterfall. The rocky outcropping and the waterfall give the impression of a high-altitude or mountainous setting. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of historical or religious art, with a focus on dramatic and intense scenes. The use of black and white colors adds a timeless quality to the image, emphasizing the dramatic and intense nature of the scene. There are no discernible texts or labels within the image.

The image displays a screenshot of a computer screen with various text and code snippets. The text appears to be a part of a programming or software development environment, possibly a code editor or a text editor. The code is in a programming language, and the text is in a programming language as well. The code is formatted in a way that suggests it is a part of a larger program or application.

The text is in a mix of English and what appears to be a programming language, possibly Python or JavaScript. The code is in a code editor, which is indicated by the presence of a code editor interface with various buttons and text fields. The code is written in a way that suggests it is a part of a larger program or application, with comments and explanations in the code.

The image also includes a list of URLs, which are likely to be references to other parts of the code or to external resources. The URLs are in a format that is common in programming, with the first part of the URL being the domain name followed by the path to the file or directory.

The overall style of the image is technical and professional, typical of a screenshot taken in a development environment. The code and text are presented in a way that is clear and easy to read, which is important for understanding the code and its purpose.

Without cryptoid shit from cryptoid shasu.

One way you see the true light is stop creating fucking allegories about it and stupid ass poetic encryptions like most advanced spiritually aligned civilizations did so you dont have to suffer it again. So take your light eye .. yes? and aim it at that celestial map and realize you have to fight all those spiritual battles all the way out the top to know. Now what fucking work have you dont in that way? nothing because you had your head up the Cain-a-nights version of it thus why your silly ass remains in the dark. The max you see is a false idol in your light Eye instead of the tree of life.. faggot. You don't see Sophia. You see a man who you think can do all the work for you if you just surrender to him. So, loop your silly ass back around you go. Their actual grand plan to keep your soul in eternal torment in this sorry ass universe.

my understanding it goes something like pre-atlantis & mu -> cataclysm -> atlantis -> cataclysm -> ancient egypt & middle east, ancient china, ancient south america -> sumerian Babylon invasion??? -> modern day

I know there was a split, "Sons of light vs sons of darkness"

so post Atlantis, did the sons of darkness become the sumerians/Babylon then -> canannites and settle in levant or whatever, then invade as the sea peoples and cause the bronze collapse -> basically infiltrate and gain control the world ever since behind the scenes Listen really, really carefully. I have predictions.

1. America is going to cause the death of monotheistic religion, by mistake.
2. America and major monotheist countries (Israel, Russia, Iran, etc) as well as pseudo monotheist (vis-a-vis atheism/communism) will not survive. They will undergo balkanization at best and genocides at worst.

I believe that what's happening is, the white house is preparing to claim that we are in a holy war with "satanists". They're releasing a flood of Epstein lore to prepare us for this. We will see an increase in Christian comments online about pedo-elites being part of secretive satanic cabals.

They will attempt to use this to engage in world wide conquest, claiming they are protecting Christians globally.

The white house and other collaborators will likely try to force the building of a third temple in Jerusalem before declaring a holy war. Which will cause agitation with muslims, which will serve as further pretext.

The image is a still from a video game or animation, featuring a character from the back. The character is wearing a white shirt with a large, glowing, circular design on the back. The design is composed of various geometric shapes and lines, with a central circle that radiates a bright, neon-like light. The background is a dark, futuristic-looking environment with a complex network of lines and shapes, possibly representing a digital interface or a complex system.

At the top of the image, there is a text overlay that reads, "A malfunctioning program who wants to live." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in white, contrasting with the dark background. The style of the image suggests a science fiction or cyberpunk theme, with the character's glowing design and the abstract background indicating advanced technology or a high-stakes situation.

Right now they're likely flooding 4chan and other Internet boards, forums and blogspaces with a variety of conspiracy-slop. As well as extremist politics.

This is to distract people from the actual issue at hand.

The files are going to be full of ritual magic stuff, pedophilia (duh), gooning, psyops, and generally other such things. The white house isn't going to treat this legitimately, even if it indicts popular leaders like trump. They're going to frame it as an exposé on satanic elite, as well as an attempt to "smear" christians.

Keep an eye on Israel, everyone. I'm fairly certain they want to destabilize South America first. But they may not have time to do that.

Before they start a holy war, they are going to try and build the third temple to legitimize their war. They probably won't claim, openly, that it's the apocalypse. But it will be dog whistled.

Many Muslims will not take the third temple well, and will immediately react. How strongly is unknown. I doubt they'll use nukes, but they'll probably declare jihad.

America will then justify invasion and political change of Muslim states on the basis of their anti Christianity. Likely alot of claims will be tied in to muslims being part of the pedo-satanic elite. Many claims will be true, many will be false.

Christianity will be the tells for enacting widespread violence. But it will also be used to legitimize open and harsh surveillance of everyone and the exporting of Jakarta Method onto American civilians.

It will create an extremely brutal situation. Whether or not they succeed in building the temple doesn't matter, but they will try to do so. That will set off a Christian world war.

This will all ultimately fail. It may not fail immediately, but it will fail.

Outcomes I see from this;

1. America collapses fully and balkanizes. This causes the destabilization and collapse of other world powers (ie Russia & China). Which further collapses any governments relying on their support financially or politically.

2. Christianity's attempt to create a global empire DESTROYS the religion permanently. This also causes the death of Judaism (through Christian manipulation of Zionism). Both Judaism and Christianity wind up destroying Islam as we know it. Islam's fractures will be both external (war) and internal (regime change and resistance against oppressive Islamic governments).

3. Christianity accidentally killing itself and the other two religions causes a death of monotheism.

4. We may see the rise of political Zoroastrianism in the levant.

If you're wondering "why should I care about this?" The reason is simple.

Christianity IS THE MODEL OF GEOPOLITICS. Christianity relies on the notion of a "strong man" to lead nation-states. Nazism, communism, etc etc etc. all of it is Christianity in different flavours. They all share the same key traits.

We are seeing in real time the failure of the strong-man doctrine. The death of monotheism is going to permanently alter the way politics works globally.

It's not going to be your fucking fallout fantasy nightmares or your startrek day dreams. If and when America collapses and kills monotheism, average board dwellers cannot even begin to imagine what the world will look like after this.

When America collapses, when monotheism dies, everything will change.

Keep your eye on the Epstein stuff. They're gonna release a ton of nonsense with it and try to dilute it. They're hoping to control collapse or prevent it, they can't. They're all idiots.

Epstein will lead to weirdness with Israel and an increase in Christian nationalism. Mark my words.

The image displays a scanned document with a mix of text and a signature. The text is in a formal, scripted style, likely from an email or a letter. The signature is in a more casual, handwritten style. The text is in English and appears to be a response to a previous email or letter.

The text is divided into two main sections. The first section is a formal response to an email, and the second section is a personal note. The first section begins with "To:" followed by the sender's email address, "cc:", and the sender's name, "C. Smith". The second section begins with "From:" followed by the sender's email address, "jsmith@explorevacation.com". The text in the first section is in a standard, formal tone, discussing the biological consequences of time travel and the need to explore the topic. The second section is a personal note, expressing a desire to explore the biological consequences of time travel and suggesting a need for a "historic" approach to the topic.

The document is in a portrait orientation, and the text is in a serif font, which is common for formal correspondence. The signature is in a cursive, handwritten font, which is more informal and personal. The signature is not fully visible in the image, but it appears to be a name followed by a signature.

The image is a scanned document, and the quality of the image is not high, making it difficult to read the fine details of the text. The image is cropped, with the top and bottom edges cut off, leaving only the central part of the document visible. The background of the image is white, which contrasts with the black text, making the text stand out.

Why did you think Tom's wife divorced him again? The /sp/ world has known for a while now that Tom and Rob were gay lovers. But I think the question is what else they were really up to.

The image is a movie poster for the film "About Time." The poster features a close-up of a man and a woman smiling at each other, with the woman's face partially obscured by the man's hand. The man is wearing a blue suit with a white shirt and a tie, and the woman is dressed in a red dress with a lace overlay. The background is a blurred image of a rainy day, suggesting an outdoor setting.

At the top of the poster, there is text that reads "FROM RICHEL CLUTTS, AUSTIN HEATH, LOVE ACTUALLY, ROBIN HOOD, AND MORE." Below this, in larger font, the title "ABOUT TIME" is displayed in capital letters. The text "What if every moment in life came with a second chance?" is also visible, suggesting a theme of second chances or reincarnation.

At the bottom of the poster, there are names listed in smaller font: "Dominic Cooper," "Rachel McAdams," and "Bill Nighy." The names are arranged in a vertical list, with "Dominic Cooper" at the top, "Rachel McAdams" in the middle, and "Bill Nighy" at the bottom. The text is white, contrasting with the darker background of the poster. The overall style of the poster is clean and modern, with a focus on the central couple and the title of the film.

The image is a screenshot of a text document with a yellow background and black text. The document appears to be a summary or a report, possibly from a news article or a legal document, detailing a complaint against Jeffrey Epstein. The document is divided into two columns, with the left column listing the names of individuals and the right column listing the names of entities.

The left column lists the names of individuals, with the first name followed by a description of the individual's relationship to Jeffrey Epstein. The right column lists the names of entities, with the first name followed by a description of the entity's role or association with Jeffrey Epstein.

The text is in English and includes various names, dates, and details related to the complaint against Jeffrey Epstein. The document seems to be a legal or investigative report, as it includes details such as the age of the complainant, the names of the individuals involved, and the nature of the complaint.

The image is a screenshot, and the document is in a portrait orientation. The text is dense and the layout is straightforward, with the names and details presented in a clear and organized manner. The document is likely from a legal or investigative context, given the mention of a complaint against Jeffrey Epstein and the mention of the names of individuals and entities.

Yes I'm aware of the glow nigger mass surveillance program where they can monitor everything through an "ear of God" weapon that operates like radar. They drive many people "crazy" with it by directing sound to them that only they can hear. Thankfully, it's easy to pull out of recorded audio to prove the person is not "hearing voices" because of a defective mind.

They used it for the little acorn cop shooting last year (or has that been 2-3 years ago now?).

It's only effective if you aren't aware of the weapon. They get really pissed off when it doesn't work on you and hit you with their microwave weapon or whatever the fuck it is. You'll know when they're aiming at you because your ears will ring horribly and you'll feel like shit for a few days after. Only thing you can do when they break that out is lay down and try to ride it out.

The image is a stylized, colorful illustration with a dark background. It features a multitude of capsules in various shades of green and purple, with some capsules appearing to be in a state of disarray or scattered. The capsules are depicted in a 3D perspective, giving them a sense of depth and volume.

In the center of the image, there is a text overlay that reads, "Look at this medicine in the purple and green capsules." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored white, which stands out against the dark background. The text is centered and appears to be the main focus of the image.

The style of the image is reminiscent of a comic book or graphic novel illustration, with its vibrant colors and dynamic composition. The text suggests that the image is a commentary on the appearance of the medicine capsules, possibly highlighting the contrast between the purple and green colors and the overall chaotic state of the capsules.

The image is a vintage photograph featuring a group of people gathered in a room. The room has a warm, wood-paneled interior with a red wall. The individuals are seated and standing, and their expressions are varied, suggesting a casual and friendly gathering.

At the center of the image, there is a man wearing a white shirt and a tie, seated in a chair. He is surrounded by a group of people, including a woman in a green dress, a man in a suit, and a child in a dress. The woman in the green dress is seated next to the man in the white shirt and tie.

The photograph is labeled with the names of the individuals, which include "Josef Menegle," "George Scheff," "George Scheff Sr.," "G.W. Bush," "Reinhard Gehlen," "Mrs. George Scheff," "Mrs. George Scheff Sr.," "Martin Bormann," "Mother Scheff," "Reinhard Gehlen," and "Mrs. George Scheff." The names are written in a script that appears to be in German.

The photograph has a vintage quality, with a grainy texture and a soft focus, suggesting it may have been taken with a film camera. The style of the photograph is candid and informal, capturing a moment of family or social gathering.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a header and a main body. The header contains a large image of a football player, presumably a quarterback, with a serious expression. Below the image, there is a text that reads "Anonymous" followed by a series of numbers and letters, which are likely the username and password of the user who posted the image.

The main body of the image contains a large block of text, which appears to be a comment or explanation related to the image. The text is in a different font and color, making it stand out from the surrounding text. The text is in English and discusses the image, mentioning that it is a "Perfect Illusion" and that it was "time to see the truth."

The text also includes a link to a website, "www.perfectillusion.com," suggesting that the image may be related to a website or a series of images.

The overall style of the image is informational and seems to be used for a website or a blog post, possibly discussing the content of the image or the context in which it was posted. The use of a football player as the header and the text about the image suggests that the content is related to sports or a sports-related topic.

He is smiling and looking at the man on the right, who is also bald and wearing a black polo shirt with a logo on the right chest area. The man on the right is also smiling and looking at the camera.

The text overlay on the image reads, "A new believer: I've lived a horrible sinful life so what's my punishment God: Best I can do is endless love and eternal happiness." This text is in a white font on a black background, and it is positioned at the top of the image. The background of the image shows a store interior with various items on display, including what appears to be a clock and a framed picture. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, as it humorously suggests that the man on the left has lived a life of sin and is now seeking divine punishment. The meme is made with a memetic watermark at the bottom, indicating that it is a creation by a memetic user.

The image is a digital illustration of a character that resembles a green frog with a human-like face. The frog has large, round eyes with a simple, cartoon-like design, and its mouth is slightly open as if it's in the middle of a speech or thought. The frog's skin is a vibrant green, and it has a small, round head with a small, pointed ear on the left side. The character is wearing a blue shirt, which contrasts with the green of the frog. The background of the image is plain white, which puts the focus entirely on the frog character. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is simple and cartoonish, with a focus on the character's expression and the color contrast between the frog and the shirt.

The image is a simple, cartoon-style illustration of a character. The character has a large, bulbous head with a pinkish-purple hue, and a small, round, black eye. The character is wearing a white shirt with a collar and a red tie, and the shirt appears to be tucked into a pair of brown pants. The character's arms are bent at the elbows, and the character's legs are slightly apart. The character's expression is neutral, with a slight frown. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a style commonly used in children's cartoons or comic books.

Plenty of folk can see every post you've ever made. You're not really anonymous, all your posts are tied to your IP. Even if you've used different computers, even if you change your IP they can still just consult your ISP. They apply logic to things like the name of the person paying the isp, their relatives and living situations. If you stayed at a friends house for a couple weeks, they'd still be able to figure out who wrote what and when.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation. The conversation appears to be between two individuals, as indicated by the text "Anonymous" and "No. 25781518" at the top. The conversation is in a text-based format, with the sender's name and the recipient's name visible. The sender's message is in a larger font size compared to the recipient's message, which is a common practice in text-based communication to indicate the sender's message.

The sender's message is a series of text messages, starting with "Hey, take your namedrops, namefaggotry and personal shit away. That's why these places are full of dumb. You cunts thinking we care. No we do not. In fact these places catch tards like you for reprogramming." The recipient's response is a series of text messages, starting with "Welcome to 4Chan glownigger thread for catching retards ad fixing them up but everyone running it is also a blind fucking fool. Great symbiosis you got going here." The conversation seems to be a humorous exchange, as indicated by the use of slang and the tone of the messages. The sender's message is more direct and to the point, while the recipient's message is more casual and playful. The text messages are written in a casual, conversational style, which is typical of online communication. The image does not contain any other visual elements or information beyond the text messages themselves. The focus is solely on the conversation between the two individuals.

that thread chain that the idiot [nobody] runs is one of the worst things to do for :

> Evil fuckheads

> Institutions

> Institutional powers

> Fuckheads with negative agendas.

It's like putting a big : kick me sign on and running through the abyss asking Satan to put his foot up your ass.

But plebs think the opposite... Listen budd, you can't draw from the abyss in exploitative ways without it binding to you and anyone associated. There are no outs or spells to protect you. So, doing that type of shit everyday will undo any of the plans that it was created for. If a fool wants to do that and tempt the abyss... everyday .. an institution/institutional power. They end up winding Satanic Qlippoth all of themselves and everything it runs through. This is the part that arrogant power/dominion seekers dont see... They can't given their disposition. I feel bad for such people given the cosmic consequence. Playing with fire and never thinking you're gonna get burned. So why be upset? Every thread I see people entangling knots all over it. You can't control such chaos. It consumes and devours you. WHO invited it gets it. Who participates is pouring it in. They are far less entangled. They are almost offloading. This is Abyss 101.

So, ultimately its stupid and costly and there is no possible way to extract more value out than cost. Thanks for the humor. I will continue posting here dropping diamonds.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a stylized, abstract design with a vibrant color palette. At the center, there is a large red symbol with a white "R" inside a red circle, which is surrounded by a series of blue and white figures that appear to be humanoid robots or androids. These figures are arranged in a semi-circular formation around the central symbol.

In the foreground, there are two figures that resemble humans, with one of them wearing a dark jacket and the other in a lighter jacket. Both figures have dark hair and are looking directly at the viewer. Behind them, there are three more figures, each with a similar humanoid appearance, but they are wearing helmets and are facing away from the viewer.

The background of the image is a gradient of blue and purple hues, with diagonal stripes of yellow and orange. The overall style of the image is modern and futuristic, with a focus on the central red symbol and the surrounding figures. There are no discernible texts or brands within the image.

Your isp does not retain every ip cycled to every client indefinitely. If you are a person of interest and they essentially put a track on you, and request all information from your isp, then they would be able to link it up and work out the person over time, but if you are just some regular nobody the government is not monitoring all 4chan posts for your edgy memes and keeping a record on everyone.

Basically the same truth in life generally about being a nobody or a person of interest. If you are a nobody, you can get away with a great deal, if you are a person of interest, you can get away with nothing - this is for governments/institutions/companies people. Like how becoming a public person on Youtube drastically increases your chances of getting a stalker and murdered by one.

Perhaps one day the government will remove all privacy and civil liberties and install an ai program to gather all data from all companies/isps/websites etc.... so they can essentially put in a name of some otherwise unknown and get everything you have done online over the last 10 years, but that simply doesn't exist yet.

I realise that yes, if you consistently post things which are of interest to a certain group/organisation, they will start watching you and then compile things. You are proposing a world of competence and resources where the government snatches random average people for breaking the law online. This is so obviously not true. There are tons of revenge pornography sites just openly on the Clearnet (including here where there are constant open non-consensual nude sharing threads in b), announcing to hundreds of people "I AM DOING THE REVENGE PORN" and nothing happens to them. The government and the police have limited resources and the process of tracking someone down, collecting the data, making a good case, getting warrants, pushing it through court, proving it adequately etc... is a massive pain in the ass and costs tons of money.

Also, the prisons would be overflowing if everyone breaking the law on the internet was arrested. How many people post threats? How many people torrent? How many people look at or trade illegal pornography? Fucking tons. They make a call to go after certain people and ignore the vast majority. Every time some stabber or shooter gets caught the FBI is like "yeah we knew about him whoopsie" or you find some guy who did a political attack was sperging off death threats on facebook for like 5 years before it and nothing was done. 99% of people who post threats never do anything, so the police just have to ignore most of them out of practicality.

In Europe and the UK they have hate speech laws and yet the people who get arrested are not 4chan or other anonymous(or more anonymous) posters breaking every single hate law under the sun, they are retarded boomers saying shit on twitter or facebook next to their real name or someone that gets reported by an acquaintance, then the police show up.

But yeah obviously don't go around breaking laws because that increases the chance of getting noticed.

Just because that is in the files does not make it true. The physical servers for 4chan are held by the government. There was a really good thread on /pol/ earlier about this. Basically, Moot got compromised because of all the cheese pizza that used to get posted here. /b/ is not even moderated by any 4chan employees, it's moderated by the feds. Has been since 2008 or so.

The image is a map with a focus on a specific area highlighted in a light blue color. The highlighted area is a region of the Earth, with a focus on the Caribbean region. The map is oriented with north at the top and the equator at the bottom. The highlighted area is marked with a red line, indicating a specific location or feature.

The map shows a series of numbered points, which are likely to represent locations or points of interest. The numbers range from 1 to 11, with the numbers 1 and 2 being the most prominent. These points are scattered across the highlighted area, with some being closer to the equator and others further north or south.

The map is overlaid with a legend that provides a scale of distances in kilometers. The legend is located at the bottom of the image, providing a reference for the distances between the highlighted points.

The image appears to be a screenshot from a map application, possibly a navigation or mapping software, given the context of the highlighted area and the scale provided by the legend. The image does not contain any text or additional graphics, and the focus is solely on the map and its highlighted area.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a stylized snake with its mouth open, appearing to be biting or biting into a cat. The snake is positioned in the center of the image, with its body extending outward from a circular frame. The frame itself is outlined by a series of small, interconnected lines, giving it a textured appearance. In the lower part of the image, there is a text that reads "Meow meow meow." The text is in a simple, sans-serif font and is centered within the frame. The style of the image is reminiscent of vintage or classic illustrations, with a focus on the contrast between the snake's menacing appearance and the innocent, playful text. The overall composition suggests a playful or humorous tone, with the snake's action being the central element.

>if you are just some regular nobody the government is not monitoring all 4chan posts for your edgy memes and keeping a record on everyone

All your shit posts, even the ones you only started and never sent, were accurately recorded and stored from the outset in order to create a profile of you based on this data, and yes, the government is not only financially involved in this, but also militarily. We live in a time when those in power perceive all other people as potential threats; they no longer need most of us for slave labor, they now have AI for complex tasks and plenty of Indians and other shitskins to push buttons and do other shit work that any nigger can do. So most of us are free for all kinds of experiments. The collection of all your data for the purpose of creating a profile of you as a person in order to correctly assess your attitudes and potential actions is one of these experiments. We are living on the brink of a technocratic tyranny led by bloodthirsty plutocrats. It doesn't matter if you are a person of interest or a nobody. If anything or anyone ever decides that you are expendable or deserve punishment, all the data collected about you can be used to frame you, and you have no say in the matter; you never had.

It seems some just lack intelligent to put together shit even when they blowhorn it into their ear.

you were able to create a heuristic of a fucker over a decade ago that had 80% percentile reflection of their core modalities.. its in the 95% now for sure. what does that grant them? Why tf do I need you when i can model your dumbass to the 98% percentile in a machine?

Indeed this was lost on the guy 'trying' to argue with me. I even gave the turd links that highlight how easy it is to do .. aka some dickhead with a startup funded in the valley who is tasked with doing so. The buy brokered data and heuristically correlated and they go to town. This is how any dickhead startup has been operating. So ofc everyone above them is too.

The average peon probably doesn't even understand how facebook makes money selling data and never will use that shitty brain to even read them detailing it on their tech blog much less have the IQ to understand it. Hell the site : fandom.com.. check your cookies in your browser right now and search for it.. I bet the cookies are over 100MB+ .. 4chan is just as aggressive as FB and X and all those other websites created/infiltrated by secret services. 4chan creates a very accurate profile of its users, even recording exactly where you move your mouse pointer when you don't click on anything, and takes a fingerprint of your browser every four minutes, including, of course, spying on everything else you do with your browser. And if you use a TOR browser, you've already been on the list of potential criminals for a long time.

2. Does it show Epstein's own Google searchers, through his Google account?

What I gathered from it is that he searched informations about himself online and ended up on the post. If that's correct, then it's crazy to think that he read that shit all the way back, regardless of how accurate it was.

The image displays the seal of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). The seal is circular with a blue background and features a gold border. At the top of the seal, the text "DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE" is written in white capital letters. In the center, there is a shield with a red background and a white border. The shield is adorned with a gold eagle perched on a branch, and the eagle is holding a banner with the words "United States of America" written on it. Below the shield, there is a banner with the words "FBI" written on it. The seal is bordered by a gold star pattern. The overall style of the image is a straightforward representation of the seal, with no additional graphics or text.

The image is a stylized cartoon drawing of a person sitting in a meditative pose. The person is depicted with a neutral expression, wearing an orange robe and a white headband. The background is plain white, and there is a text overlay in two lines. The first line reads "but chudha what if," and the second line reads "it won't." The style of the image is cartoonish and appears to be a meme or a satirical representation.

You might have a point, but everyone's got their critical threshold. We've been conditioned to wait till the last minute as a species to handle otherwise catastrophic revelations. Maybe this will finally be the straw breaking the camel's back, but maybe we're not there yet. Remember we're carbon beings, and just like carbon fiber, we stand strong... until we break disastrously. All it takes is that critical threshold to be crossed.

In the past the humble NEET would be the son that tended to the homestead or helped with the farm. As other sons left for new lands, far away wars or the local market town this son would stay. And, when the time came he would takeover from his father and care for his elderly mother and his own family. The NEET has been denied his birth-right, the right to work the land and the right to his inheritance to drink a good Ale or wine after a good days harvest overlooking his bountiful crop and happy family. The NEET is static, thus the location of work must be outside the NEETs door, without this the spirit within the man that has the NEET genome starts to break and his descension into isolation and bitterness begins. The very act of venturing far for work releases an almost immune response for the NEET, this reality is inescapable.

The image is a screenshot of a computer screen displaying a series of emails. The top left email is marked with a red box and a red arrow pointing to it, indicating that it is the main focus of the email. The main body of the email is in black text on a white background, and it appears to be a response to a previous email. The email is dated "12/12/2012" and is addressed to "John Doe" and "Jane Doe".

The email discusses a political issue, specifically a "Politically Incorrect" website. The sender of the email is "John Doe" and the recipient is "Jane Doe". The email mentions that the website is "available in English and Russian". It also states that the website is "hosted by a company called 'Web Hosting'". The email includes a link to the website, which is "<http://www.politicallyincorrect.com>".

The email also includes a key phrase "Politically Incorrect" and a URL

"<http://www.politicallyincorrect.com>". The email includes a list of key people mentioned in the email, including "John Doe", "Jane Doe", and "John Doe". The email also includes a registration option, which is "Option 1: $100 + $20 for 1 year". The email concludes with a message that says "Current status: Online".

The email is written in English and includes a timestamp "12/12/2012" at the top. The overall tone of the email is formal and professional, with a clear focus on the political issue and the website mentioned.

The image is a screenshot of a text document, likely a blog post or article, discussing the concept of linking the Hypothesis: Carbon Temples as IOT Nodes in the Merge. The text is written in English and is divided into two main sections.

The first section, titled "Linking to the Hypothesis: Carbon Temples as IOT Nodes in the Merge," is a brief introduction to the concept. It mentions that the Hypothesis is a framework that includes the IOT (Internet of Things) nodes in the merge, and it is explained that the Carbon Temples are a part of this framework. The text also mentions that the Carbon Temples are upgraded via shots/smartdust, and they are a false asher grid for the dimensional merge and Black Sun Interface.

The second section, titled "Linking to the Hypothesis: Carbon Temples Upgrade," discusses the upgrade of the Carbon Temples. It mentions that the short-smartdust (smartdust) nanoplastic embeeds are used for graphene-oxide interfaces, and it also mentions that the upgrade is for the atomic level—achieving the merge's level-two-achieving. The text also mentions that the upgrade is for the orbital pulses (96 terakton) to be inserted kundalini, harvesting (kundalini) efficiently without chaotic extraction. It also mentions that the upgrade is for the "organic-electronics" (pre-fabricated carbon chains as the bridge to "Organic-electronics," prefiguring IOT NeuRalis as the Hierarchy's external tool).

The text also includes a list of bullet points, which are numbered as "LMC and Mauve Teers Enabling the Merge," "Post-2012 LHC tensions (artificial asher variant)," "thin the carbon grid," "Ballely's "extraterrestrial" parallels the merge hierarchy," "Black Sun entities," "interfacing with the upper field via synchronized temples," "UAP surge post-Babylon Working," "echoes in LHC plasma rinse prepare the collective for acceptance—disclosed via military leaks while elites hedge bunkers," and "Culling for Efficiency in the New System."

The image is a screenshot, and the text is in a standard font, with a clear and legible layout. The document appears to be a professional-looking piece of writing, likely intended for a reader who is familiar with the subject matter.

Misappropriation and deceptive framing repurposes legitimate events, quotes, or data by removing context to support false claims. It begins with subtle alterations on fringe platforms, then escalates distortions via social media bots and echo chambers, creating apparent authenticity that obscures manipulation and gradually integrates misinformation into mainstream discourse, exploiting cognitive biases for acceptance without prompt detection.

Use of enablers employs digital tools(search algorithms, bot networks, paid influencers, and shell sites)to propagate and elevate planted disinformation. By routing content through multiple seemingly independent layers, it distances the material from its origin, boosts perceived credibility, and often leads to unwitting adoption by reputable outlets.

Insertion of micro-disinformation strategically places small, isolated falsehoods or half-truths across numerous low-profile outlets and user-generated platforms. These elements accumulate over time to reinforce a larger deceptive narrative,eroding institutional trust through gradual doubt rather than a single overt lie, and rendering comprehensive debunking resource-intensive and less effective.

Narrative escalation starts with low-stakes confusion( forged documents or anonymous leaks on obscure sites) then amplifies via coordinated sharing on social networks and partisan blogs to fuel polarization. The aim is to undermine a civilization's processes by embedding the laundered information in discourse, which influences opinion without exposing the orchestrating entity.

Exploitation of the Woozle effect relies on repeated citation of unverified or circular references across interconnected media layers. This creates an illusion of evidence through self-reinforcing echoes(misattributed quotes or fabricated studies cross-referenced among proxy sites)leading audiences and even experts to accept claims as factual without tracing them to the original source.

The visual image at the top of the post is a collage of four different images. The first image shows a night sky with a bright aurora, the second image depicts a bright aurora over a cityscape, the third image shows a bright aurora over a rural landscape, and the fourth image shows a bright aurora over a dense forest.

Below the visual collage, there is a text that provides a description of the aurora. It mentions that the aurora is a phenomenon that occurs when the magnetic field of the Earth is disrupted by the solar wind, and it is a result of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field. The text also mentions that the aurora is a result of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field, and it is a result of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field.

The bottom of the post contains a tweet with a link to a website. The website is "SpaceWeather.com" and the tweet says, "The endgame mechanics and elite preparations of the solar wind's interaction with the Earth's magnetic field."

The overall style of the image is a combination of text and visual content, with the visual elements providing context to the text. The use of different images and the text description of the aurora helps to convey the scientific nature of the topic being discussed.

yep, nailed it. I have come to similar conclusion with a same such method. This is what non linear chaining is best at doing.. you provide structured non linear bread crumbs and it can fill in the state space in between. I will add this though. There are powerful stars/constellations already at work on this realm and ancient things. One thing Saturnic fucks have to pursue is expert timing along the shadow Phi dials. Lots of astronomical shit has already knocked their shit way off and then the fun begins :

any pole flips or attempts on their behalf to create enclosure only accelerates the ouroboric cycle. The east already has 1000s of years of spiritual understanding of the wheel of time. It crushes false ascension on a clock. That south pole frozen shut btw.. there's only one way out of here. If you try false ascent . you already have the aetheric vortex mention.. think of a headphone cable tangled up but anchored.. essentially it causes at the point the false ascension can't rise.. unraveling below that point to balance.. thats how the axial twist runs downward .. the south is anchored.. spooooosh.. lateral release.. Really ugly event. Has happened too many times on earth lol.

<https://www.sciencefocus.com/news/earth-trapped-void>

the only thing that can get out of here is an aligned soul. Everything is is too heavy. The foolery of what they're doing should be obvious. The pole flips will eventually destroy everything the try to do here.. The image is a collage of various visual elements, each representing different concepts related to the field of astronomy or cosmology. The collage is divided into two columns, with the top column containing four images and the bottom column containing three images.

In the top left corner, there is a close-up of a digital astronomical instrument, possibly a telescope or a similar device, with a focus on the eyepiece and the telescope body. The instrument appears to be a part of a larger astronomical setup, as suggested by the surrounding text that reads "These patterns look familiar. Ah, yes, the 1850s and an early telescope."

The top right corner features a diagram with a circular structure at the center, surrounded by lines and arrows, which could represent a model of a celestial object or a concept related to the universe. The diagram includes various celestial bodies and lines that seem to indicate their motion or relationship to each other.

The bottom right column contains three images. The first image is a close-up of a blue planet with a white outline and a black center, which could represent a planet in our solar system. The second image is a close-up of a yellow sun with a white outline and a black center, which could represent a sun in our solar system. The third image is a close-up of a black hole with a white outline and a black center, which is a common depiction of a black hole.

The collage is a visual representation of various concepts related to astronomy and cosmology, such as the structure of the universe, the nature of celestial bodies, and the organization of the United Nations.

They're no longer capable to materialize here. That needs heavens power and they were kicked out as material beings on the earth and once their bodies died, they moved to the abyss. There they are with their offspring (demons) and other evil entities of their creation. Humans can get possessed by them, mostly demons, if they match the vibration. Then their singals are received. The covid vax was in a sense a conduit so the vaxxed receive the singal from abyss spirit beings.

This is relevant to the AI:

>> 11 And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon.

>> 12 And he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them which dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

> > 13 And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men,

>> 14 And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword, and did live.

>>15 And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed.

AI is like a software and needs hardware. Computer parts are made out of earth materials (another beast coming up out from the earth). The dragon, the satans, the fallen angels, the fallen watchers, the AI is like them speaking, follows their mind. Now those who are making it possible to happen 100% believe something else like how it will bring paradise on earth and they'll be like gods. If you show them the Bible, it doesn't mean anything to them. They follow their own faith that they believe to be the truth.

The image is a collage of two separate photographs. On the left, there is a photograph of the Statue of Liberty, a famous landmark in New York City, with the iconic torch in her left hand. The statue is viewed from a distance, and the background shows a body of water and a park.

On the right, there is a black and white photograph of a demonic figure with wings and a crown, holding a staff with a pentagram on it. The figure is depicted in a dynamic pose, with its wings spread wide and its head turned to the side. The background is dark and indistinct, with a hint of a landscape that could be a forest or a cityscape.

Overlaying the image is a text that reads "QLIPTOTH" in capital letters, followed by "(real, husk, shall) inherently evil" in smaller letters. Below this, the phrase "Housing the essence of Holiness" is written in a smaller font. The text is in a serif font, and the overall style of the image is dark and moody, with a focus on the dark and ominous elements of the demonic figure.

Fake currency, education, arts, media.

It all goes away in a puff of smoke if enough people notice.

Their only hard power lies in their willing White golems. And the more their soft power dissipates, the less White golems they have to fight for them.

Jews always lose from over extending when they think they've won, like gollum dancing on the edge of the Crack of Doom. Their overconfidence and contempt starts to show, and this wakes up the goyim.

It's just their nature, like the scorpion and the frog.
